Out of the Waste

By W. P. Saphire
International News Service Staff Writer

Cairo, Jan. 28.—In one of the war's most daring desert exploits, a Free French army has appeared suddenly in the middle of the Libyan desert, wrecked an important Italian air base, and created the southern jaw of a gigantic pincers crushing in on Italian Libya, it was learned tonight.

Announcement of the sudden advent of the Free French army "from nowhere" came as British imperial forces closed in on Derna, more than 1,000 miles to the north, and prepared to take Agordat, key to rail and road communications in Eritrea.

Joining in the campaign which another Free French force is aiding before Derna, the Free French army of the south struck into Libya after a swift 300-mile advance from the frontier of French Equatorial Africa.

Aided by Tribesmen

This column, led by a crack African camel corps, and including detachments of wild desert tribesmen, smashed down on the Italian air base at the oasis of Murzuk-Fessan and defeated a numerically superior Italian force, according to information reaching Cairo.

The Italian garriso.. at the oasis withdrew into its fort, leaving the followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle free to destroy the airport, its hangar, workshops, and a number of planes on the ground.

The column then withdrew, but it is believed that the unit will form the nucleus for a greater army which will continue to harass the Italians from South Libya while

British See Nazi 'Trick' in Empress Of Australia S O S

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 28.—British authorities announced tersely today that the big armed liner Empress of Australia is "safe in port," and one source suggested that radio messages reporting her torpedoed and shelled might have been "a German trick."

The messages were received last night by the Miami, Fla., station of Tropical Radio. Beginning at 10:36 p. m. E. S. T., the messages, over a period of about 20 minutes, told of a torpedo striking, of boats being lowered, of "deck awash" and of "being shelled again."

Willkie Sees 4 Air Raids, Forgets Helmet

Praises Calm, Deliberate Courage of Britons, Goes to Commons

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 28.—Minus tin hat, Wendell L. Willkie plunged cheerfully about London today through four air raids, acting as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened and permitting nothing to disturb his strenuous schedule.

In the first Nazi visitation of the day, and the first he had experienced, he was caught without the steel helmet he had brought from the United States—and he likewise succeeded in entering the House of Commons without a gas mask, required equipment.

He had just stepped out of St. Paul's Cathedral when the day's initial warning sounded. He cocked an ear, smiled and said: "Fine! That's just fine!"

He inspected the bomb damage at St. Paul's and called it "outrageous;" talked with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England; conferred with Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer; sat for half an hour in Commons listening to debate; had a half-hour conference with Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Westminister.

It was understood that Willkie's discussion with the Archbishop dealt with the attitude of Britain's Roman Catholics toward the war.

To a question whether American Catholics favored aid to Britain, Willkie replied:

"There is no distinction; there are no differences on the question insofar as racial or religious grounds are concerned."

Summing up his impressions, he declared roundly:

"I cannot speak too highly of the way the British people are conducting themselves in this crisis * * * I am particularly impressed with the calm, deliberate courage of everyone."

Shed a Tear For Meakin, A Modern Job

To the tribulations of Job add the complications which beset Superman and the woes of Sinbad, then forget the whole works and shed a tear into the breakfast coffee for Hardie Meakin.

A prying reporter yesterday caught a preview of Mr. Meakin, who is responsible for all those movie stars making the birthday ball rounds tomorrow night, gradually slipping into pitiable incoherence.

"Ye-e-ow!" he screamed, "now it's a drama critic who says he wants to escort Preston Foster instead of Wayne Morris. A minute ago came the word that Mrs. Roosevelt will start out at 10:30 instead of 10. Carolyn Lee is in the hospital, Robert Young is tied up by a radio rehearsal, a half dozen escorts have the flu.

"Helen, darling, order some more aspirin."

Normally, Meakin is simply the manager of RKO-Keith's Theater. But at this time of year he becomes assistant chairman of the entertainment committee for the President's Birthday Celebration, in charge of movie star maneuvering.

Schedule and Meakin Upset

Helen, it should be explained, is Mrs. Helen Moore, his secretary. Her duties, too, are heavy, though they have been lightened somewhat since the boss began chewing his aspirin like candy.

Yesterday Meakin went to bed at 2 a. m. At 6:30 he was up to go to the station and meet Deanna Durbin. Going to his office, he put the finishing touches to tomorrow night's route card — this shows where Mrs. Roosevelt and every visiting star will be at every minute of the hotel tour—and then he sighed happily.

Whereupon the phone rings and it's word that Mrs. Roosevelt will start out at 10:30 p. m., instead of 10, which means the whole schedule must be scrapped and a new one

3-Way Drive To Cut Auto Toll Begins

Immediate Action Promised as City And Congressional Chiefs Join Forces

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

A triple-barreled broadside was leveled at Washington's traffic difficulties yesterday as Congressional and city leaders swung into action under a "do it now" policy for reducing accidents, injuries and deaths.

Moves on Capitol Hill and at the District Building brought the following developments:

Chairman Schulte of the streets and traffic subcommittee of the House District Committee set 10:30 a. m. tomorrow for a round-table get-together with local officials and public transportation representatives.

The Commissioners proposed use of the highway fund for financing a substantial increase in police personnel and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, agreed to place whatever additional men are obtained on immediate traffic duty.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate District Committee, named Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, former mayor of Cleveland, to head a special traffic investigation subcommittee.

District Officials Invited

In addition, Major Brown appealed to clergymen throughout the District to bring to the attention of their congregations next Sunday a resume of fatal traffic accidents since December 1, with a request that the driving and walking public awaken to the seriousness of the situation. In a special order to police precinct commanders, the chief instructed that a prepared analysis of death crashes be delivered in person to ministers and presidents of civic and business organizations.

Under instructions from Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee, Representative Schulte lost no time in calling a meeting of his group to confer with local authorities and transportation heads.

To the round-table gathering he has invited the Police Court judges, Corporation Counsel Keech, Maj. Brown, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and delegates from the Capital Transit Co., taxicab industry and large trucking concerns.

Would Put All on Traffic Duty

As special guests, he also asked Chairman Mahon of the House appropriations subcommittee, in charge of the 1942 District Supply Bill, and Representative Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska, ranking minority leader on the subcommittee.

It is expected Presiding Judge John P. McMahon will represent the Police Court jurists. Schulte earlier had branded the judges as the "weakest link" in the traffic control setup and indicated yesterday he would seek to strengthen cooperation between the court and enforcement agencies.

At a District Building conference, Engineer Commissioner David Mc-

Britain Will Fall Unless U. S. Sends Help, Morgenthau Says; 4 Lease Bill Changes Accepted

Leaders Agree To One Requiring President to Confer With War Chiefs

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

House Foreign Affairs Democrats agreed yesterday to require the President to consult Army and Navy chiefs before sending arms to Britain under proposed loan powers.

It was the fourth and last Administration concession, as the "all-out" aid measure was streamlined for House action next week.

The change and three others failed to satisfy Republican committee critics of the President's power grant. In a separate conference, minority committeemen demanded at least seven major amendments.

Start Voting Today

The House committee will start voting on amendments today and tomorrow will report a slightly modified measure. The Democratic leadership apparently had the votes to confine committee changes to the following four:

A requirement that the President consult with the Army chief of staff and the chief of Naval operations prior to taking any action under proposed power to lease, lend or otherwise dispose of defense material.

A clear inhibition on use of American vessels as convoys.

A two-year time limit on the bill.

Provision that the President must report to Congress from time to time all operations and transactions under the act.

Speaker Rayburn and House Majority Leader McCormack sat in with Chairman Bloom and his Foreign Affairs Democrats as the four proposed changes were "discussed."

G. O. P. Isn't Satisfied

They followed in the main the line taken at Monday night's bipartisan White House conference when the President assured leaders he had no intention of using powers arbitrarily or reading between the lines of the bill.

Marshall Predicts Germany Will Try Invasion This Spring

Chief of Staff Says Britain Can Win With U. S. Help Despite Air Inferiority

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Gen. George C. Marshall said yesterday that he believed Germany would make an "all out" attempt to invade England in April or May, but that Britain, with American aid, could eventually win the war.

The Army chief of staff expressed these views yesterday, as well-informed sources here declared that Germany has 36,000 fighting planes available for such an assault, and has superiority in air power over Britain, of 4 to 1.

Reliable information indicated that the Nazis have 31 divisions, comprising 1,200 squadrons, of bombers and fighters, which could keep 18,000 planes operating at a time. Back of them is a 100 per cent reserve of planes and pilots, it was said.

Marshall gave his forecast of the progress of the war at a press conference after his return from testifying on the lend-lease bill behind the closed doors of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"Do you believe that Great Britain, with the aid of the United States, can whip Germany?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

"Do you think she could defeat Germany with all American aid short of manpower?"

"I think so," he answered. "That certainly is our hope."

He was then asked whether Britain could win with the aid contemplated in the lend-lease bill, and the Chief of Staff again answered in the affirmative.

His statements recalled the testimony of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh before the House Foreign Affairs Committee last week. Lind-

Presses for Speed

By John B. Oakes

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau solemnly warned the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday that the British "will just have to stop fighting" unless Congress enacts legislation enabling them to obtain further supplies from the United States.

At the first public Senate hearing on the Administration's bill for "all-out" aid to Britain, Secretary Morganthau emphatically backed the British contention that they have reached the end of their dollar resources. Since December, they have virtually ceased to place new orders, he said.

At the same time, the Secretary declared that he had "mentally" written off the World War debts "a long time ago." (Undersecretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell later told the committee that the principal of the foreign war debts to the United States in 1920 was about $10,140,000,000, and the cost of carrying that load since the war was over $6,500,000,000.)

U. S. Must Decide

In placing the responsibility for continued British resistance squarely upon Congress, Morgenthau said:

"The United States must decide if it wants Great Britain, Greece and China to continue to fight. If this bill doesn't pass, they can't continue to fight."

Later, he slightly amended that statement by saying: "Lacking a formula being worked out by Congress by which Great Britain can buy supplies here, I think they'll just have to stop fighting—that's all."

"Britain's continuing to fight depends entirely on what we are going to do?" queried Senator Nye, of North Dakota, one of the leading Republican opponents of the bill.

"Breathing Spell" for U. S.

"Entirely," replied the Secretary.

He based his support of the measure primarily on the argument that further British resistance would "give the United States a breathing spell until we can take care of ourselves."

"I don't know any other way to get the time which the heads of the Army and Navy tell me we need to be strong enough," said the Secretary. "I want to see us strong enough," he declared, "so that nobody can defeat this type of government which we are fortunate enough to live under."

The Secretary—who was on the stand nearly five hours—refused to discuss the general powers that might be exercised by the President under the pending bill. He insisted that he was qualified only to talk about the financial aspects of the measure.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, pointed out that Secretary Hull the previous day in closed session had referred the committee to Secretary Morgen-

Estimate Cut On U. S. Planes For Britain

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Jan. 28.—Production experts who have been engaged for nearly three months on a survey of the automotive industry's ability to turn out 12,000 bombers for Britain, as promised by President Roosevelt during a campaign speech last fall, in addition to 14,000 military airplanes already on order in this country for the Royal Air Force, disclosed today that this program had been whittled down to 3,600 bombers.

They said the original plan had been "altered" to one calling for a "production rate" of 300 twin-engined and four-engined bombers a month by America's automobile manufacturers.

It is planned to build the bombers on a sub-assembly basis in various automobile factories, putting the parts together as finished airplanes in four Government-owned assembly plants to be constructed at Omaha, Kansas City, Tulsa and Fort Worth.

The estimated cost of the program as now conceived, including these plants, was given as "about $1,000,000,000." It was said that at least a year and a half would be required after funds are appropriated for the project to get into full production and a minimum of two years to turn out the 3,600 bombers.

The "automotive plan" for augmented airplane production is the outgrowth of several meetings held last fall by William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management, with Detroit automobile manufacturers to see what they could contribute to the air defense program with their existing machine tools and other facilities.

C. of C. Holds Defense Strike Ban Is Futile

Law Wouldn't Be Effective, It Says; Conciliation Urged

By Hedley Donovan

The United States Chamber of Commerce, calling for renewed efforts for voluntary settlement of labor disputes in defense plants, last night asserted that Federal anti-strike legislation would "prove ineffective and deny fundamental rights to our citizens."

The statement by the manufacturing committee of the chamber, influential spokesmen for the Nation's employers, came amid growing indications that Congress for the present will follow a "watchful waiting" policy on the defense labor front.

Strike on Air Field

In the face of these developments, labor disturbances affecting national defense work increased.

A strike of 400 to 500 men, tying up work on the Army's expansion program at Wright Field, Ohio, was ordered today by John Breidenbach, president of the Dayton Building Trades Council because he said nonunion men were being used on an electrical project at the field.

At Kenosha, Wis., 200 of 2,800 employes of the Simmons Co., making Army cots, struck when negotiations for a wage increase fell through.

After the C. I. O. auto workers union had rejected a proposal that 7,000 strikers return to work in the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. plant at Milwaukee pending further negotiations, the Associated Press reported that another union-company meeting will be held today. The plant has been working on

Girl's Long Trip To See President One Idea of a Joke

Brown-haired Anna Sklepovich, 13-year-old Gary, W. Va., high school girl, thought she had been invited to visit President Roosevelt.

Arriving at the White House after a 400-mile train trip from her home, Anna could hardly contain herself. She had looked forward so much to the day.

White House attendants told her yes, that her letter to President Roosevelt congratulating him on his birthday and telling him that hers also came on January 30, had been received.

Yes, a member of the President's secretariat had answered it and had expressed the President's thanks. But no, she had not been invited to visit the White House.

Anna was unable to understand it. "There was a postscript, in ink," she protested. It said, "We would like to have you come to the White House and meet the President."

Nevertheless, White House police bundled her away to the City Receiving Home, where she spent last night. Attendants got in touch with her mother, who said she had given the child permission to come to Washington. Mrs. Sklepovich was told that her daughter would be sent home today.

Meanwhile, Anna began to recover from her disappointment and thought she had solved the mystery of the invitation. The postscript must have been written by her brother, Steve, as a practical joke. The letter had been opened when she saw it.

British Ace Describes a Day of Battles

(A day of battles in the sky against raiding Nazi planes is described by Britain's No. 1 R. A. F. combat ace in the following interview.)

By John Cashel
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Jan. 28.—Four of Britain's fighter pilots are at the moment flying a nose-to-nose race for first honors as No. 1 "shooter-down" ace.

They are Pilot Officer H. M. Stephen, Squadron Leader R. R. S. Tuck, Squadron Leader A. G. Malan, and Pilot Officer A. G. Lewis; and their official scores are: Stephen, 20 enemy planes shot down; Tuck, 19, Malan and Lewis, 18 each.

Only 26 years old and handsome enough to be mistaken for an American film idol like Robert Taylor, Pilot Officer Stephen—"Steve" to his fellow airmen—holds the record so far and enjoys the added distinction of having shot down five Nazis in a single day. Here is the full story of that exploit in his own words:

"We were up early in the morning to start our day's work. (Stephen belongs to Squadron No. 74 engaged in the defense of London). We hadn't very long to wait before we were told to take off and climb up over the Channel.

"Soon we ran across a squadron of German fighters and in a few seconds the sky was full of both of us. I had a quick bang at one of the enemy, then at another.

"Then I happened to turn up toward the sun and joined two aircraft that were climbing, when I discovered suddenly I was following two Messerschmitt 100 fighters at only a few yards distance; in fact, I was 'formating' on them.

"By the time I realized my mistake, they had turned away from the sun and I opened fire on them. I came up behind one and gave him a burst and he dropped down into the Channel. When I gave the leader a burst he just exploded in mid-air.

"After I returned to the base, I found we hadn't done too badly. The total for the first morning scrap was seven destroyed. All that was between six and seven in the morning and the boys were thinking of breakfast when word came through that things were 'blowing up' again, so they sent coffee and toast out to our hut at the side of the airdrome. As usual, no sooner had the coffee arrived than we had to take off again.

"Off we went on the same old chase. This time I followed my flight commander round and round, but was out of luck, although on returning we found that the squadron leader had accounted for another and so had two other of our pilots.

"Again, we sent for more coffee and toast.

"The score by 9 a. m. was ten Germans destroyed, our losses being three machines hit and needing repair, and one pilot who had bailed out during the first engagement and come down in the sea.

"Then the sky began to cloud over and we were all very pleased as we thought it would probably give us a rest. But orders came through that we were to stand by; that means sitting in our cockpits with oxygen masks, all strapped in, but without our en-

Year After Investigation

D. C. Training School for Girls Likened to Third-Rate Jail

Following a series of visits to District welfare institutions by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last year, efforts were announced to improve the management of five agencies. This is the third of a series of articles in which The Post reports what it found during a recent investigation to discover what improvements had been made.

By James D. Secrest

The National Training School for Girls has been the most troublesome of Washington's correctional institutions and is the most depressing of the lot today.

While some improvements have been effected since Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt last called attention to its "horrors," the aspect of the whole obsolete plant is pretty much that of a third-rate jail for women. This is the more surprising if one considers the amount of money expended on the school in recent years.

More than $100,000 was spent on new construction in 1937 following visits by Mrs. Roosevelt and the late Senator Royal S. Copeland. A new dormitory or "cottage" was built for white girls and a heating plant was installed to serve buildings 25 to 50 years old.

In addition, from 1936 to 1938, $73,298 in PWA money was spent, chiefly on the grounds—but just what was done and where the money went is not apparent. Miss Anne O. Andruss, superintendent, said she had expected another cottage-dormitory and an auditorium to come out of the appropriation and WPA aid.

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, former superintendent, persuaded the wel-

Lamont Denies Industry Wants Appeasement

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 28.—Some 600 business leaders applauded a statement that "businessmen are dead set against appeasement," made in an address today to the Merchants Association of New York.

The speaker was Thomas W. Lamont, vice chariman of the Board of J. P. Morgan and Co., Inc., who said that "whatever amendments may be essential, Congress should formulate speedily and then pass" the British-aid bill.

He said he did not regard "as of prime importance the form of bookkeeping to be adopted, be it lend, lease, or gift or all three."

"In the world crisis confronting us, it would be most unfortunate for us to give the appearance of a country divided against itself," he said; "I do not believe we are so divided."

Lamont said he was a life-long Republican and in the campaign was "strongly against the third term."

"But the campaign is over," he continued. "We are in the midst of a world crisis. As a nation we cannot and must not be divided. I am doing everything in my power to help the present Administration and I will continue to do so. And again I urge national unity in support of the President and of plans for material aid to England and for our defense . . .

"War Rests with Hitler"

"All Americans loathe war and a vast majority of us hope to avoid it . . . at the same time, we are not going to keep out of war just because we say we are going to keep out.

"The issue of war rests not with us, but with Hitler. He makes war when he pleases, how he pleases and against whom he pleases."

Lamont said that "for us deliberately to enter the war now is neither necessary nor desirable."

"Industry knows what war is and will work better without the confusion of a country at war," he declared. "I see no slackers in industry. Everybody is eager to render 100 per cent service."

Turning to the attitude of labor, Lamont said that "from the acquaintance that I have with several of the labor leaders, I shall be surprised if they show any lack of broad-minded cooperation."

He said he was "bothered by some of the current talk to the effect that business favors 'appeasement.'"

"As a businessman speaking to businessmen, I believe I represent the great consensus of our community when I say for myself and my friends and my acquaintances: businessmen are dead set against appeasement.

"Means Surrender"

"Appeasement today means surrender. Appeasement would mean a prostrate England, a new lease on life for Hitler, an America unprepared and threatened by war on two oceans; burdened by prodigious armaments, our national economy completely regimented.

"Our own history and England's in the World War show that this emergency again calls for a civilian coordinator, experienced, competent, prompt in decision, able in this case to study the needs of both Britain and our own country and to determine finally what shall be done, able to short circuit all political pleas, and then to demand results from the most available sources."

He suggested, too, a national coordinator of shipping, as "we have one in national housing," to push construction of naval and cargo vessels.

"I am certain this country is against stripping England of her liquid assets. We all look forward to a postwar world in which Great Britain will be our prosperous friend, not another depressed area."

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was rebuked for desiring a victory for neither side, as Lamont said that under English victory restoration of all the devastated lands of Europe will, with America's cooperation, "come quickly."

Lamont chided Lindbergh also for "ignoring entirely" the "weighty economic factors and moral and spiritual forces," and he criticized those who "cling to blind worship of German mechanical efficiency."

"German Is Being Beaten"

Decrying "all this talk that England after the war will become completely socialistic," he said that "always, even after a necessary period of strict governmental regulation, the English take back their liberties. They always preserve the virtues of private enterprise."

He rebuked those who forecast an Axis victory, declaring:

"I say that Germany can be beaten, she is being beaten, and she will be beaten."

And he asked why Hitler had "deserted" Italy in Libya and Albania, and why he is giving no help to Japan.

After pointing out that Germany, with seven years of preparation "has got nowhere in her assault against an England that had hardly started to prepare until after the tragic fall of France," Lamont declared that "once let England, already master of the sea, gain, with thousands of American planes, mastery of the air, and she will drive Germany from the Channel ports." That, he said, "will be the beginning of the end," for Germany's hold on France will be broken and Frenchmen and the men of the Low Countries will rise against the present conqueror.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 28.—First returns from a Nation-wide survey of public opinion on the President's lend-lease bill show a majority in favor of the measure.

The majority is not a large one—54 per cent—and many sections of the country remain to be heard from as the poll progresses. Today's returns come only from the large urban centers—New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. The vote from the farm areas and small towns, which previous studies have found to be more isolationist, may greatly alter the percentages.

But even the preliminary returns gathered so far clearly indicate that the country is taking an enormous interest in the debate over the bill.

More than 80 per cent of those reached in the survey said they had been following the discussion of the measure and were familiar with the issues involved.

Those who said they had been following the discussion were asked the following question: "Do you think Congress should pass the bill?"

Preliminary returns show the following: "Yes, Congress should pass the bill—54 per cent; no, Congress should not pass the bill—34; undecided—12.

Many of those voters who favor the bill attach important qualifications to their answers; in fact, about one person in every six approving the bill wants some sort of amendment made to it. The chief qualifications are that a time limit should be set on the bill, and that the measure should specifically forbid the President from sending American troops abroad, or any part of the Navy abroad.

Those early returns are only a straw in the wind, but it is already evident that opposition to the bill follows geographical lines. The data from interviewers in Chicago indicates a much higher degree of skepticism over the bill in that area than in the New York and Philadelphia areas. This squares with earlier evidence which has shown that Chicago is the "capital" of isolationist sentiment. Chicago voters reached in the study indicate much more concern than those in other sections over the possibility of a "Roosevelt dictatorship" if the lend-lease bill passes, and the possibility that is will help push the country into war. Roosevelt's alleged "secrecy" and his "way of keeping things from the people" came in for much criticism by Chicagoans reached in the poll.

In Philadelphia and New York the temper of opinion on the bill is very different from that in Chicago.

The majority advance the argument that the "British are fighting our battle," that passage of the lend-lease bill will actually help to keep us out of the war "by sending machines and not men." Much less concern is shown over the dictatorship issue. One Philadelphia interviewer cites the following:

"An unemployed commercial artist, aged 37 in a frayed overcoat stood waiting for a street car on a corner in shoddy South Philadelphia. He kept his hands in his pockets as he spoke, and slowly kicked one heel against the other to warm his feet. 'Everybody says that this will be giving Roosevelt too much power,' said the man. But he has proven good enough to trust before. He never abused the power he's been given."

Even in New York and Philadelphia, however, the people who opposed bill cite the same reasons as those given by people in Chicago—that the bill will help put us into war, and that it will make Roosevelt a dictator.

Returns will be coming in soon from all parts of the country. A complete report will be ready in about a week's time.

Mrs. Willkie Hopes Bombs Fall Where Husband Isn't

By International News Service

New York, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Wendell Willkie's keen interest in the international situation narrowed down to a personal and sentimental one tonight—whether Nazi bombs would continue to fall in sections of London, where her husband wasn't.

She lost interest in Willkie, the diplomat, and became interested in Willkie the man when the defeated presidential candidate experienced his first Nazi air raid.

"I'm fully in accord with giving aid to Britain, but not in giving my husband," Mrs. Willkie said, then quietly added:

"The Germans will probably 'put on a show' while my husband is there. I hope the bombs don't drop where he is.

"My goodness, but I'll be glad when he's back in Lisbon!"

Despite her natural anxiety, the petite and pretty wife of London's famous visitor has her share of curiosity about the sights and a deep concern over her husband's mission.

Speaking frankly and earnestly, she told why he planned the trip and why, despite the danger, she made no objection:

"People all over the country were asking him what the United States should do," she said. "He said to me, 'I don't know what the United States should do. I can't tell them until I see for myself.'

"So he went to see and I hope he can advise those people wisely when he returns."

She'd like to see London herself because she's fully convinced that England must win. Her son, Phillip, was "crazy to go." Mrs. Willkie's merry laugh rang out as she said:

"But the Willkies are among the unemployed now. We can't all go. I hope the world will get straightened out so that all of us can go sometime.

"If England can win, there lies our only hope of peace, I believe. If Germany wins, the only way we could live would be under an iron heel. We don't want that."

She's filling up her days until February 10 when Willkie will return, hoping to speed up time. Today it was a visit to the dentist, luncheon with friends, attending the funeral of Representative Kenneth Simpson—one of the original boosters of her husband for the Presidency—a late afternoon tea and dinner with friends.

What she'd like to be doing is this:

"I would like to be in London because Wendell is there."

Before he departed, Mrs. Willkie kept one thought constantly in the back of her mind. She didn't express it until today, when she said:

"Before Wendell went, I kept hoping that something would come up so that he wouldn't go. But please make it clear that I was not against the purpose of the trip."

Foolproof Tags to Tell All A Soldier Needs to Have Known

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Jan. 28.—New identification tags for American soldiers won't permit a clerical slip of the hand or eye.

They're designed to keep Army records straight by eliminating the possibility of errors by hospital orderlies and nurses in copying names and numbers.

H. C. Osborne, vice president of Addressograph-Multigraph Co., announced today the firm had started making 4,000,000 tags and a device which will reproduce automatically tag data on reports and records.

Each soldier will wear two tags made of a thin, nontarnishing metal embossed with his name, Army number, name and address of a person to be notified in case of accident or death, and the soldier's blood type so that no time need be lost in determining this.

Both tags will be strung around the soldier's neck, and when a record of the data is needed a tag may be inserted in a printing device which resembles a revolver.

Records may be inserted in the same slot with the tag, and a squeeze of the "trigger" imprints the record. The "revolver" is inked by a ribbon similar to that of a typewriter. Nurses, doctors and clerks will carry the device in a "holster" strapped at their sides.

Minimum Pay Set For Uniform Workers

Secretary of Labor Perkins, acting under the Walsh-Healy Act, yesterday set minimum wages ranging from 40 to 60 cents an hour for firms working on Government contracts making uniforms and clothing.

The wages were announced after the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union and a group of New York manufacturers had objected to a proposed 40-cent rate as too low a minimum.

The 60-cent rate is to apply to those in that part of the industry making civilian suits and overcoats and tailored uniforms. A tolerance of 20 per cent is provided for auxiliary workers, who must be paid at least 40 cents.

Committee Refuses Extra Allowance For Gold Braid

The House Military Committee yesterday turned down an Administration plea that Army and Navy aides at the White House be given an extra $300 a year allowance to pay for extra dress uniforms and gold braid.

Members objected that "others" had to buy clothes to attend Presidential receptions and that the aides shouldn't be favored.

"But," objected Representative Kilday (Democrat), of Texas, who favored the bill, "they've got to buy them. They can't do like Congressmen, and rent clothes for the White House parties."

British Say U.S. Could Tighten Blockade 40%

By Drew Middleton,

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 28.—Economic war waged by the United States and Britain through the ministry of economic warfare's "control at source" strategy would speed the end of the war by increasing the efficiency of the blockade 40 per cent," a British economic expert declared today.

Cooperation between the two powers, he said, would sweep French, Swedish, Yugoslav, Russian and Japanese blockade runners from the seas, throttle the Italian air line from South America to Rome and leave the Axis without foreign cash balances, the expert said.

He reported that "talks are going on along these lines in Washington" and appealed for "cooperation as extensive in economic warfare as in the field of armaments to insure victory for democracy."

Would End Russian Ruse

Among the major leaks in the blockade which would be ended, he asserted, were 30,000 tons of United States cotton imported by Russia, in excess of normal imports, between October 15 and December 15, 1940, and 80,000 tons of copper through Japan and Russia in 1940 in excess of normal.

In this connection, Minister of Economic Warfare Hugh Dalton told the House of Commons today that Russia was buying oil, cotton, copper, machinery and wheat from the United States to replace huge consignments being sent from Russia to Germany.

(Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador, said in Washington today that he expected to take up with the State Department the question of exports to Russia, which Britain believes are replacing the Soviet shipments to Germany.

(Secretary of State Hull said the United States Government was seeking to determine to what extent American exports might be reaching certain belligerents through other countries. He appeared to regard Russian purchases of cotton and other products in this country as of small military importance, but indicated the Government was watching the situation closely.)

To Germany via France

One of the most important leaks at present, the economic expert said, are French ships carrying United States and South American produce from Martinique to Marseille and Toulon, in France. "Germany is taking between 70 and 80 per cent of these cargoes," he added.

The British program includes export control, preclusive purchasing, a shipping "club" and financial pressure. These have been added by Dalton to the blacklist and ship stoppage, which have operated since the start of the war but which lost force when the fall of France gave the depleted royal navy "an almost hopeless task" of controlling unaided the oceans of the world.

From South America quantities of copper, mercury, lead, scrap iron, mica, industrial diamonds, wool, cotton and hides were declared to be moving to Japan, with German and Japanese goods in return flooding South America.

Preclusive Purchasing

"We could stop this with American cooperation," the expert said. "The ships move up the east coast of South America, through the Panama Canal and across the Pacific. If we put naval units at Trinidad, they could jam traffic in a few weeks.

"But that is forbidden by the American neutrality zone."

Preclusive purchasing, the second step in the British program, was explained as the British purchase of export surpluses in neutral countries which otherwise sell their surplus to the Axis, or Japan and Russia for transfer to the Axis.

Under the British shipping "club" plan, ships joining the club are given port facilities, such as bunkering, water, clearing papers and credits in any port of the British Empire in return for a guarantee that they will carry no goods for the Axis or for reexport to the Axis. At present 200 United States ships were said to be members of the club.

C. I. O. employes of the Phelps-Dodge Copper Corporation returned to work at Elizabeth, N. J., with a later meeting arranged to determine whether the walkout of 1,400 workers would be resumed. The firm holds Navy contracts for copper tubing and pipe.

Negotiations between C. I. O. union officials and the International Harvester Co. were broken off, with renewed strike threats, at the Chicago tractor plant.

Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said yesterday that the committee is planning "a very thorough examination of the whole field of labor-employer relationships in relation to the defense program." Several bills arming the Federal Government with sweeping powers to prevent strikes in defense plants have been referred to the committee.

"The safety of our country," Sumners said, "may largely depend on our ability to devise a better method than the strike for settling grievances in plants manufacturing defense equipment."

Sumners refused, however, to say whether he considers new legistion essential. He said dates and procedure for the projected committee investigation had not yet been settled.

From other committee members came indications that a majority of the group regards antistrike legislation as "a last resort" and that Congressional hearings might aid both employers and employes in working out their own solution to the defense labor problem.

A spokesman for the labor division of the Defense Commission last night said, "There is no occasion for antistrike legislation."

Taking July 1 as the "real beginning of the defense program," he pointed out that there have been fewer man-hours per month lost through strikes in the last seven months than in 1939, or in 1916, prior to America's entrance into the World War, or in 1917, after America went into the war. He cited Labor Department figures showing 17,812,219 man-days of labor lost through strikes in 1939, against a total of 6,500,000 in 1940.

"This record is really good," he added, "but even so, I believe labor would be smart to agree voluntarily to exhaust every method of mediation and conciliation before resorting to strikes."

The Chamber of Commerce report found "every evidence of an increasing determination on the part of both management and workers to develop voluntary methods for the adjustment of labor difficulties and thus to prevent production stoppage . . . Such voluntary methods will probably prove effective in 99 per cent of the defense industries."

A similar view was expressed yesterday by Representative Guyer (Republican), of Kansas, ranking minority member of the House Judiciary Committee, who said, "The committee feels industry and labor ought to get together themselves. The feeling on the committee is to avoid any legislation involving violent innovations."

Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, another committee member, suggested that "leaders of capital and labor be subpenaed to appear before the committee to aid us in analyzing the causes of production stoppage."

Four Changes In Lease Bill Agreed Upon

posed changes should satisfy "all objections raised to the bill."

But in the office of Representative Fish, of New York, ranking minority committeeman, Republican members agreed to seek more far-reaching changes.

The minority asked a one-year limitation instead of two, a $2,000,000,000 top limit on aid obligations and stipulation that convoys not be used "without the consent of Congress."

Other amendments, which Fish said would be offered by various Republican members of the committee, included:

A prohibition on the President giving away any part of the Navy without the consent of Congress.

A requirement that the British give security for materials and equipment lent or leased to them until their funds are exhausted.

A limitation on the President's power to disregard existing statutes in administering the law.

A prohibition on the building, repair or outfitting of belligerent warships of any nation in either Government or private shipyards within the United tSates.

In addition to these amendments, Fish said he will offer a complete substitute for the bill on a Republican motion to recommit.

This would vest power in the Federal Loan Administrator (Jesse Jones) to lend, lease or otherwise dispose of not more than $2,000,000,000 to the British Government for purchase of arms and supplies in the United States. Money would be lent on "the best security obtainable," repayment could be made in commodities, and when British funds were exhausted credit grants could be made without collateral.

Representative Foster Stearns, of New Hampshire, in general sympathy with the Administration's foreign policy, reserved the right not to go along with Republican colleagues on all amendments.

Fish said Republicans were equally anxious with Democrats to expedite action, that they would tolerate no delay and that as a party they stood for aiding Britain providing "blank check" powers weren't given the President.

While the minority was agreed in substance on the seven Fish amendments, several Republican committeemen will sponsor amendments of their own. Fish said they also will offer the labor amendments proposed by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

Two of the Green amendments propose:

Modification of powers to commandeer production so they could not impair the applicability of any labor statutes.

Provision for reciprocity for aid furnished by assuring an outlet for our goods in a peacetime world market and full employment to workers when peace comes.

Immediately following today' committee meeting, House Minority Leader Martin will confer with Republican committeemen. Fish said he will urge a general House Republican conference on the bill late Thursday.

Under Speaker Rayburn's guidance, a green light has been set to speed the measure into the House and out of it by the end of next week. Plans call for a Foreign Affairs Committee report on the bill tomorrow night. Friday morning the House Rules committee will consider a rule, expected to provide for three days of general House debate and two more days on amendments. Under that arrangement the bill would be called up in the House Monday and completed by next Friday.

Marshall Predicts Spring Invasion

bergh said that Britain, even with full military assistance from the United States, could not successfully invade continental Europe without the "miracle" of an internal collapse in Germany.

Position Critical, He Says

The chief of staff was asked if he considered England's position critical.

"I think it's a serious situation," he answered. "It is one of the most critical periods in the history of the world."

Without American aid, he declared, Britain's situation would be "extremely hazardous."

Asked if there was any way to step up that aid in time for the spring blitzkrieg, Marshall said he hoped we could expand production. The Army has a need for all modern equipment it has on hand, and was not planning to turn over any more to the British, he added.

"We have interests we have to balance against theirs," he explained.

Asked if the American air force were now strong enough to defend the United States, Gen. Marshall replied that it could hold off any enemy that "we can visualize at the present time under conditions now existing" but that it should be augmented as fast as possible.

"Supposing Britain is defeated within the next month or so," a reporter asked.

"It would be insufficient," he replied.

Morgenthau Urges Quick British Aid

thau on this point. Both Senators La Follette and Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, wanted to know who from the Administration would "come up here to discuss the bill."

"Senator Barkley has offered to discuss it at any time," replied Morgenthau, nodding at the Majority Leader.

"No use holding hearings on Barkley," Clark retorted as committee members, audience and Barkley joined in the laughter. "We can hear him all the time—and I'll take care of him in the Senate."

Plants Have Capacity

Secretary Morgenthau revealed that unless some legislation is passed to permit the British to continue to place orders despite lack of cash, certain American airplane manufacturers will have unusued capacity on their hands, beginning in April.

William S. Knudsen, director of OPM, "only yesterday phoned me to ask if it couldn't be arranged so that the British might place an order for 2,000 planes," the Secretary said.

"The British treasury is not in any way hysterical," said the witness. "They simply say: 'We have reached the limit of our dollar resources. We want to place additional orders, but not unless we can pay for them.'"

Running Out of Dollars

"It is perfectly obvious," Secretary Morgenthau said in an even voice, "that they are running out of dollar exchange. Within the next 12 months, they will have to sell every share of American stock and every piece of real property in America owned by Englishmen to pay for the orders already placed."

Senator Nye asked if Sir Frederick Phillips, British Treasury representative here, had ever "suggested the tansfer of British possessions or islands to the United States."

"Not to me," replied the Secretary.

Revealing that French assets frozen in this country amount to $1,593,000,000, Secretary Morgenthau asserted that the collapse of France last summer was a "vital factor" in the rapid drain of British funds in the United States. The British took over all French contracts in the United States, with the result that "they began to lose gold and dollar assets twice as fast after June as before." British assets of this type dropped more than $2,250,000,000 during the first 16 months of the war, he said.

This war is now costing the British government every day more than 12,000,000 pounds sterling," the Secretary said in a brief prepared statement he read to the committee. This expenditure is "approximately 60 per cent of the national income," he said, and is "steadily mounting." The British are raising about 40 per cent of the cost of the war through taxation, he declared.

Replying to Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, Morgenthau said the United States had not aided Great Britain to the extent of "one dollar." All materials the British have received were paid for in "hard cash," he said.

American manufacturers are making "good profits" out of this arms trade, but not extraordinary ones, the Secretary commented.

He said he was unable to estimate the expenditure contemplated by the bill; but added that he thought the projected increase of the national debt limit to $65,000,000,000 (from the present $49,000,000,000 level) would take care of all Federal expenses for the coming fiscal year.

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, declared at one point in the hearing that "I'm in favor of aiding Britain to the fullest extent, even if it provokes a challenge from Germany, and I favor accepting the challenge as soon as it's made."

But Secretary Morgenthau said: "It's my most fervent prayer that we stay at peace."

Secretary of War Stimson will testify today.

Check for Million Must Have Been Right, Girl Felt

By the Associated Press

Treasury officials said yesterday that a girl examiner permitted a $1,000,000 error in a Government check to get past her because "she didn't dream such a large error was possible."

Andrew Paananen, Carver, Mass., cranberry grower, received the check in the amount of $1,000,015.25 last week as an AAA payment. After startling officials at his local bank with the check, the amused Paananen sent it back to the Treasury.

Officials said the error arose, because someone operating an electric check-writing machine accidentally touched the $1,000,000 figure before writing the $15.12 which Paananen was due to receive.

Another girl whose specific job was to examine the checks for errors noticed the check and thought it "unusual," but assumed because of the check's size that it must be right.

Hitler to Mark Rise Tomorrow In Broadcast

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Jan. 28.—National Socialist Germany will observe the eighth anniversary of the party's accession to power Thursday when, it was learned, an important broadcast will be made by Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

It will be the Fuehrer's first formal pronouncement on the war situation since his New Year's messages to the nation and the defense forces in which he predicted that 1941 would crown German arms with victory.

A year ago Hitler promised Britain and France that they would get the fight they were asking for. The promise was made good so far as France was concerned and this week's speech, it may be assumed, will concern itself with Britain alone.

Meanwhile, developments in other parts of Europe have taken on an accelerated movement. Herr Otto Abetz, German Ambassador, is carrying back to Vichy the Fuehrer's reply to a personal letter from Marshal Petain.

Marshal Petain's letter, it is learned, sought to explain events which precipitated the ousting of Pierre Laval and is believed to have contained the assurance that the Franco-German cooperation championed by the deposed vice premier would constitute the further aim of Vichy.

That guarantee, however, did not, according to the best information, include an unequivocal pledge for the abandonment of neutrality to England, one of the cardinal conditions imposed by Hitler as a fundamental prerequisite to reorientation of Franco-German relations.

Whether the Vichy government without Laval is prepared to yield on this point must await Petain's reaction to Herr Hitler's letter.

This is not the only point on which relations between the two governments require clarification, and it is not unreasonable to assume that Hitler will deal with the subject Thursday.

The coming speech brings speculation about whether Hitler will answer President Roosevelt's "fireside chat" and message to Congress. Now that the "Help England" program is taking on definite contours, it may be also expected that the Fuehrer will devote a substantial portion of his speech to that.

The American policy toward Europe in general as indicated by the activities of Harry L. Hopkins and Wendell L. Willkie, as the President's "unofficial observers" and Col. William J. Donovan's Balkan itinerary, may also come within the purview of the Fuehrer's comments.

'Last Round Won't Be Easy,' Raeder Says

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Jan. 28.—A combination of blockade by sea and bombing attacks by air was described by Admiral Erich Raeder, commander in chief of the German Navy, as the method by which Britain would be reduced "until the hour of decision," which would end the war victoriously for Germany.

For the postwar years Admiral Raeder promised his listeners—shipyard workers from all shipyards under contract with the German navy—a fleet "developed and enlarged to a size befitting a world power" and "large overseas naval bases, where there will be plenty of work of all kinds."

Admiral Raeder spoke at the Deschimag shipyards in Bremen.

Reviewing operations of the first year of war, Raeder said that "6,300,000 tons of enemy merchant shipping have been sunk since the beginning of the war by our naval forces. A good two-thirds of this was sunk by submarines. The destruction of enemy warship tonnage is likewise significant. The enemy has himself admitted to losing 450,000 tons and we know how much he is keeping secret."

"The last round of the fight against England will not be easy," Admiral Raeder stated. "We must subdue England's sea power. We will deliver our blows with all the force at our disposal and will constantly harass the enemy.

"We do not by any means underestimate him and we know that he is tough. He is fighting for his life and will naturally try to avoid his fate with all possible means. But he will not prevail in this struggle because we are certain we are the better men.

British supplies are the target of our naval forces. We will cut them off in a tough and merciless struggle and thereby deprive the enemy of his life's strength.

"At the same time, the air force will complete the destruction of more important objectives on the island itself. And this common battle will be continued until the hour of decision comes. Britain wanted war, Germany will end it victoriously."

U. S. Protests Oil Line Seizure By Rumania

The United States Government has protested against Rumania's expropriation of a $1,000,000 pipeline owned by Romano-Americana, Inc., a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, it was learned last night.

Usually reliable quarters said Franklin Mott Gunther, U. S. Minister at Bucharest, had informed the Rumanian foreign office the 25-year, 3 per cent bonds Rumania offered for the pipe-line fell short of the "prompt, just and adequate" compensation this Government has demanded for its nationals wherever their property abroad is seized.

Gunther is said to have proposed, on Secretary of Hull's instructions, that Rumania either return the pipe-line to its owners or negotiate a settlement which will assure their being justly compensated within a reasonable time.

London Night Quiet After 4 Day Raids

By International News Service

London (Wednesday), Jan. 29. German planes and "Big Berthas" subsided into inactivity today after their first action in more than a week.

No air raid alerts were sounded anywhere in Britain up to the early hours of the morning.

Last evening, however, Nazi raiders were reported in the vicinity of a west England town (possibly Bristol) and big German guns threw shells across the fog-shrouded straits of Dover.

Considerale damage and some casualties were caused in London residential districts during the day Tuesday, but no night alarm was sounded for the eighth successive night.

Four-day raid alarms were sounded in the London area after a week's absence and caused Britons to wonder whether the resumption of aerial warfare did not herald the long-dreaded invasion attempt.

As German raiders swept inland from the Channel, violent antiaircraft fire rocked the capital. The raids, however, were largely of a "nuisance" nature, although a few incendiary and high-explosive bombs fell on the city.

In one London area traffic was halted while fire wardens and civilians quickly extinguished the fires with sand.

A single Nazi plane dropped a stick of high explosive on a London residential district, killing a pedestrian and wrecking several houses.

In the morning German craft dropped several bombs in the eastern counties, but caused little damage and no casualties, according to the air ministry. In the afternoon other planes bombed southeast England, where some casualties were caused, but no important damage.

Truce Violated By French, Thai Charges

By the Associated Press

Bangkok, Thailand, Jan. 28.—Heavy fighting flared anew along the border between Thailand and French Indo-China today, the Thai high command announced, as a result of what it charged were continued "warlike operations" by the French after the cease-firing deadline stipulated in a Japanese-arranged truce.

For three hours after the hostilities were to have stopped at 10 a. m. (11 p. m. Monday, Eastern Standard Time), the high command asserted, the French kept up their violation of the truce. Then, it said, Thai troops began fighting again "in retaliation."

(Advices from Saigon, French Indo-China, said that the hostilities were halted on schedule and that the negotiations would begin under Japanese auspices tomorrow, aboard one of two Japanese cruisers which steamed toward that Indo-Chinese port this afternoon from Cap Saint Jacques.

Besides arranging terms of the armistice, it was said the negotiators would make an effort to reconcile the territorial dispute which led to the undeclared war.)

Many prisoners were taken by Thai forces today and the French were repulsed everywhere, the high command said. It added that Japan had been informed of the turn of events.

Friends Regard Beaverbrook As Next Prime Minister

This is the third and last of the series of intimate stories on England's "magic" man, Lord Beaverbrook.

By Hugh Wagnon
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Jan. 28. — Lord Beaverbrook the next Prime Minister of England?

Turn back the years . . .

On a hot summer's night in 1914, five men sat around a bridge table in Admiralty House. A messenger brought in a dispatch box, and all listened intently as Winston Churchill read the fateful news:

"Germany has declared war against Russia!"

Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, quickly passed his bridge hand to Max Aiken, who had been watching the game, and went out and ordered mobilization of the Brith fleet.

Today, Max Aiken is Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production and dynamic publisher of the London Express . . . and friends say he is ready now to take Churchill's place as prime minister if for any reason Britain's war leader should drop out of the picture.

At the same time, they are quick to add:

"Beaverbrook has the greatest admiration for Churchill and is content to serve."

While there is no question of Beaverbrook's loyalty to his old friend Churchill, there is equally no question of his preparedness for the empire's biggest job if the call should come.

IN WARTIME, the premier successor usually comes from his own cabinet—often his right hand. The late Neville Chamberlain, before his retirement as prime minister, came to rely on Churchill as Churchill today relies on Beaverbrook.

Moreover, Beaverbrok's job as minister of aircraft production parallels Lloyd George World War job as minister of munitions, which proved a stepping stone to supreme command for the white-maned little Welshman.

WITH THE Conservative Party's majority in Parliament frozen by the war, Beaverbrook's chances are possibly better even than those of Ernest Bevin, the forceful minister of labor who has been widely discussed as a leading possibility.

Beaverbrook, although a Tory, has a strong appeal for workingmen, who remember he began as a newsboy.

Churchill expressed his views when he told the House of Commons January 22 that "aircraft production is the key to our survival and victory" and described Beaverbrook as "a man of altogether exceptional force and genius, who is at his very best when things are at their very worst."

Beaverbrook has always made it plain that he prefers the man in overalls to the man in a tophat, and he boasts that while he has been driving industry to the utmost "there has never been the slightest labor trouble" in aircraft factories.

The people respond tremendously to Beaverbrook's magnetic appeal. He called upon the women of Britain for their aluminum:

"We will turn your pots and pans into spitfires and hurricanes . . . The need is instant. The call is urgent. Our expectations are high."

And tons of aluminum pured in.

WHEN NEWSAGENTS started a fund to buy fighter planes, Beaverbrook contributed £100 (about $400) "as a former newsagent." Thousands of other gifts were attracted by Beaverbrook's wily publicity.

Highly successful as minister of information in the 1914-18 World War, Beverbrook shows he knows the personal value of publicity, saving the juciest news items from the ministry for himself and matter-of-factly taking credit for the work he has done.

So the headlines read "Beaverbrook Announces 26,000 Planes From America Plan." In the same way, they used to read "Churchill says five new battleships to be added to the fleet."

Old friends like Churchill and former Canadian Premier R. B. Bennett, who as a struggling young lawyer gave Beaverbrook a job as clerk and now advises him on American affairs, call him Max. His staff generally refers to him as "The Little Man."

HERE IS a character sketch by an intimate friend:

"He lives in a black and white world. He sees no light and shade, no intermediate hues. A thing is right or wrong. An act is to be done or it is not to be done. He does not cumber his mind with fine points, but takes a decision and drives it along until things fall into place.

"His instincts are always combative and in the slightest conversation he will rise to any fly or at any time start a game of argumentative poker.

"He has an affinity with the fellow who does not wear a tophat. He never shows an atom of respect to anyone and rarely troubles to show disrespect.

"His formula of dismissal for dukes or messenger boys is the same 'goodby to you.'"

Rumania Tries Arms Maker in Guard Revolt

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Jan. 28.—The Rumanian government put M. Malaxa, wealthy munitions manufacturer, on trial today on charges that he furnished the tanks, arms and munitions which the Iron Guard used in its abortive revolution last week.

Premier Antonescu directed his new military government meanwhile to do whatever was necessary to guarantee order.

Government prosecutors said Malaxa, detained in the police barracks, permitted the rebels to convert his stone mansion into a citadel during the revolt. The home virtually was wrecked by artillery before the rebels capitulated.

Iron Guard associates of former Vice Premier Sima, chief of the Iron Guard, insisted that he was in flight, presumably by plane, while official circles reiterated that he was under arrest. Communist documents were reported found in his home.

Soldiers who patrolled the streets were instructed to shoot anyone with a machine-gun on sight.

Police said the Iron Guard mayor of one provincial town confessed that he and his wife killed and robbed 80 persons during the revolt.

Army headquarters announced nearly 6,000 weapons, including 666 machine-guns, had been confiscated.

The government ordered all Rumanian passports canceled to prevent flight of the rebel leaders, and agents were sent to all provincial towns to see that the "best citizens" took municipal posts.

The tomb of Armand Calinescu, arch enemy of the Iron Guard, who was blamed for the execution of thousands of its members in 1939, was dynamited by rebels during last week's revolt, it was disclosed.

The Bucharest radio tonight announced restrictions on carrying weapons would be eased for anyone previously threatened by the Iron Guard.

Italian Attacks Hurled Back, Greeks Report

By the Associated Press

Athens (Wednesday), Jan. 29.—Greek mountain troops shattered two fresh Italian counterattacks north of Klisura yesterday and inflicted "heavy losses" on the Fascists, a Greek government spokesman said early today.

"Our shock troops pushed the enemy from its defense positions and took another 70 prisoners including a captain and considerable war material," he said.

"The day before the Italians used tanks in one of their counterattacks but lost three of them on the spot and a fourth was in flames as it turned and sped back to the rear. In the last few days we have taken at least 100 prisoners, including an Alpini major."

Two Italians Shot Down

The Greek high command reported two Italian planes were shot down.

One person was killed and ten wounded in a Salonika military hospital attacked by Italian aircraft, the ministry of home security reported.

The British air force announced "several direct hits" in a bombing raid Monday on military buildings and stores at the Italian base of Elbasani in central Albania while Greek troops fought the counter-attacking Italians.

"Considerable damage was caused" at Elbasani, Fascist base in central Albania, the R. A. F. said, "and the target was enveloped in smoke when the raiders left."

Supported by tanks and using mortars and hand grenades, the Italians fought fiercely in the Klisura counterattack, an army communique said, before they fell back. Prisoners and material were reported taken by the Greeks.

Heavy Fighting in North

Bitolj, Yugoslavia, Jan. 28 (AP).—Italian forces have been attacking heavily since early morning along the northern Albania front from the region of the Shkumbin River to Lake Ochrida, border dispatches reported.

Fascist artillery was said to be pounding key Greek positions but the Greeks were declared nevertheless to be holding their ground and inflicting heavy losses.

The Greeks claim to have captured 150 men and two officers last night in one fighting sector.

The city of Phlorina is said to have suffered serious damage in Italian aerial bombings, the railway station and military depots having been among structures hit. Villages to the south of Phlorina, where the Greeks have munitions dumps and food stores, also were bombed.

British and Greek air forces retaliated and several planes were seen to crash in the resulting fierce air battle.

Belgrade to Probe Story of Italian Riots, Swiss Hear

Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 28.—Winston Burdett, Belgrade representative of the Columba Broadcasting System, has had his permission to broadcast to the United States from Yugoslavia suspended pending investigation into his story Sunday that there were serious riots in Milan and Turin, according to information in Yugoslav diplomatic quarters reaching here tonight.

The Yugoslav source said his government regarded the incident as particularly serious owing to the vigorous protest lodged by the Italian legation in Belgrade.

It is understood that a hearing will be held there tomorrow at the Press Ministry, which will be attended by an American and Italian legation representative. It was said that the press minister will decide, following this hearing whether Burdett would be allowed to work further in Yugoslavia.

Peace Move Reported

Vichy, Jan. 28 (INS).—Reports were heard tonight, following the return of Cardinal Gerlier from Rome, that Pope Pius intends to call a conference of all cardinals in order to discuss prospects of a peace move.

U. S. Reports of Rioting Booed At Fascist Demonstrations

By Reynolds Packard
United Press Staff Writer

Rome, Jan. 28.—Fascist mass demonstrations marked by anti-American booing and shouts of "Viva Hitler!" were staged in Italy's northern cities of Milan, Turin and Verona today as two more high cabinet ministers followed Count Galeazzo Ciano to the fighting fronts.

The demonstrations in the three cities, directed by Fascist party leaders, were organized as an answer to reports abroad of rioting there between Italians and German troops.

In southern Italy, the high command admitted, British planes last night bombed the port of Naples and Catania Airdrome, on the Island of Sicily, where Germany has concentrated dive-bombers for attacks on the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Libyan Success Claimed

In Libya, the high command said, Italian forces "repulsed" a British column driving upon Derna, taking prisoners. On the far southern Kenya front, Italian native Dubat troops surprised a British outpost and "inflicted considerable losses in men and materials."

Italian successes also were reported in Albania, where "we inflicted heavy losses" on the Greeks and captured prisoners and weapons, the high command added.

An announcement today said that the minister of national education, Giuseppe Bottai, and minister of public works, Giuseppe Gorla, both officers of the Alpine Corps, had left for service at the front.

Bottai and Gorla are the fifth and sixth cabinet ministers to leave for the fighting fronts in recent days.

At today's mass demonstration in Milan at least 25,000 Fascist jammed the San Sepulcro where, in front of the Fascist headquarters, they shouted:

"Viva Axis, viva Mussolini, viva Hitler!"

American Press Booed

There were catcalls and boos when Fascists called out, "Where are the American correspondents covering this demonstration?"

In Turin, 15,000 persons gathered before the Fascist headquarters in the Piazza Carignano, cheering Mussolini and Hitler, after which Pietro Gazotti, federal secretary of the party, read from a balcony a statement denouncing American reports of the rioting. A similar demonstration occurred in Verona.

In connection with the departure of the six cabinet ministers for service at the front, it was announced that the move is in line with Fascist party policy of giving younger key men in the government actual war experience.

U. S. Accused of Azores Designs

Rome, Jan. 28 (AP).—Virginio Gayda, the highly placed Fascist editor, accused the United States today of planning to establish air and naval bases in the Portuguese-owned Azores as a threat to Europe.

He said America had been showing a suspicious interest in the islands, coveting them as part of her "vast, militaristic, imperial offensive" plan for "permanent armed vigilance over the continent of Europe."

Murray Offers Plan to Unify Steel Making

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

A comprehensive plan to organize the entire iron, steel and tin producing industry into a single great production unit, operating under a "top scheduling clerk," was proposed yesterday by Philip Murray, C. I. O. president and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Success of the defense program depends on the plan, Murray declared. He warned of "serious shortages" of steel growing out of "the disorganized state of the industry," "cross purpose" among individual steel companies and the "helter-skelter fashion" in which defense steel and armament contracts have been distributed.

Labor to Have Equal Voice

The plan, resulting from a "comprehensive survey" made by the S. W. O. C. reported that the country's steel industry is falling behind attainable production by almost 6,000,000 net tons, despite the fact that the industry is reported as operating at 99 per cent of ingot capacity.

The "Murray Plan," a companion-piece to the C. I. O.'s "Reuther Plan" for increased airplane production in automobile plants, calls for the creation by President Roosevelt of an "Industry Council" consisting of equal numbers of management and S. W. O. C. representatives. Under the "top scheduling clerk" to be appointed, the industry would be integrated for production as if it were a single unit, and contracts would be placed in such a manner as to keep steel melting and finishing facilities operating with "the greatest possible productive efficiency."

"The defense machinery now existing in the Nation's Capital is incapable of achieving this vital industry-wide coordination," Murray stated.

In an implied condemnation of the present Defense Commission's method of placing contracts, the report declared that "over-taxed and idle facilities (similar or complementary) are found side by side, but in different companies, and due primarily to this illogical distribution of orders and lack of coordination."

Submitted to President

Murray announced that the plan had been submitted to President Roosevelt and Vice President Wallace, to members of the Cabinet and to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, directors general of the Office of Production Management.

The steel industry, as presently operated will be "jammed" Murray warned, when auto requirements are ordered next fall. Two "disastrous" results will follow, he added. First, "unemployed auto workers will be walking the streets next winter," because thier plants will be without adequate steel supplies, and second, prices of automobiles will be bid up to high points by buyers anxious for speedy deliveries.

Charging that there has been "a helter-skelter" distribution of contracts "to especially large firms," Murray pointed to one steel concern which "has such a disproportionate amount of the steel armaments contracts that it presents a bottleneck to the defense program all by itself."

Big Firms Overloaded

"Large steel firms are overloaded with orders, backlogs of orders are running from two to four months, while smaller steel firms are operating their open hearth departments as little as 45 per cent of capacity," Murray stated.

The report's findings, documented in apendices in which individual steel companies were listed under code numbers, are as follows:

Although open-hearth and electric steel facilities are operating at 99 per cent of capacity, there were 1,965,800 net tons of Bessemer converter capacity idle as of January 20, 1941. More than 50 per cent of capacity was unused in 1940. An additional 1,000,000 tons could be produced through expansion of the "flame-control process" developed by Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation. (This company recently announced that it was allowing the process to be used widely by other producers.)

14 Firms Have Idle Plants

Operating facilities of 14 firms, mostly smaller independent companies, which are completely idle at present, could be brought into production to yield 2,454,395 net tons.

An additional 500,000 tons of new billet steel could be released if 16 small producers brought their finishing facilities to capacity operation.

A total of 5,920,195 net tons of steel melting and finishing capacity is now idle, but could be brought into production this year under traditional "business as usual" methods.

Points to "Ghost Towns"

Murray said total employment of steel workers and salaried employes was 26,106 below the peak of 603,106 in August, 1937.

Present expansion plans, the report found, "will be unfruitful" because the new facilities will not be in production until "well into next year."

The report was critical of proposed expansion plans which "are mostly for steel towns that neither have the necessary working force or housing facilities for an increased industrial force, while more than a score of steel ghost towns have industrial buildings to house new steel facilities, a well-rounded working force to man such facilities, and adequate housing to care for the working force."

Cuban Reported Jailed For Urging Statehood

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 28 (AP).—The arrest of a prominent Cuban lawyer for allegedly having expressed himself in favor of admitting Cuba as a State of the United States was ordered today by Minister of Interior Rodriguez Pintado.

The minister said Rafael Calzadilla, president of the Bar Association of Guanabacoa, had cabled the President of the United States Senate the association's approval of Senator William D. Smather's resolution proposing Cuban admission to the Union.

Harmony With Nazis Unlikely, Letter From France Declares

D. C. Woman Receives News From Cousins, One a War Prisoner

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

What happens to a French general in a German prison camp?

What are the thoughts of his brother, who also fought the invaders, trying to carry on as a civilian under German occupation?

At least part of the answers is provided in letters shown to The Post yesterday by Mrs. Sophie Radford de Meissner, letters which were nearly three months arriving here after leaving the typewriters of her two second cousins.

Mrs. de Meissner, an 86-year-old bundle of nervous energy and mental alertness, is the widow of a Russian diplomat who took her as his bride with Mrs. Rutherford Hayes and Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman among the witnesses.

She is the daughter of Rear Admiral William Radford, post-Civil War commandant of Washington Navy Yard and who, as a 16-year-old midshipman, was aboard the ship which returned the Marquis Lafayette to France in 1825.

No Harmony

But of more immediate interest, she is the cousin of those two French brothers, one an outright captive and the other technically free, but considerably restricted. It was the latter who wrote "my chere tante," enclosing a letter he had received from his brother, erstwhile aviation commander of the Eighth French Army.

The "free man" wrote, in part:

"At the first moment when the German armies settled themselves in France without striking a blow it might have been supposed that many of the French people would have accepted this novel situation and that some terms of mutual understanding between the two races might have been reached. The experiment was made.

"I don't know what may be tomorrow but I know that the true French people could never live in harmony with a race who have determined upon pillage as their one means of livelihood. They have forged their cannon but as that does not feed them they are seeking nourishment holding a knife between their teeth."

He predicts American entry into the war and the ensuing "sledge hammer stroke upon the bandits will be terrible."

MRS. DE MEISSNER

The writer, a former reserve captain in the French army, winds up on a humorous note. He told Mrs. de Meissner how his father, who is 86, refused to surrender his rifle to the German soldiers because he couldn't bear to give up hunting.

"He had 10 pieces of game in his bag when I saw him last week," the son wrote.

The enclosed letter, originating as it did in a prison camp, was less critical of the enemy. It reviews the circumstances of the general's capture, tells how all outside news is kept from the camp prisoners.

"We must keep up our courage," he told his brother.

Both letters were tyewritten in French. Mrs. de Meissner translated them into English on her nineteenth century typewriter which none but she can operate. She didn't want to divulge her cousins' names because that might do them harm. She lives at 3840 Sixteenth street northwest.

British Ace TellsHow They Trump Hitler

gines running.

"Soon we were told to proceed to a convoy and patrol it.

"The squadron was just settling down to a dull routine job when all of a sudden there was the most appalling noise on our radio: Three people at once had seen about 40 bombers in groups of three, spread over about a mile.

"That Cheered Us Up"

"That cheered us up a lot—and the pilots were telling each other on the radio what they were going to do with this or that particular bomber when they got near it.

"One of the flight commanders thought that the enemy had already attacked the convoy and were on the way back and he gave chase, only to discover they were coming towards him, and before he could slow up he had gone right through the center of them with the other two members of his section, blazing away.

"This shook the German pilots so much that they immediately broke formation, which was just what we wanted as we could deal with them better individually. The melee started—what a sight! And what a scrap!

"The German machines were going round in steep turns. Imagine them, 40 light bombers—very manouverable and fast—the famous Messerschmitt Jaguar 110 fighter-bombers. They started chasing us and we were chasing them, in and out of the clouds.

Form Defensive Circle

"This sort of game had been going on for a few minutes when the German fighter-bombers started forming one of their famous defensive circles. By this time there were several Germans lying in the water, all smashed up, with their crews swimming around.

"Our spitfires were now diving in and out of the circle and never letting them complete it. I got my sights into one bomber and gave him a long burst and one of my tracer bullets must have hit his petrol tank, as in a few seconds he was a mass of flames and down he went into the sea.

"I climbed up to the cloud base again when another bomber made a dart at me, and went past so close that I was sure neither he nor I could get out of each other's way in time. My guardian angel must have been watching over me, and somehow we missed each other.

"Then I was able to turn on his tail and a short burst silenced his rear gunner. Finally, as I closed my range, his machine rolled over and fell upside down.

"I popped back into the clouds again and so back to base.

"On checking up figures we found that between us we had destroyed another ten, bringing the total up to 20 enemy aircraft destroyed.

After Lunch, Up Again

"After lunch we went up again. We had been in the air about fifteen minutes when we saw in the distance about 20 dive-bombers and a fighter escort going in the direction of the convoy. We were able to close with the fighter escort and a small scrap developed.

"I saw a straggler break away from the main flight and gave chase to him. He turned and we started a dog-fight—all the time he was trying to get up into the clouds again when I got in a lovely burst of machine-gun fire and he started to lose speed.

"He dived and I followed him down, giving him another burst of bullets when the pilot jumped out. He was now so low that his parachute did not open and his machine crashed on the beach, bursting into flames and sending up a cloud of black smoke.

"Back at our airdrome we started counting up again and found that the squadron had attacked 38 enemy aircraft of which 21 were definitely destroyed.

"I had the best luck that day, as I'd attacked eight different enemy machines, of which I got five confirmed as destroyed." (Editor's note: The air ministry imposes strict rules of verification before crediting planes as "confirmed destroyed" and in Stephen's case the figure used is that officially credited by the ministry.)

On Probation, Too!

Pilot Officer Stephen has achieved has record in a few brief months. It was not unill April, 1940—eight months after the war began—that he obtained a commission in the R. A. F. for the duration as pilot officer on probation. On probation, mark you!

Till hostilities started, he was employed on the business side staff of a newspaper, Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, serving in the R. A. F. volunteer reserve only as a sparetime flight sergeant evenings and weekends.

Sturdily built and square-jawed enough for any Nazi's liking, "Steve" is nevertheless a laughing cavalier of the air, ever smiling; and his clean-shaven face reveals a pair of boyish dimples. He wears his uniform cap at a jaunty angle. His parental home is at Ballater, Aberdeenshire.

"Steve" has been fighting from the station—"somewhere near London"—whose squadrons in November brought down their 600th victim. The honor of bagging the 600th was shared by "Steve" and his 22-year-old flight commander, Flight Lieutenant Mungo-Park. They climbed seven miles high to do it.

Both aces claimed a half each and divided a prize subscribed for by the various squadrons and grounds staffs at the station. They celebrated their luck by throwing a victory party.

In December, "Steve" had another honor. He received the first D. S. O. to be awarded in the field to a member of Britain's defense forces. It was awarded on the immediate recommendation of the King by Air Marshal W. Sholto Douglas, commander in chief of the fighter command.

The brilliant runners-up in the close race for No. 1 honors as "shooter-down" of Nazi planes are all officers of older service.

Squadron Leader Tuck, another 26-year-old, who joined the R. A. F. in 1936, is the pilot on whom a German pinned his Iron Cross after being shot down some time ago.

In establishing the shooting down of enemy planes, the standard of evidence demanded by the fighter command before a claim is conceded consists of actual eyewitnesses in the air or on the ground. Were "probables" included, each of these pilots' scores would stand nearer 50 than 20.

At the moment, Britain's No. 1 in the ace fighter pilot race is Stephen. Tomorrow, it may be Tuck, Malan, Lewis or some "dark horse" who up to now has not had the luck of being most often in the thick of the air battles.

Three-Way Drive On Auto Toll Opens

Coach, jr., proposed that at least 50 policemen be added to the force and suggested necessary funds be taken from gasoline taxes and other highway monies.

Commissioner J. Russell Young echoed the proposal, explaining that if necessary money could be raised in this manner, "perhaps 100 more men could be employed."

Later, Major Brown agreed—if the new officers are forthcoming—to place the extra personnel on immediate traffic duty. He said his department now receives 15 per cent of the highway fund for salaries, adding he felt this amount should be increased to 25 per cent.

Commissioner McCoach said he would ask Acting District Budget Officer William C. Wilding to compile an exact accounting of how the present 15 per cent item is disbursed.

It was pointed out that if 100 additional men were added, expenditures from the highway fund would come to about $190,000 a year. McCoach directed examination of the proposed plan by Corporation Counsel Keech, Acting Auditor Arthur Pilkerton and Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst.

Recovering from a lengthy illness and still confined to bed, Chairman Reynolds of the Senate District Committee decided that the current traffic emergency would not permit further delay in naming a traffic subcommittee head.

In selecting Senator Burton, Reynolds said he had in mind the Senator's excellent record for traffic safety achievements while mayor of Cleveland. The Ohio city developed a nationally-recognized traffic control plan under Burton's leadership.

Burton, however, said he planned no immediate steps, pending a comprehensive study of the problem and completion of the House investigation. He also said he would await appointment of additional members to his committee by Reynolds.

In still another move yesterday, Assistant Traffic Director M. C. Eldridge appealed to the District Congress of Parents and Teachers for support of the city's accident prevention program.

The analysis of fatal crashes since December 1, compiled by Inspector Arthur Miller, head of the police accident prevention unit, showed that speed was the greatest contributing factor in most instances. Of 25 death crashes between December 1 and January 23, 10 were attributed to excessive speeds, five to violations of the right-of-way regulations, and seven to negligence by pedestrian or auto passenger. The three others were listed as "accidental," with no blame established.

the British Imperial and Free French columns strike farther westward along the Mediterranean coast.

Lieut. Col. Colonna Dorando, commander of the army from French equatorial Africa, lost his life in the attack on Murzuk-Fessan, it was learned. Just as he was about to withdraw from the ruined airport, he fell victim to a sniper's bullet.

Dorando's column was partly mechanized, and made up of soldiers from the Tibesti and Touareg tribes, led by French officers.

They made their sally in three days, traveling over the trackless desert under the eyes of Italian scouting planes.

Reports said they took the Italian garrison, numbering 500, completely by surprise, for an attack from that quarter was not even dreamed of. While the Italians remained in their port, the French carried on their work of destruction unhindered throughout the day.

In a small but brisk encounter, the French suffered a few casualties, and captured a score of prisoners.

Advance in Eritrea

Cairo, Jan. 28 (AP).—Advancing British forces were said here to be closing in on the towns of Agordat and Barentu in Italian Eritrea.

Agordat is an essential rail center some 40 miles within Eritrea, and there and at Barentu, military informants said, the disorganized Italians were preparing to make what stand they could.

About both towns the defense positions are known to be poor; nevertheless, the Royal Air Force was taking no chances and reported that British bombers had assaulted the Italian lines of communication to the rear, attacking the railroad stations of Keren and Aisha and railroad bridges and roads.

British ground forces were reported advancing in strength and it appeared to be only a question of a short time before both towns fell.

Fugitive Nazi Flier Is Ready to Pay For Escape Boat

By the Associated Press

The German Embassy said yesterday that Baron Franz von Werra, German flier who escaped from a Canadian prison train, was prepared to turn over $35 to American authorities for the rowboat he used in crossing the St. Lawrence River into the United States.

The embassy, however, maintained that Von Werra had not committed a theft. Its statement followed word from Ogdensburg, N. Y., that Canadian authorities had filed a warrant charging theft of the boat.

"This astonishing charge," the embassy said, "does not stand up either under civic or military law as practiced in most nations. As a prisoner of war, Baron Franz von Werra was justified in attempting escape and to use all reasonable means at his command to effect such an escape. Nor can the mere use of a small rowboat with no intention of appropriating it to himself or keeping it beyond its use as a means of transportation to cross the river be considered as theft."

THE PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY BALLS tomorrow eve undoubtedly will overflow into countless Washington night spots. You know the idea—dinner or a little get-together before the Birthday Ball roaming, or final nightcaps as a wind-up to the big evening.

Movie stars are a dime a dozen at the Carlton. Already arrived are Washington's own Red Skelton, Deanna Durbin, George Raft, Preston Foster, baby star Carolyn Lee, Constance Moore and Wayne Morris. They'll all be honor guests at the Carlton's Gold Plate Breakfast.

PRINCESS RED ROCK, Alaskan Indian singer now appearing at the Shoreham, is one of the most startlingly beautiful young ladies ever to greet the eyes of Blue Room ringsiders. She's lushly Oriental in appearance, with shining dark eyes and quantities of blue-black hair done up in two huge buns. Exquisite hand made Indian jewelry sets off her chi-chi evening gowns. Yes, the Princess is an Indian a la Schiaperelli. Her songs are charming, too.

Patriotic Conference Hears McNutt

The health and welfare problems of defense "constitute a national emergency" and, superimposed upon the continuing obligations of committees, "they constitute a challenge fully as pressing as that of producing the guns and ships and tanks," Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, told the Women's Patriotic Conference on national defense last night.

Speaking at the banquet at the Mayflower Hotel, McNutt cited typical health and welfare problems growing out of the defense program in some localities—such as shortage of adequate housing for defense workers; recreation for troops quartered near "a conservative little town"; moving of submarginal families to make way for an Army proving ground.

"Community health protection must be strengthened wherever defense concentrates new population. Overcrowding on the one hand and inadequate facilities on the other aggravate every problem of sanitation, medical care and public health, including the prevention and control of communicable diseases . . .

Source of Medical Materials

"Essential medical materials, now imported, must be assured in quantities to meet our needs in case foreign sources of supply are cut off."

Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times, another banquet speaker, said that total defense, to which the American people are committed, calls "upon women as men to give without stint of the best that is in them."

He said he has no fear of the outcome of the present conflict "for my own country," no matter how severely it must suffer.

About 1,000 persons attended the banquet in the flag-decorated ballroom. The Marine Band Orchestra played. Mrs. Louis J. Lemstra, chairman of the conference and national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, presided.

The Maritime Commission is working "full speed ahead" on the construction of "200 emergency ships to meet the impending world tonnage shortage" resulting from the war, John W. Slacks, assistant to the chairman of the Commission, told the Conference at its afternoon session.

"These 200 will be completed within 24 months," and many of them within the next 12 months, he said.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of selective service, spoke at the same session on "Military Man-power." He explained some of the complications of determining deferment on account of dependents.

Niles Trammell, president of the National Broadcasting Co., speaking on "Radio and National Defense," said that "the only mandate radio has, the only mandate the American people will bestow on radio is the mandate to keep the truth free."

Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington, spoke on the spiritual side of national defense.

Allan Webb, of Portsmouth, Va., a youth who was chosen governor of Virginia Boys' State, explained how that project functioned under the sponsorship of the American Legion.

Parents of 2 Sisters Announce Double-Header Engagement

Now comes the double-header engagement.

Horace D. Rouzer, Assistant Architect of the Capitol, and Mrs. Rouzer yesterday disclosed the betrothal of their two blonde, blue-eyed daughters.

They are Nancy, 19, who will be graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School this June, and her older sister, Doris, a graduate of Western High School. Their respective fiances are Stanley W. Moore, of Sandy Spring, Md., and Thomas E. Saylor, 1312 Thirty-third Street Northwest.

Both romances have a sports tinge. Saylor was captain of the Western basketball team when he met his future bride a few seasons ago. Moore plays on the Sandy Spring team which won the Montgomery County Tennis League championship last year.

Whether it will be a double wedding is still undecided, the parents said last night.

Let Shipmasters Pick Crews, U. S. Maritime Official Urges

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The United States Maritime Commission has set out to restore to American shipmasters their traditional authority, including the right to select the crews who serve under them.

The object of this move, in the words of a Maritime Commission official, is to "preserve the American Merchant Marine against the activities of subversive groups."

However, the Daily Worker in New York, formerly operated by the Communist Party, brands the move as "a large-scale union-busting drive" executed under the guise of national defense.

For several years now, complaints have been heard that American shipmasters have "abdicated" to the fo'c'sle. The shipmasters have blamed the owners, saying that they refused to back them in disputes with maritime unions.

Union Wields the Whip

Under the current system, when a ship captain needs a crew he calls on the union to supply him with one. Legally, ship captains can turn down a Communist or a Nazi or an otherwise undesirable seaman sent to them, but actually they rarely do because they are afraid a dispute will develop with the union and that the ship owners, anxious about cargoes and profits, will not back them up.

From members of Congress have come many demands for a purge to drive Communists and Nazis out of the American Merchant Marine. Representative Everett Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, recently proposed that only merchant seamen who are in the Naval Reserve be allowed to sail American ships.

However, the Maritime Commission apparently does not think that is the solution.

Daniel S. Ring, the commission's director of the division of maritime personnel, told the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association in St. Louis last week that it was not necessary to adopt totalitarian methods to rid the American Merchant Marine of sailors whose interests "are identical with the interests of totalitarian powers." He said that neither an OGPU nor a militarizing of the merchant marine was necessary.

Laws Held Adequate

"All that is needed," he said, "is a proper enforcement or recognition of the authority that must accompany the responsibility of the licensed officers."

"The solution of the problem is simplicity itself. To insure a safe and loyal American Merchant Marine, then the foundation stone must be a complete appreciation of the fact that authority on board ship is entrusted to those who sail with licenses. The next step must be complete support by shipowner and Government of that authority when it is lawfully exercised."

He said that a Federal Government that has enacted laws for the protection of labor must recognize that a unique condition exists with respect to those who work at sea; that a ship captain, unlike a factory superintendent, has no local authorities to whom he can appeal, but must himself maintain law and order once his ship puts out to sea.

"We are definitely committed to urge that the master of a vessel and the licensed officers to whom he delegates his authority will have the right to select the crews who serve under them; to accept those they know to be competent, efficient, reliable and trustworthy as loyal Americans and to refuse to select those respecting whom they do not have such an assurance.

"Representatives of ship owners have indicated that they will respect and give their full and unequivocal support to such a procedure.

"The Maritime Commission, insofar as any vessels coming under its authority are concerned, has assured the owners of those vessels that so long as they observe this procedure, they in turn will have the complete backing of the government."

Ring said that there was no danger of "union busting" since licensed officers have their own unions and could not be expected to be false to "the precepts of unionism which they embrace."

Officers Condemn Isms

The executive committee of the National Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots of America, meeting here in the Hamilton Hotel, adopted a resolution yesterday aimed at Communists, Nazis and other subversive elements.

The committee urged that the organization's by-laws be amended so that "no applicant for membership shall be admitted unless the membership is assured that such applicant is not a member of any Communist, Nazi, Fascist, German-American bund, or kindred organization, and is not affiliated directly or indirectly with any group or association seeking to advance the interests of totalitarian 'isms.'"

The resolution was offered by Capt. C. F. May, of West Coast Local 90, who has long fought Harry Bridges on the West Coast.

Training School Likened to a Jail

fare department to establish a separate school for white girls at Muirkirk, Md., in 1924. Some $78,000 was spent on land and buildings which after a few years were abandoned and turned over to the Civilian Conservation Corps. Congress found that the per capita maintenance cost was prohibitive.

Yet while this money was being wasted, the school administration was denied money for needed personnel and equipment. An equipped domestic science department was closed for a year because no money was appropriated for a teacher; it was opened recently when WPA provided the instructor.

A library is closed now because the school hasn't a librarian, and the library has practically no furniture.

The school has practically no recreational facilities, either indoor or outdoor, save a small recreation room in the white girls' cottage, and a basement with a few chairs and tables in the colored girls' dormitory. Miss Andruss explained she had neither the personnel nor the equipment necessary to provide outdoor games.

Girls Locked In

Because the school has no stenographer, case records are kept in almost illegible handwriting.

Large holes in the plaster, scarred woodwork, a rusty sink in the dental clinic indicate how the property has been permitted to deteriorate. Because of limited maintenance appropriations, the heat is turned off for a few hours whenever the weather is not too severe.

Girls are locked in their rooms with a master lock system that reminds one of a jail. Screens on a window leading to a rusty fire escape are kept locked so that the girls cannot escape. If the girls become unruly they are placed in dark iron-grated cells that look like a small-town lock-up.

The school's appropriation was increased in the 1941 supply bill from $38,200 to $41,920. A parole officer was allowed, along with a night watchman. The per capita limitation was raised from $500 to $575 a year.

Per Capita Limit

The 1942 estimate carries $47,910, including $1,000 more for provisions, $1,000 additional for clothing, and $700 additional for repairs. The $575 per capita limitation is retained, however, offering a mathematical puzzle to welfare officials.

The school has one radio that doesn't work and a phonograph in the white girls' cottage.

The girls are given some limited vocational training, such as how to administer beauty treatment, and they spend half the day in academic classes. During the spring and summer some of them are employed on the farm that forms part of the grounds.

The school is situated adjacent to an expanding residential neighborhood. A new street recently opened, skirts one side of the grounds and a dormitory.

Various proposals for moving the school into the country, where the girls could be given more freedom of movement, have encountered obstacles in one place or another. The present grounds could be sold easily by the Commisioners.

Consolidation Suggested

Suggestions for consolidating the school with the Industrial Home Schools, white and colored, have been made. The more difficult girls, under such a plan, would be transferred to penal institutions. This proposal probably will be considered in connection with the drafting of construction plans for the welfare center.

The House Subcommittee on District Appropriations, in recommending an increased appropriation last year, recommended the replacement of the superintendent. The provision, however, was stricken by the Senate subcommittee without explanation.

"Members of the committee who visited this school were of the opinion," the House report stated, "that conditions were not satisfactory at the institution and that definite improvements could be made from the standpoint of sanitation and educational opportunities."

Miss Andruss said, however, that the allowance for repairs wasn't adequate to do necessary painting, not to mention other needed improvements. The 1942 budget carries an extra $700.

Gen. Keefer Heads District Red Cross

Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, U. S. A., retired, yesterday was elected chairman of the District chapter of the American Red Cross at a meeting at the chapter House, 1730 E Street Northwest.

Chapter officers were elected at a meeting at which Rear Admiral Charles Conard, chairman of the finance committee, reported $153,854 had been budgeted for this year's work.

Meanwhile, 125 longshoremen in Baltimore plunged into the task of loading the American Red Cross mercy ship, S. S. Cold Harbor, with 6,000 tons of foodstuffs for famine-threatened Spain, and milk, vitamins, medicines, and clothing for the children of unoccupied France.

The vessel, chartered from the United States Line, is scheduled to sail Saturday for Cadiz. After unloading part of her cargo at Cadiz, the Cold Harbor will proceed to Barcelona and Marseilles, where the Red Cross has other distributing centers.

Among items appropriated for in the budget are a contingency fund of $11,400 for the expansion of aid to service men and their families, and $6,000 which was set aside for increase in production of comfort articles for patients in Army and Navy hospitals.

Elected first vice-chairman was Victor M. Deyber, chairman of the board of the Second National Bank, and Miss Mabel T. Boardman was named second vice chairman.

Frederick P. Siddons was elected treasurer, J. Spalding Flannery, counselor, and Mrs. Margaret H. Robbins, assistant secretary-treasurer.

The following committee chairmen were appointed to serve during the year:

Roll call, Edgar Morris; home service, Col. Philip W. Huntington; first aid and life saving, Dr. Roy Lyman Sexton; nursing activities, Capt. Florence Blanchfield, United States Army Nurse Corps; home hygiene and care of the sick, Mrs. G. Howland Chase; food and nutrition, Mrs. William S. Anderson; Junior Red Cross, John F. Brougher and Mrs. Ora W. Spivey; public relations, Earl A. Nash; volunteer special services, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Mrs. Raymond C. Mackay and Mrs. Paulus P. Powell; staff assistants, Mrs. Hugo Huetting, jr.; production (garments), Mrs. J. H. Fishback; production (surgical dressings, routine), Miss Grace F. Wright; production (surgical dressings, war relief), Mrs. Wallace Lind.

FCC Sets Hearing On Standards For Television

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday scheduled a hearing on March 20 to consider engineering standards proposed for television and to determine whether visual broadcasting should be placed on a commercial basis.

The hearing was announced following receipt of a report of engineers representing the radio manufacturing industry as to television standards. This report adheres rather closely to the previous recommendations of the Radio Manufacturers Association, which was rejected by the FCC more than a year ago.

The National Television System Committee's report stated that the adoption of the standards it proposed would "make possible the creation, in the public interest, of a nationally coordinated television service and at the same time will insure continued development of the art."

All of the major experimenters in the visual broadcasting field except the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., are understood to be willing to adopt these standards.

Guidance Clinics Aid 900 Children Yearly

Approximately 900 children each year benefit from the child guidance services offered in the District's four clinics devoted to the purpose, representatives of the clinics told the family and child welfare division of the Council of Social Agencies at a meeting at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday.

Clinics at Freedmen's Hospital, the Catholic University and at Children's Hospital each treat about 200 children a year, while the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene clinic cares for approximately 350, it was stated.

Espionage Ruled Out in Theft Of Civil Service Records

Federal agents late yesterday decided to expand their search "in the District and elsewhere" for more evidence about the removal of confidential Government personnel records by the thousand from a Washington Civil Service building.

The enlarged investigation was announced by Assistant District Attorney Charles Murray after the second day of a grand jury hearing into the files tampering case.

While the grand jury hearing was on in District Court, the two men accused of removing the files were being held in $1,000 bond each in a downstairs cell, in custody of the United States marshal.

The pair, Harlan W. Crandall, 29, Civil Service Commission employe, and Lawrence L. Haynes, 30, associate in the Standard Business Service, which supplied mailing lists to commercial firms, pleaded not guilty to removing the personnel files when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Bond Fixed at $1,000

Turnage fixed their bond at $1,000 each, pending a hearing before him February 11. The charge placed against them was violation of a Federal statute fixing a maximum penalty of three years in jail and a $2,000 fine for unlawfully removing public records.

Assistant District Attorney Murray said that the extended investigation would last ten days or two weeks.

One phase of the inquiry, Murray said, involves a tool-box manufacturing firm in New York. He declined to disclose the name of the firm.

Foreign espionage had been ruled out in connection with the theft following the grand jury, Murray indicated. He said that none of the reports turned in by investigators had involved any organization suspected of alien activity in the United States.

Murray said that if additional evidence is turned up in the next ten days or two weeks it will be presented to the grand jury.

Otherwise, he indicated, the grand jury will make its findings on the basis of what has already been presented. District Attorney Edward M. Curran had announced earlier that he would seek the indictment of both Crandall and Haynes.

From the cell in District Court, Haynes was later removed to the District Jail.

Crandall was able to raise the bond through a professional bondsman.

Murray's statement that foreign agent "angles" were lacking in the case followed appearance before the grand jury of FBI Agent Guy Hottel, and two Washington food-store proprietors, Walter Camp, 36, and Werner Orbach, 33, both naturalized German-American citizens.

Camp and Orbach told The Post they had purchased mailing lists from the Haynes firm, but that they had protested use of civil service records. Camp said he had reported removal of the records to the FBI.

"A Business Venture"

Orbach said that his connection with the case had "no political or defense aspect." Their dealing with the Haynes firm, he said, was "a business venture."

"I am Jewish," he said. "I would not do anything to help Adolf." He added that he and Camp had been partners for 12 years.

He said that it was in the fall, "October or November," when he saw some Government papers in the Haynes' office—he would not identify them as civil service records—and protested their use."

"We feared the thing that actually happened," he said.

The FBI reported that the 20,685 individual files seized included those of 257 FBI employees.

3 From Grounded Transport Drown

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 28 (AP).—Three seamen tossed from a capsizing lifeboat were reported missing tonight after earlier word that all 60 passengers and crewmen of the grounded Army transport Kvichak had reached shore safely.

The U. S. S. gunboat Charleston, flagship of the Navy's Alaskan sector, radioed that Rosendo Cacris, Alfred Peralata and William O. Reeves were believed lost.

'Led On,' Butler Says of Attacks

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 28 (AP).—Joseph Spell, 31-year-old Negro chauffeur-butler, told a superior court jury trying him on an attack charge today that he had been "led on" by his socially prominent employer, Mrs. John K. Strubing, jr., of Greenwich.

He denied Mrs. Strubing's charges that he had thrice raped her after surprising her in her bedroom, forced her to write a $5,000 "ransom note," and later threw her into a reservoir in Westchester County, N. Y.

260th Due Today At Fort Bliss

Marfa, Tex., Jan. 28.—The First Battalion of the 260th Coast Artillery Regiment of Washington, D. C., was expected tonight to enter Fort Bliss sometime tomorrow afternoon, there to join the Second Battalion and embark on a year of intensive training.

The convoy arrived here earlier in the day, rolling through fog and rain from Del Rio, where the outfit bivouacked in tents.

The hop to El Paso, the final one of a 17-day jaunt, is about 196 miles. Capt. Charles F. Buck, adjutant, announced tonight that mail may be addressed to those on convoy at El Paso from now on, by addressing him in care of 260th Coast Artillery (AA), antiaircraft training center, El Paso, Tex.

'Cheers for Miss Bishop' But More for Miss Scott

Martha Scott Crowds Mr. Donat at Own Game; Children's Theater to Present 'Alice'; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT WOULD NOT BE SURPRISING if Martha Scott, a comparative newcomer to the screen, should win an Academy Award for the best performance of the year by an actress on the strength of her portrayal of the title role in "Cheers for Miss Bishop."

BELL

A great deal concerning the skill with which Miss Scott encompasses the passing of 60 years in her latest role has preceded the picture to Washington. Yesterday morning's preview in the Circle Theater afforded further testimony to the cinema's occasional tendency toward understatement. Miss Scott gradually reflects the passage of the years and assumes the frailities of old age with amazing charm and conviction. Her role is the feminine counterpart of Robert Donat's in "Good-Bye Mr. Chips" and is executed with comparable perfection.

The similarity between the two pictures extends even beyond that. Both are studies in scholastic life, "Cheers for Miss Bishop" concerning itself with the foundation and development of a college in the Midwest, where Miss Bishop serves as a teacher over a span of 53 years. It is a warm, moving and heroic study that compresses great emotional power into its final sequences.

Miss Scott's joust with the years is not the only notable one in the film. William Gargan, Edmund Gwenn, Knox Manning, Rosemary DeCamp and John Arledge win theirs with equal realism.

What with "Gone With the Wind" breezing Technicolorfully along and "The Philadelphia Story" following that, it will be some weeks before "Cheers for Miss Bishop" is unfurled to public view, but it is one to be written down in the little red book as decidedly worth waiting for.

And today at 12:30, "Virginia," in the Warner Brothers' private projection room, with Stirling Hayden and little Miss Carolyn Lee, foremost in the support of Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray, both sitting in with the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks.

Jussi Bjorling, Swedish tenor, now with the Metropolitan, plays the leading role in "Fram for Framgang"—which means "Road to Success," so they tell me—the Swedish comedy to be shown in the Foreign Language Cinema series in Pierce Hall, Saturday night at 8. Lest the "double talk" give you pause, the picture has English subtitles.

Personal aside to Frank LaFalce: Thanks for the relayed message from my charming fellow-Hoosier, Louise Fazenda. Sorry I couldn't flip a ride on the merry-go-round while she and her husband, Hal Wallis, were here.

It is a pleasant privilege to report that our old friend, "Happy" Walker, after two years of convalescence from a dread malady, is himself again, fully restored in body, heart and spirit. So "Happy" will be coming up from the North Carolina mountains to lead his orchestra once more for the President's Birthday Ball to be held at the Hotel Washington tomorrow night. "Hap" has been giving out with musical furore and a stray cadenza here and there for a high stack of years now and it will be good to have him back. "Happy" Walker is a lad of great heart.

"Alice in Wonderland," Lewis Carroll's immortal classic, will be brought to the National Theater by the Children's Theater of New York for a single performance on Saturday morning, February 15. It is quite a record "Alice" has made, when you come to think about it. Written more than three score years and ten ago to please one small girl, it has succeeded in captivating the fancy of boys and girls, men and women, young and old ever since.

So Eileen Ritter, the than-whichest of the Earle's Roxyettes, stops by to say "Hello" to the Rotogravure Section and probably would have sung a song, only there is nobody in the office named Mike.

And just to set the record straight, the rumor that those seats for tomorrow night's midnight performances at the Earle and Capitol are being sold on a reserved seat basis is just a squirt of the old banana oil. No reserved seats. First come, first served—same as always.

For-Once-Not-"East Lynne" Note.

MARY ANDERSON AND MARTHA SCOTT

in one of the early scenes in Richard A. Rowland's production for United Artists of "Cheers for Miss Bishop," adapted from Bess Streeter Aldrich's novel of "Miss Bishop" and coming to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater in the near future. The story covers a period of more than half a century

Little's 'Daybreak' Is in the Vein Of the Realistic French Films

By Richard L. Coe

A man who has just murdered another paces the floor of his attic room. The house is completely surrounded by the police, there is no escape and, after the first frenzy of the deed is past, he quietly ruminates on the chain of events which brought him to this inescapable doom.

Such is the skeleton of "Daybreak," one of the last films to have been made in a free France and which opens its run this morning at the Little Theater. Jean Gabin, in the leading role, fortifies his fame as that unhappy land's most powerful actor and Marcel's studied direction is in the fine vein of Gallic film realism.

What brought about the murder and the disastrous denouement? By a flashback technique we learn that Gabin plays a fellow whom an orphanage had accustomed to loneliness and who, after a struggle with unemployment, found a factory job which kept him comfortable. By chance he meets a lovely, fresh young girl, attracts her as much as she attracts him. But not long before this she had been intrigued by the advances of a well-traveled animal trainer. Also an orphan, she has yearned for travel and adventure. The vaudevillian, we learn, ... seduced her, does all in his power to dampen the young man's interest in her and, failing that, incites him into the quarrel that is to end so grimly.

So relentless a fate demands an unrelenting treatment that probably only pre-1940 France could devise. The settings are startlingly real: the endless stairway of the rooming-house; the grimy street scenes; the impersonal factory contrasting with the shining person of a beautiful young girl; the faces of the murderer's fellow-lodgers who have always regarded him as gentle and still do. All these things linked together make a compelling frame for this starkly human happening.

The distinctive Gabin plays the little fellow who has been so rudely jostled by fate and his own background with strength and reticence. There are no melodramatics in his character study of a man about to die; he simply hunts the last matches in his room and when he doesn't find any, chain-smokes. Jacqueline Laurent is utterly fascinating as the young girl—almost too lovely to be real. The experienced Arletty has a role of deep interest as a fourth angle to this four-sided adventure and Jules Berry is the hateful amoralist.

Altogether, while "Daybreak" is not one of the great French films, it is in the tradition which made the others great and that, these days, is something.

Overseas Comic For Arthur Picture

S. Z. (Sakall) Sakall, outstanding comedian of the Continental stage and screen before he was brought to Hollywood to be launched on an American film career, has been signed for an important part in "The Devil and Miss Jones," new starring vehicle for Jean Arthur, which Frank Ross and Norman Krasna will produce for RKO-Radio release.

Sakall recently scored a hit in a Deanna Durbin picture, "Spring Parade," and also appeared in "It's a Date" and "My Love Came Back."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

You've heard about Adrian's costumes before, but you've never seen anything like the clothes he's done for the "Minnie from Trinidad" number in "Ziegfeld Girl." They are so colorful and brilliant they scream to be photographed in Technicolor. Therefore, pictures being done in black and white. Those beauties—Georgia Carroll, Irma Wilson, Loraine Gettman, Anya Taranda, Aileen Brandeis, and Gayle Mellot—have a pal in Bus Berkeley, who's photographed each from head to toes. The costumes are red, white, green, blue.

HOPPER

Judy Garland carried a stuffed parrot on her shoulder and believe me, its claws were eating into her skin. One girl wore a whole devil fish, another a snake and sea dragon done in spangles, another's costume was made of white orchids and butterflies, another wore a tree, another Leda and the swan. One wore a pink arbor on her back.

And the girl who carried a basket of jewelled fish had such a headache she nearly fainted. Others had baskets of flowers. And Gale Mellot chaperoned a donkey. The other day when a prop man screamed "Hey! Look at your—donkey! He's eating the goldfish!"—work was suspended for ten minutes.

What a spot for Tony Martin. But maybe I'd better describe the scene. Boys and girls are dancing "The Calypso Jive," when from a bamboo tent on a hilltop came those whirling dervishes who created a sensation at the Waldorf, Rosario and Antonio. As they finished, Judy Garland's head came into the camera. She started singing "Hi—hi!"

The camera moved as though it were a snooper seeking a keyhole, and found Tony Martin reclining on a sandy beach with a dozen mermaids. He picked up the tune and as the camera boom swept down, the mermaids did a contortionist act to get underneath it so they wouldn't be decapitated while camera swung up to a giant bowl of goldfish, and from there to the deck of the yacht, where Tony was singing a love song to Hedy Lamarr.

They were a whole day rehearsing the mechanical difficulties—then shot the scene in half an hour. But again I say, it screamed for color. They tell me color's too expensive. Yet they're doing "Billy the Kid" in color. There's no answer. Yes, there is—but I'd wear by head in a sling if I told you!

Margaret Sullavan liked her role in "Back Street" better than anything she's ever done. It may be the last picture she'll ever make. With the coming of the third baby, she feels she's earned her right to live. She and husband Leland Hayward bought a place in New Mexico, and now they're set to enjoy a little bit of heaven.

Sorry to hear mother-in-law of Lum (of Lum and Abner) fell in a beauty parlor, broke her hip, and will be laid up six months. The Carl Brissons have had tough luck. They sold their London home to the British Broadcasting Co., but left some of their trunks in the basement of that building. The rest of their possessions were stored at their maid's home. Both places have been destroyed.

What foreign actor, who'll probably be on the list for an Academy Award, ties a string 'round his neck, under his collar, and when he does a dramatic scene, chokes himself so that his eyes pop out and veins stand out on his forehead? And the critics call it great acting!

"Male Animal" Tops Incoming Theater Bills

"THE MALE ANIMAL." Combining the shrewd wits of James Thurber and Elliott Nugent, this successful comedy arives Monday for a week's engagement at the National Theater. The New Yorker cartoonist-philosopher and the author of "The Poor Nut" and "Kempy" tell of a young college professor who is about to lose his wife to a former suitor and his job because of his belief in academic freedom. Herman Shumlin is presenting virtually the same cast which played the hit in New York and Chicago, a company which includes Co-author Nugent, Elizabeth Love, Leon Ames, Matt Briggs, Ivan Simpson, Julie Stevens, Robert Scott, Minna Phillips, Regina Wallace, Don De Fore, Eulabelle Moore, Richard Beckard and John James, jr., Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Earle

"VIRGINIA." Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll are the stars of this modern story filmed for a large part in Charlottesville. The Earle is sharing "World Premiere" honors with four Virginia theaters. Miss Carroll plays an impoverished actress who returns to Virginia to sell her plantation and falls in love with a land-poor aristocrat who refuses to sell his heritage. Stirling Hayden makes his film debut in an important role. Carolyn Lee, Marie Wilson, Helen Broderick and Louise Beavers have other pivotal parts. The stage revue, "Melody and Madness," features Fred Sanborn, Wally and Verdyn Stapleton and the Roxyettes. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"SECOND CHORUS." Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard and Artie Shaw's band are joined by Burgess Mededith and Charles Butterworth in this comedy of a college musical organization. The boys must flunk their Ivy College final exams each semester in order to continue their well-paying entertainment committee. Hal Le Roy, the musical-comedy dancer, heads the stage revue, in which the Three Sailors, the Stuart-Morgan dancers, the Romero Brothers, Sandy Grant and the Rhythm Rockets also are participants. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"VICTORY." Joseph Conrad's romantic novel is broght to the screen with Frederic March, Betty Field and Sir Cedric Hardwicke in the leading roles. Conrad's adventure tells of a cynical recluse who tries to withdraw from the world by living on a lonely Javanese island. By accident he befriends a young girl, takes her to his island and is followed by three cutthroats who believe there is hidden treasure on the island. Sig Rumann, Margaret Wycherly, Jerome Cowan and Fritz Feld top the supporting players. Follows "Love Thy Neighbor."

RKO-Keith's

"KITTY FOYLE."—Ginger Rogers' "White Collar" heroine continues into a fifth week on the Fifteenth Street screen. Adapted from the best-selling novel by Christopher Morley, this Philadelphia story features Dennis Morgan and James Craig.

Palace

"GONE WITH THE WIND." The Margaret Mitchell story, back for a popular-priced engagement at the theater which first presented it to the Capital over a year ago, continues into a third week on its return run. Clark Gable, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland support Vivien Leigh.

Columbia

"HUDSON'S BAY." Paul Muni's versatility reasserts itself in his portrayal of the roguish fur-trapper, Pierre Radisson, whose dream was the founding of a vast empire in a savage wilderness of warring Indians. The feature players in the picture which has just completed a week at the Capitol, include Gene Tierney, Laird Cregar, John Sutton, Virginia Field, Vincent Price and Nigel Bruce. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"RIVER THAMES — YESTERDAY." A camera jaunt down the historic river as it was before the war began is the travelogue and principal short subject billed for the newsreel house beginning Friday morning. "Feminine Fitness," in which Grantland Rice and Ted Husing run the gamut of ladies' athletic activities; "Popeye, the Jeep," a color cartoon; and issue No. 4 of "Picture People" are the other short subjects.

Gayety

"BROADWAY SCANDALS." Marian Miller, burlesque's "Queen of the Quivers," tops the cast of the new production opening Sunday afternoon at the Gayety. Harry Clexx handles the comedy portions of the revue, while Ivy Hamp and Gertie Beek are the featured display artistes. Zorita and "Dusty" Fletcher head the cast of the current production continuing through Saturday's midnight performance.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Jan. 28.

LORD HALIFAX: Wendell Willkie carried another letter in addition to the one from President Roosevelt when he flew to London. He had a letter from William Green, head of the A. F. of L., to Ernest Bevin, the Minister of Labor . . .Green had supported Roosevelt in the last election. Willkie, therefore, was asked: "Why didn't you get a recommendation from John L. Lewis?" He answered: "I once did, and it wasn't enough" . . . WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN: Sidney Hillman, who has been hospitalized, will return to his duties this week. . . . SIXTY-NINTH REGIMENT: Col. William J. Donovan, who is now in Greece, will return to America on February 15. His reports to the Secretary of Navy are relayed via the nearest American warships.

LYONS

MAYOR LAGUARDIA: Your secretary, Byrnes MacDonald, has been called up by the Draft Board . . . ASCAP: Jimmy Walker, impartial chairman of the garment industry, will contribute a song to the new edition of "Pins & Needles" . . . LUCIUS BEEBE: Peter Arno, recently voted the best-dressed man in America, is auditioning for a radio job—as a commentator at the premieres of shows and other events of social importance in Manhattan. . . . ETHEL MERMAN: Charles Boyer left for Chicago accompanied by your estranged husband, Bill Smith, his agent. Boyer's physician also was a passenger—because they're both ill and need medical care.

COL. LINDBERGH: Last week the new documentary film about London, "Christmas Under Fire," was shown to legislators and diplomats at Constitution Hall in Washington. Tom Beck, editor of Collier's, presided. After the picture was shown, Beck told the assemblage: "And some one said as late as today: 'It doesn't matter who wins the war'" . . . He then announced that "also present now, in addition to the representatives of Poland, Denmark, the Netherlands and France, are several Nazis. I want to watch them stand now with the rest of us—while the orchestra plays 'God Save the King.'"

EARL BROWDER: Isn't it true that the Soviet Embassy refuses to issue a visa for your wife, who has been ordered deported? . . . BOXING COMMISSION: Jackie "Kid" Berg, the British lightweight champion who fought so successfully in this country, now is with the R. A. F. . . . ELAINE BARRIE: On the Rudy Vallee broadcast of last week one of the characters was supposed to use ungrammatical phrases. John Barrymore chided her by saying: "You ain't never been to Wellesley" . . . Barrymore originally wanted to make it Hunter College, your Alma Mater—but the producer of the show refused to permit it.

MARRIAGE LICENSE BUREAU: Last night was balloon night at the Stork Club, in which all the long ladies assemble on the dance floor and grab for balloons which are dropped en masse from a net near the ceiling. Each balloon has a slip of paper representing a prize. The top prize is $100 in cash. . . . One of the girls vowed that if she grabbed the $100 balloon she'd be married immediately—for that was all the stake she and her fiance needed. She stepped to the dance floor, waited until the balloons were released and grabbed one. But another girl, Anne Miller, also grabbed for that balloon, and her grip was firmer. Miss Miller captured it. When it was opened the $100 prize was inside. Anne Miller is of the Social Register. Her family is one of New York's wealthiest.

BORO. PRESIDENT HARVEY: The report of the New York City Defense Council will show that, as far as the city's being vulnerable to air attack is concerned, the safest place to live is in Queens. The Defense Council's plans also include one wherein the policemen and firemen will be in charge of routing all evacuees through the many roads, bridges and tunnels leading from overcrowded Manhattan.

IRA GERSHWIN: When Lawrence Tibbett sang last week at the Cabinet's reception to the President, the only encore they asked was of your song, "I Got Plenty of Nothin'." Tibbett arrived there prepared, having memorized the words of "The Star-Spangled Banner." When he sang at the White House during his previous visit he discovered he'd have to sing the Anthem. He, therefore, had some one give him the lyrics, which he jotted down on a small piece of paper. He held this in his hand and referred to it while he sang. That paper, autographed, now is framed in the White House.

PRESIDENT HAROLD W. DODDS: An artist named Lazzlo dined at the Princeton home of Albert Einstein. He told the scientist that he would like to do his portrait, with Einstein wearing his Oxford robe. . . "But I have no Oxford robe," the scientist stated . . . "As long as Oxford gave you an honorary degree, we can arrange to borrow an Oxford robe from one of the professors," suggested the artist. "That will be all right with you, won't it?" . . . "No, I don't think so," Einstein told him. "You're such a good artist that when people look at the painting they'd see that I was wearing a borrowed gown."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 28 (INS).—I doubt if any girl in the world had a birthday to compare with Joan Leslie's celebration on the Warner lot today. The party was given by the All-Year Club and was a tribute to this girl who has made three pictures in less than a year. Just as she sat down to luncheon, Jack Warner came in and told her she had been selected to play opposite Gary Cooper in "Sergeant Alvin York." She is a talented child this little Joan Brodel, who changed her name because it was too much like Joan Blondell.

PARSONS

Joan sings and dances, has red hair and is pretty.

Tropical Honolulu, with its color and beauty, will furnish the background of "Hilo Hattie," a costly musical comedy Joe Pasternak plans to make in June. "Hilo Hattie" is a native girl who sings the famous "When Hilo Hattie Does the Hula" at the Royal Hawaiian with the rhythm and graceful movement of the hands that characterizes these simple islanders. In addition Hilo Hattie is a comedy entertainer and extremely popular. Of course the movie "Hattie" will be glorified and played by a motion picture actress.

If Anne Shirley and John Payne wished to make a star of their little daughter, the chance would be theirs right now. Anne, who hasn't made a picture since she took time out to become a mother, checks in at Paramount studios February 17, to star in "Little Miss Muffett." Interesting that Anne in the movies has a baby just the same as Anne in real life and Para has tried to get the Paynes to let their daughter be costared.

Chatter in Hollwood: When Lili Damita admitted to this wirter today that she and Errol Flynn had made a date with the stork, she said: "You know every time I go to New York they ask two questions: Are you going to have a baby? Or are you and Flynn separated? I don't know what they'll ask me now that the baby is on the way and, as you know, Flynn and I never had any intention of separating." That this is an unusual marriage no one can deny, when you realize that even though Lili expects to be a mother in a few months she insisted that Errol go to Indo-China if he had the chance.

Snapshots of Hollwood collected at random: Heddy Lamarr checked in the hospital today, suffering a refractory wisdom tooth and a bad case of flu. She will remain until her cold is gone; the John Hubbards welcomed an eight-pound girl; they are naming her Lois Maryan. Mrs. Victoria Preisser, mother of June and Cherry Preisser Hopkins, is recovering from an operation for cataracts. June's unselfish devotion to her mother is well known to all their friends.

Bill Conselman, jr., slipped an engagement ring on Jacqueline Dalya's finger at the Charlie Foy Supper Club; Marcel Rogez, Wesley Ruggles' bride, greatly worried over word her brother has been a prisoner in Germany since Dunkirk. She has had no word of his wife and children; Dennis Day, who sings on the Jack Benny program, at the Cocoanut Grove with Martha O'Driscoll.

Al Vanderbilt, who came to the St. Cyr dance with Lucille Eggers, spent a lot of time with Juanita Stark, the young lady who was a waitress on relief only two weeks ago. She is so pretty, and like a child over all the glamour that has suddenly come into her life; interesting is the condensed version of "The Mikado" which Louis K. Sidney directs and a sketch costarring Madeleine Carroll and Groucho Marx—of all things.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

'Ice-Capades' Dedicates Arena Before Opening Crowd of 5,000

By Richard L. Coe

Blades glistened on a green-sward new to Washington last night and they weren't blades of grass, either. They were those of the "Ice-Capades of 1941" and the greensward was the vari-colored rink of the new Uline Ice Arena.

Ice-conscious Washington—how true!—all but packed the new amusement palace at Third and M Streets Northeast, to find a splendid indoor stadium that must be described as a triumph in concrete. For ice events, the arena will seat 5,100 and for such sports as boxing and basketball an additional 3,000 can be accommodated, giving it the largest seating capacity of any building in this Capital.

"Ice-Capades of 1941" is a dashing, glittering example of that new form of entertainment America has so lately taken to its heart. It improves as it progresses, is at its best when its champion principals spin in the spotlights and relies more on humor than on ensemble effects. First-nighters, with a strong dash of Society, stopped the show more than once with their appreciation, as will, no doubt, those who will see it through Sunday, February 9.

How does "Ice-Capades of 1941" compare with the two editions of the "Ice Follies," which, until last night, had been the city's only big-time frigid saturnalias? The newer revue isn't up to the par of the incomparable "Follies" any more than the revues of White and Carroll were up to those of the great Ziegfeld, but novices to the game wouldn't know it. If "Ice-Capades" at the moment lacks the gleaming spontaneity of the "Follies" and the infectious smiles of its gliding maidens, lay that to the fact that this company has been together for six months, while the "Follies" has been making history for nearly six years.

While Belita is the star of "Ice-Capades," she is surrounded by luminaries of equal magnitude. This British lass has taken over the more dashing ballet tricks and adapted them to the ice with smart effect. Her stardom is given a sparkling chase by the much-publicized Czech champ, Vera Hruba, a veritable Valkyre on silver, who does something to the Magic Fire music that Wagner never thought of.

Of the men, "Red" McCarthy is the most spectacular. As a silver Chinese God he makes dashes and leaps that are as eye-catching as those of the "Follies'" Harris Legg. In both their Arabian Nights sequence and their Apache impressions, Ruth Mack and Everett McGowan captivated their audience with a daring that made Apache-dancing seem new again.

Emphasizes Comedy

Comedians abound. Eric Waite is rioutous because he does what nine-tenths of his audience would do in his place—twists an ankle, falls, tumbles and comes as close to breaking a back as is humanly possible. Joe Jackson, Jr., adds to the routine which made him a favorite at the New York World's Fair, Al Surette's Straw Man is one of the earlier triumphs and Lynam and Jackson (Larry, not Joe, Jr.) add wit to their known hockey skill.

One of the possible reasons that the chorus lacks the precision which the name of their director, Russell Markert, conjures up, is that the orchestra, at one end of the arena rather than in the middle, is too far from their spinning ears. The microphone system is still battling the concrete. Aside from this and the roughness of the ice at one or two spots, causing several otherwise inexplicable falls, the new arena, at first glance, looks to be all that it promised—a worthy, welcome addition to a city so fast outgrowing itself. And the "Ice-Capades" is what it said it would be—long on comedy for a humor-hungry world.

A new name to remember us by

PROBABLY you've heard by now that we Sanitary grocers are changing our name to Safeway. We've been printing some announcements on this to make clear to you what's happened.

Nothing has happened, really. We have the same ownership, the same store locations, and you'll see the same people in our stores.

We've simply taken for our local Sanitary Stores the name of the parent organization of which we've long been a member. This is a sensible step because it simplifies our business records.

On the front of our stores—and in our newspaper advertisement this weekend—you'll see our new name appearing like this:

SAFEWAY

At Safeway stores you'll continue to find farm-fresh produce, guaranteed meats and all the other quality foods you like at Sanitary. Regular money-savings, too, because our stores continue to be chain stores ... distributing foods directly.

We hope you continue to have the same friendly feeling for us as always. We surely are going right on trying to deserve you as our customer every day.

Your SANITARY Grocer ... who from now on is your SAFEWAY Grocer

BMI Consents

The signing of a consent decree by Broadcast Music, Inc., seems to prepare the way for a break in the long deadlock over music controlled by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. The broadcasters' agency agrees, among other matters, not to exercise exclusive control over performing rights of music to which it does not own the copyright; never to require a fee based on programs which carry no BMI music; and never to make purchasers pay for the use of its entire catalogue to obtain rights to a few numbers. The agreement does not become effective, however, until "similar restraints" have been imposed on ASCAP, either through prosecution or through consent. Negotiations by the Government for an agreement with ASCAP ended unsuccessfully a month ago, and the Department of Justice announces that the consent by BMI does not cause any change in its plans for action against ASCAP. On the face of things, however, it would seem that ASCAP now would be convinced that what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander—and make an arrangement whereby, once more, we could hear the compositions of Victor Herbert and Irving Berlin on the air.

A Spree, Indeed

Even though Senator Gillette's committee investigating campaign expenditures has not yet made its final report, it is evident that the Hatch Act will have to be amended if the use of money in political campaigns is to be restrained. The limitations written into the Hatch Act diverted campaign funds from national to State committees, but they seem to have had no effect upon the total outlay of either major party. Official reports from party organizations account for the spending of no less than $21,600,000 in 1940. And expenses of local committees, it is estimated, bring the total cost of the campaigns last year to the astounding figure of $40,000,000.

At present the Hatch Act limits the expenditures of national committees to $3,000,000, but, it is apparent, the restriction merely brought about a decentralization of the parties' financial machinery. State committees which are exempt from the requirements of the Federal law became the big spenders. Finance committees in many States transferred funds to other States where they were in greater demand from the viewpoint of national politics. Several national committees worked independently, moreover, in support of the same Presidential candidates. Under these conditions the Hatch Act limitation seems to mean nothing at all. The same can be said for the $5,000 limitation upon personal contributions to parties. One individual gave nearly $50,000 to the Republican Party by distributing his gifts among 14 different organizations.

It will not be a simple matter to close the loopholes in the law which permit these evasions. Federal statutes cannot reach local party organizations, nor would it be practical to prevent various separate national groups from raising funds to support one candidate. Something might be accomplished by making the personal restriction more severe, but even if individuals were restricted to a total of $5,000 in contributions, a complicated enforcement problem would arise.

The great difficulty of drafting a law that would effectively check campaign spending has led once more to the suggestion that the Government provide the candidates with expense accounts and forbid private contributions. But it must not be supposed that this would afford a simple solution. How, for example, would the allotment for Presidential candidates be divided between the incumbent and the challenger? Certainly the challenger would need the larger fund, for he would not have Cabinet members and other Federal employes still exempt from the Hatch Act's curbs on political activities to speak for him. And, of course, he would have no public funds to use for political purposes.

The political effects of public spending are yet to be adequately explored, but even isolated cases suggest that they are far-reaching. During the 1940 campaign, for example, $2,400,000 was allocated to the Crab Orchard project in Illinois, where a certain Congressman appeared to be having a difficult fight. This project, originally undertaken by the old Resettlement Administration, has long been known within the Government service as a white elephant. Yet politicians have been able to demand further waste of public funds to cover up an original blunder. This single investment in "pork-barrel" politics will cost taxpayers almost as much as the Democratic Party (excluding local groups) collected and spent in 1940!

So the problem is not an easy one. It will be interesting to see whether the Senate committee can devise any practical remedy that will be more effective than thorough publicity.

Cloudy China

The announcement of Lauchlin Currie's impending mission to China divests one of the President's administrative assistants of his robe of anonymity, but for an excellent purpose. Under the lend-lease bill the President would be empowered to lease munitions to China as well as to Britain. In fact, there is no limit to the countries which might be so aided. For this reason the President must keep in intimate contact with conditions in those countries which would virtually be our "substitute boys" in the defense against aggression.

Presumably, since Mr. Currie's experience has been limited to finance, he will pursue financial inquiries. In this respect the President's aide will have a tough nut to crack. Chinese finance is a maze which might defy the exploration of even a former Harvard tutor in finance, and the word generally used to describe the country's economics is chaos. He will find plenty of statistics, perhaps more than one set of them for most departments of the national life. For instance, one may still take a choice of several estimates of China's population. The fact is that among the admirable qualities of the Chinese people there is no room for exactness, for even when they know a figure, they are apt to express it, poetically, as "a few score."

What interests the American people more than the financial resources upon which the Chungking government can lay its hand is the political situation. Persistent reports are current of the immimence of civil war. The same reports say that the Communists are coming out on top in the Szechman capital of Free China. It is rumored, for instance, that W. H. Donald, the generalissimo's Australian adviser, has left the Chungking government's service because of the Communist influence.

About the Communists in China there has always been a difference of opinion among journalistic and other observers. One group insists that they are both ideologically related to Moscow and take orders from Moscow. Other reporters feel that they are merely dissidents with an Irish propensity for being "agin the government." Certainly Chiang Kai-shek, who crushed the Communists and their Karakhan-Borodin allies in 1927, after they had absorbed the first Nationalist government, is no Communist, and only accepted Communist help as the price of unifying China against the Japanese invader. But the present situation is unclear, and warrants personal investigation by the Presidential office. The United States is supporting China for the same immediate reason that the Soviet Union is, but it doesn't wish to finance a Trojan horse, and thereby invite a repetition of Moscow's near-theft of China which came so close to fruition in 1927.

Debt Ceiling

In the budget message the President did not specifically recommend abolition of all statutory limitations upon the Government debt, but he did question its significance "except as it serves as a fiscal monitor." Doubtless the existence of a debt limit has held down expenditures to some extent by compelling Congress to attend to the rapidly mounting volume of indebtedness. However, with a new deficit of over $9,000,000,000 forecast for the next fiscal year, and large additions to the deficit of the current year in prospect, a substantial rise in the debt limit is inevitable. The Treasury favors an upper limit of $65,000,000,000—that is $16,000,000,000 above the present statutory ceiling—and the draft of a bill providing for the desired increase has already been transmitted to Congress. Some economy-minded members of Congress will probably object to a rise of such magnitude, but in view of the tremendous spending program ahead of us, the figure doesn't seem excessive. We are committed to a scale of defense spending which will almost certainly add more than $16,000,000,000 to the public debt in the next few years. Accordingly no good purpose is served (but considerable harm) to deny the Treasury all the authority needed to permit of a long-range borrowing program.

The method of financing the abnormally large deficits that have to be met is much more important than the question of the precise location of the debt limit. Eventually new taxes will have to be voted to cover some part of the cost of the defense program. But, for the present, borrowing will be the source of needed funds. Wisely the Treasury has emphasized the desirability of tapping the savings of individuals and of institutional investors, such as insurance companies, instead of relying as heavily as heretofore upon commercial banks to purchase Government bonds. This would be done by offering defense bonds in small denominations and savings stamps of the type sold during World War I. Much more extensive popular support of the borrowing program would then be encouraged, especially if interest rates are made reasonably attractive. Bonds bought by drawing upon existing savings simply divert funds from other uses, and hence do not result in an inflationary increase of purchasing power such as follows when bonds are lodged in commercial banks and paid for by the creation of deposits. Furthermore, diversion of private savings to defense uses reduces spending for less essential purposes. Finally, widespread public participation in the financing of the defense program would make for greater national unity and for more intelligent and watchful observation of the spending policies.

Shores Of Tripoli

It was during the Administration of that hero of present-day isolationists, Thomas Jefferson, that the Stars and Stripes were hoisted in triumph over the Tripolitan port of Derna which Gen. Wavell's Army of the Nile is now besieging. The story is worth retelling at this time. In the early nineteenth century, as for a long time before, the Barbary Coast was infested with pirates, who, in a small way, were the prototypes of the Hitlers and Mussolinis of today. They recognized no law but their own interests. Their chief stock in trade was the terror they inspired. And they waxed rich on the ransoms of their victims and the spoils of conquest.

The commercial nations trafficking in the Mediterranean, and they included the newly established United States, were appeasement-minded with regard to these Barbary pirates. It seemed wiser and cheaper to buy them off than to fight them. And from 1796 on the United States had paid the corsair chief of Tripoli an annual tribute of $83,000 so that American commerce in the Middle Sea would not be molested. Five years later, however, the Tripolitan pasha demanded from this Nation an increase of tribute. The demand was refused, and a naval force was sent from the United States to blockade Tripoli. The war dragged on for four years until William Eaton, acting largely on his own, assembled in Alexandria a motley force of Arabs, Egyptians, Greeks, Italians, who were whipped into shape by a dozen marines and marched across the desert to Derna. It took them six weeks, but at the end of that time Eaton, working in conjunction with American men o' war anchored off Derna, was able to capture the city and raise the American flag. The pasha capitulated, agreed to relinquish his demands, and released Americans whom he had previously taken captive.

As it happened, the job ultimately had to be done over again, for, after the victory over the corsairs had been won, it was allowed to slip through American hands, even as happened to that greater victory won by the United States in 1918. But in 1815 an American squadron headed by Capts. Decatur and Bainbridge again visited Tripoli and this time permanently brought the pasha to book.

A Chiel Amang 'Em

The vitality of Wendell L. Willkie amazed everybody who traveled with him on his Presidential campaign. His defeat, apparently, failed to slow him down, as is shown in his present tour in England. He has already been through a schedule of visits and fact-finding and interviews which would take most people a month to liquidate. The way he has gone about his task is likewise impressive. Not content with his letters of introduction to the great and the near-great, he has talked to all and sundry, the "Bobby" on his beat, the hotel chambermaid, and a passing "Tommy." His only difficulty seems to be that he doesn't quite understand the varigated lingo of his interlocutors. This isn't exactly surprising. There is more of what the late Lord Balfour calls "particularism" of language in little England than there is in big America. All in all, however, the sight of Mr. Willkie "takking noates," as Robert Burns described a reporter's lot, is a reminder that when he took to the law the newspaper business lost a pretty good reporter.

STONE TREASURE

Do you remember how we took the stones
We found in the wide fields and in the brook
Where the clear water slid over the rocks,
And the hand slipped on the wet treasure we held?
We carried them home . . . the red earth caught
In the cracks of those we took from the fields,
And water leaving its mark on the others.
Water and earth were gone when we came home
And laid them in nests of new-cut grass,
As though we hoped to hatch some wonder there
In the warm silence of the summer noon.
Do you remember how the morning came,
And we went out to find the nests we made
Still sweet with summer, but a little dry,
And how we hurled the stones against the street,
Splitting them open to the broken vein,
To the bright glitter and the speckled white . . .
And how we left them open like dark seeds
Forever lost to water and to earth.

Cuba As A 49th State

I would like to ask Senator Smathers how he came to the conclusion that the Cubans would welcome his resolution to admit Cuba as a 49th state of this Union. I spent a year in Cuba studying conditions and mingled with all classes from high officials and intellectuals to the starving poor. Not once did I hear a word in favor of the United States. On the contrary, everyone seems to blame us for their misery.

If Senator Smathers heard anything else, the statements must have come from a few unpatriotic opportunists whose personal interests would be served by the change he proposes. It is our ignorance of realities and our sense of superiority toward the Latin-American peoples which have largely contributed to making us unpopular there.

Readers On Col. Lindbergh's Testimony

May I commend you on your editorial concerning the testimony of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House. I attended the hearing in full, and came home dismayed, not so much by the testimony offered, which seemed to me to hold little or no weight unless viewed through eyes as biased as those of the witness, but by the volume of applause that greeted each "ex-cathedra" pronouncement of our inability to alter the situation in which we Americans find ourselves. If such sentiments of the futility of action, decision, and defensive strategy are largely held in this country, then indeed, have we the seed of internal strife, for there are too many like myself who cannot so supinely accept what Col. Lindbergh offers.

That there are many who feel entirely in disagreement with Col. Lindbergh was evidenced by the applause given the fearless testimony of Miss Dorothy Thompson two days later. Of the two witnesses, no one can deny that Miss Thompson spoke with the spirit of American tradition standing behind her. I could only think when she answered Representative Fish's question whether she favored our entering the war with her bold "I favor the defense of the liberty of the United States, without war if possible, with war if necessary," of Patrick Henry making history and tradition which has been valid for one hundred and fifty years, when he said, "Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery?"

Can Col. Lindbergh deny that what he would have us accept as the price of peace is less than chains and slavery? Viewing the plight of those nations which have sought to keep peace the Hitler way, that phrase is no rhetorical device. I believe that the great mass of his fellow citizens will appraise the Colonel's advice in the same way their forefathers would have done.

Your editorial "Will-To-Lose" was as poignant and to the point as it was restrained and considerate, under the circumstances that spawned it. Only one extremely important point, in my opinion, was not brought out. Col. Lindbergh, who unquestionably knows airplane engines, stressed the fact that there had never been successful invasion of any country by air. Neither had anyone ever solo-fighted the Atlantic until Lindbergh did it!

"It was back in '27 that our Lindy pioneered.
While others stood by doing nothing, but sneered;
He proved his plan had merit then, by risking all—
Let us heed him now so that Old Glory will not fall."

MILTON F. LAMBERT.
Baltimore, Md., Jan. 25.

How right and patriotic Ambassador Joseph Kennedy and Col. Lindbergh are in telling the American people of the facts of the European situation in a frank manner will be fully appreciated years from now when people think more calmly and are free from political reprisal. Both men are competent to testify; their facts have not been refuted. But they have been attacked personally, while it is crystal clear that the two men would more than favorably compare with their critics in character, in intelligence, in patriotism and in good purpose.

Our political leaders, including the very highest, talk now as if a nation or nations are just outside of our gates ready to pounce upon us. It seems to me that we talk more about our patriotism, our strength, our unity and our invincible courage to face the enemy than the British who are really face to face with the enemy and in a state of war with him. JOHN K. McLAUGHLIN.
Washington, Jan. 24.

I would like to know why Col. Lindbergh was asked to testify. We all have known from his own words that he is in awe of Hitler's might. So are we, and so is the whole world. But if Lindbergh had had a proper sense of the threat to America, a proper sense of our state of unpreparedness, an idea of patriotism, or an appreciation of the unwillingness of the rank and file to realize the danger of a possible invasion, he would not have given utterance to his convictions of defeatism.

There are those of us who have followed Hitler's raids and realize that he has accomplished everything that he has threatened. Logically we assume that he will follow out his program, and logically we feel that America should lend quick and all possible aid to England in order to save the war from coming to our own continent.

Our pioneer forebears created their revolution on constructive lines to build a nation of homes and placid living. Hitler's revolution is a form of hatred and malice and destruction. Therefore, in self-defense all America ought to subscribe to any means of defense that will save America for Americans.

E. T. STEEL.
Mechanicsville, Pa., Jan. 26.

Since someone has been bold enough to criticize Col. Lindbergh for his famous testimony in behalf of and love for the United States, I want to say that I have a great respect for his ideas. Who has had a better or even as good a chance to form an opinion of this situation in world affairs? Col. Lindbergh has proven himself a clear thinker, capable of meeting difficult situations with a clear mind and the best self-control a human could have. I am inclined to think he is more patriotic than many who would rush us into war. He has my congratulations as to his conduct.

With The Tide

We have gone too far in our thinking to admit of any proposal toward a negotiated peace, no matter how far above a war-victorious peace it may be, although I agree with Col. Lindbergh that a peace predicated on such a price is not a peace in the true sense of the word or one that any Christian nation could be proud of, because the very bitterness engendered in the hearts of conquered peoples is a gnawing cancer that never heals, and the traits developed necessarily in the lives of a conquering people submerge so much of the spiritual force that should have engineered that peace in the first place that the "last state of that man is worse than the first." I believe Britain, in her agony, has realized this. But she can not do otherwise now. I do not believe a normal man, if he is reasoning, will gainsay the deduction here given. Nevertheless, our people are living up to all the light they at present possess. In their mental gropings for security from such thralldom as a conquering Hitler would bring, and in this light they are aligning themselves with the side which they believe is nearest right, nay, which they know is nearest right, the English one. A discerning mind sees this and will now drop useless discussion. Germany cannot negotiate any peace with any power, and live up to the spirit behind it. The spirit in which peace must be made is the power producing a lasting one, and Hitler represents not that spirit. I believe the German people as individuals, if not a nation, are realizing their need of freedom from bondage, but they must come to the point where they will throw off the yoke before freedom can come. The very essence of freedom lies in the power of public and mass indignation against wrong. It is not a wise procedure to try now to turn the tide. We must go with it. I do not mean war at all by this statement. I am convinced that the secret of Britain's strength, her endurance and increasing capacity to endure, which no mere human can explain, comes from the knowledge revealed from On High, that she is in the right, and right prevails, in spite of everything to the contrary. I think our people should wake up to the spiritual force behind Britain's wonderful demonstration and shame ourselves for not having realized it before, and accord her our last drop of moral strength, of moral support, our utmost in material aid, without equivocation as to what Britain's future return may be to us.

Leon Henderson

The Post of January 24 reported that Leon Henderson, chief price-watcher for the Defense Commission, had read the Riot Act to a group of lumbermen, that he shouted and swore at them, and stalked out of the meeting in high dudgeon without so much as a fare-thee-well.

Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great?

Such undignified deportment ill becomes a Government official in his public relations. If recalcitrant industries must be disciplined, let it be done in a firm but gentlemanly manner. Henderson's strutting and blustering, his shouting and swearing, is the behavior of a diminutive dictator, not that of the representative of a democratic state.

The Post Impressionist

O Rare Joe Miller

"We know very well," wrote the critic, "that all comics spend all their off-time studying Joe Miller's joke book." I must assume the commentator was exaggerating to achieve an effect, for I have scanned the joke book in question. Any broadcasting buffoon who depended for his scripts upon that melange of mistaken comedy, or even bowed to that brand of humor, could not expect to appear in the Cooperative Analysis of Broadcasting. "The jests," wrote a Miller biographer, Sidney Lee, "are of a homely tone, often lack point, and rarely excite merriment in the modern reader." I can approve that assertion. Although easily committed to mirth, I did not find a real laugh in the lot.

For years, hearing radio comics' references to "Joe Millers," I planned to look up the origin of the expression, to identify the individual whose name is applied to weak-kneed witticism. According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, "Any time-worn jest has, somewhat unjustly, come to be called 'a Joe Miller.'"

The strange circumstance is that Joseph (or Josias) Miller had nothing to do with the futile farrago of fun bearing his name. An illiterate English comedian, Miller was born in 1684. His name appeared on a Drury Lane playbill in 1709, when he portrayed Teague in "The Committee." Trinculo in "The Tempest," First Gravedigger in "Hamlet," and Marplot in "The Busybody," were among his favorite roles. In 1718 he acted with Colley Cibber in "Betterton's Amorous Widow." Because of "some mean economy of the managers" Miller deserted Drury Lane in 1731 and transferred to Goodman's Fields. Seven years later he returned to Drury Lane as a witch in "Macbeth."

After the performance, Joe foregathered with fellow actors in the Black Jack tavern in Portsmouth Street or the Bull's Head in Spring Gardens. In rollicking taproom assemblages Miller was notable for his grave demeanor. An engraving shows a big hat, long, curly wig and eyes uncommonly sad for a comedian. Joe, admired as a mime and cherished as a comrade, was a boon companion of William Hogarth, satirical artist. In gentle joshing, tavern associates attributed to the man who was uproarious onstage and serious off, various bon mots bruited about the town. Actually, as many a comedian after him, Joe owed his laughs to others' lines.

On April 13, 1738, he played his last benefit at Drury Lane and died the following August 15. A tombstone bearing a poetic epitaph by Stephen Duck was erected over his grave in the parish burial ground of St. Clement Danes in Portugal Street. The tombstone was broken up and used in the construction of an addition to King's College Hospital, erected on the cemetery site in 1852.

Scarcely a year after his final curtain call, the collection of "chestnuts" called "Joe Miller's Jests, or the Wit's Vade-Mecum" was issued; price one shilling. T. Read, publisher, commissioned John Mottley (1692-1750) to compile the work. Although the publisher's blurb boasted that the jokes had been "carefully collected in the company, and many of them transcribed from the mouth, of the facetious gentleman whose name the bear," only three of the anecdotes have him for hero. Aware of the advertising value of a well-known name, publishers of anthologies of amusement did not hesitate to attribute them to such celebrities as Tarlton, Ben Johnson, Polly Peachum and Pinkethman, with whose company of strolling players Miller had performed.

A best seller, "Joe Miller's Jests" went into its second and third editions within a year of publication in 1739 and was often reprinted thereafter. From 247 gags in the original edition, the number grew until 1,286 were in the volume published under the same title in New York in 1865.

The custom of crediting—the credit is questionable—wisecracks to Miller, which began in London barrooms, widened as, after his death, he became a legendary figure. The popularity of numerous editions of his alleged Jests built up, albeit falsely, his reputation as wit and raconteur. Aiming at life-of-the-party renown, misguided people memorized remarks in various joke-books and quoted them to amuse their associates. Repetition palled. The auditors, agonized by puerile puns and hoary wheezes, dinned in their defenseless ears, blamed them on the Miller compilation, no matter what their source. "That's a Joe Miller!" became an indictment and is now established in our language as a term of risible opprobrium. EDWIN J. BARRETT.

The Grouse Flies High

"WARS," said the Grouse, laying down the morning paper, with its usual picture of a gutted church, "are fought for many ostensible purposes, such as democracy, the rights of the weak, or their opposites, autocratic control and the rights of the strong, but what they are really fought for are to hold or to get things, such as oil, or iron, or black loam soil, or copper, or gold, and the routes to control access to these things."

THOMPSON

"So I have heard."

"Yes," said the Grouse. "I'm not suggesting it is an original idea. But why do people want these things? They want them in order to live; in order to be fed, clothed, and sheltered, or in order to live in the style to which they have become accustomed, or at a standard they can imagine they would like."

"True enough."

The Grouse put Dundee marmalade on his toast. "But did you ever hear of a war being fought for air?"

"For the control of the air, you mean?"

"No, for air. For air to breathe. I call your attention to the fact that air to breathe is a primary necessity of Lebensraum. It is the first, basic necessity of life. The newborn infant is swung by his heels, in order to open his lungs to air, and from that moment, until his last gasp, he cannot live more than a few seconds without it. Air is more important for survival than butter or guns, and yet you never heard of anyone fighting a war for it."

"Don't be silly. Air is free. There's more air than anybody knows what to do with. Nobody will ever fight for air."

"CORRECT. And now I will tell you why this war of the Nazis is silly—not why it is wicked, which it also is, but why it is just plain silly . . . Especially all that stuff about 'have' and 'have-not' nations, and thousand-year Reichs.

"The basic necessities for the people of this planet are shortly to become approximately as plentiful as air. When I say 'shortly,' I mean in the next half century or so. For 300 years, men have been investigating the secret of alchemy, but they've made more progress in the last ten than in the previous 290.

"You read the wrong news items. You concentrate on trifling matters such as the surrender of Italian troops at Bardia and overlook UR 235."

"Is that a submarine?"

"By no means. It is the beginning of something to make submarines nonsensical. It is the number by which we describe the isolation of one of the components of the element uranium; it is the definite beginning of the release of atomic energy, and it will shortly usher in a new age, which will be known as the age of inexhaustible abundance.

"That age will eliminate everything for which this war is being waged by 'have-nots,' and will create only one huge new problem; What to do with spare time.

"WE ARE on the eve of a new socialism, which will not be anything like the socialism that Norman Thomas talks about, or Stalin and Hitler think they represent, though for what reason they should think they represent anyone but themselves, I have no idea. I call your attention to the fact that Marx lived in the wake of Malthus, who believed that the resources of the world were shortly to be exhausted, and that there were going to be too many people in the world . . . too little food and metals and other things to take care of them all. So he thought up the class struggle. Marx, Madame, is dead; so is Malthus; so is Hitler and his lebensraum. They belong to the past. They are loitering about destructively in people's minds and in other people's air and backyards.

"The socialism of the future will not consist of bureaucrats trying to get hold of apparatuses that they are much too ignorant to run, which is called 'socializing the means of production.' It will consist of distributing free the basic necessities of life, such as so-and-so many calories of food, so-and-so much essential clothing, and so-and-so much decent shelter. Nobody will buy them. Did you ever hear of buying air? You can't sell it because there's too much of it lying around ready to be sniffed up by anybody—Jew or Gentile, black or yellow. You've heard of Hitler telling the Jews, 'Get out of my banks and get out of my gardens,' but you never heard even Hitler say, 'Get out of my air.' That's why."

THE GROUSE ate up the toast and marmalade and knocked the top neatly off a boiled egg.

"That is to say that is what can happen unless prevented by the plain, ordinary cussedness of the human race, which is, as you have often head me remark, a strange breed of animals who have apparently been given minds only to go out of them.

"If, for instance, a few more steps should be discovered while the present fracas is going on, that maniac in Berlin might decide to use the new discovery to produce, from long-distance, artifical earthquakes and blow off all the rest of the map except that inhabited by the super-race. But it won't come quite as quickly as that, thank God.

"The only problem in the world today that is totally unsolved is what to do with the behavior of the human race, that is possessed of such genius and cussedness, that is so adult in parts and so infantile in others.

"The moment problems are on the verge of solution—usually of a solution brought about in laboratories by some grubby little men whose names nobody ever heard of—some maniac with a radio personality or animal magnetism decides the time has come to right an injustice that no longer exists and to put the whole world into a blackout to get a place in the sun. Then the herd starts going after oil to run motors when their backyards are teeming with electrons."

"YES, BUT the behavior of the human race is what this war is really about. And you say that's important, the only problem not even potentially solved."

"Yes, that's true. But pull 'em up for a minute and tell 'em what the future holds for them—what things can be harnessed and used if they will stop tearing each other apart over a tank of gasoline or a mustache. Is that a face to launch a thousand ships?

"Tell them to consider the free air, and how would they like a little more of the same freedom in the matter of food, clothes and shelter.

"That's probably the only good thing this war will produce—in the long run—the realization of what I'm telling you. Trying to blow each other up, they're getting further along the way of finding out why it's silly to blow anybody up.

"God certainly moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

Harvard Business Scholarships Open Until March 15

Students wishing to apply for scholarships in the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration in the year 1941-42 should file their applications not later than March 15, it was announced yesterday.

In making the announcement, officials of the Harvard Business School Club of Washington pointed out a number of different scholarships are open to deserving students.

They include two national scholarships of $1,000 each and six "service" scholarships with $300 stipends, for which students are expected to work 450 hours per year. In addition, students who achieve a satisfactory average in their first half-year are eligible to apply for a loan of not more than $300 from the school loan fund, which covers tuition for the second half year.

Indian Fighter Decries Barbarity Of Modern War

Brookline, Mass., Jan. 28. (AP)—Gen. William Henry Bisbee, one-time Indian fighter who received his commission as a lieutenant from Abraham Lincoln, observed his 101st birthday today with hopes that Britain would win the war, and with regrets that modern warfare "has become so murderous."

The oldest retired U. S. Army officer, who followed with the interest of a keen campaigner the daily war developments, took time out from a steady stream of callers to express his sorrow that women and children have become victims of bombs.

Gen. Bisbee, who retired from active service 39 years ago, said that during his army career, military men attempted to carry on war with a "clean method" and that women and children were moved from battle areas.

Trading Hostages

EDWARD R. STETTINIUS has named Isador Lubin labor adviser of the priorities division of the defense organization, and John Biggers will probably soon request Philip Murray and William Green to serve on the production division's planning control board. After William S. Knudsen, Stettinius and Biggers are the two most important businessmen concerned in the defense effort, Lubin is the most influential individual in Sidney Hillman's defense labor group, and the positions of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. chieftains do not need to be underlined.

What needs underlining is the significance of this sudden fraternizing between labor and industrial leaders. In recent months, the defense organization has been increasingly afflicted by a schism between the businessmen on one hand, and the labor representatives and New Dealers on the other. When the President vested responsibility for defense production in the Office of Production Management, and give joint control of OPM to Knudsen and Hillman, the schism appeared unbridgeable. The President's order was issued after a sordid squabble between the two factions. It left each thoroughly mistrustful of the other. The squabble might have been avoided, had Hillman been in Washington to confer at the time with Knudsen, with whom he gets on well. As it happened, Hillman was in Baltimore, ill at Johns Hopkins Hospital Fortunately, after issuance of the order, Knudsen and Biggers visited Hillman at the Hospital, and had a long, frank talk with him. It was then decided to repair the results of the squabble, so far as possible, by what might be described as an exchange of hostages between the warring factions.

THE POINT at issue between the factions was the point always at issue in guerrilla outbreaks in the Government—who was to be boss. The exchange of hostages means, in effect, that the labor people and New Dealers are to have fingers in the businessmen's pie, and that the businessmen are to be allowed to give an occasional touch to the pie of labor.

Stettinius' priorities division and Biggers' production division—the two key units in the defense setup—are to have more than mere labor advice. Besides Lubin as general adviser, Stettinius will also have a special labor adviser for each of his division's five subsections. Thus labor will have a voice in the formulation of many highly controversial policies. In the steel business, for example the manufacturers have steadfastly opposed large expansion, on the ground that with the imposition of reasonable priorities, steel capacity is great enough to meet all needs. The New Dealers have fought hard for expansion, and labor, naturally interested in new jobs, has demanded a say in the matter. Now the say has been granted.

THEN IN Biggers' production division, besides Green and Murray or their substitutes on the planning control board, labor advisers may also be appointed to work with Biggers' chief assistants. The definite selection of Green and Murray has been delayed by a curious situation. Because of the bad relations between him and John Lewis, Hillman was long unable to consult the C. I. O. on his defense organization work. Because he could not consult the C. I. O. he was debarred from consulting the A. F. of L. either. Lewis' retirement from the C. I. O. in Murray's favor removed the difficulty, but Hillman, was taken ill soon thereafter and because he had not talked to them himself, he did not wish Biggers to be the first man from the defense setup to make overtures to the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. leaders. Nothing seems to remain to be straightened out, however, but the protocol of the situation.

On the labor side, Hillman has long had one leading business man, E. D. Bransome, of the Vanadium Corporation, among his aides. Possibly others will be recruited to meet the terms of the new truce.

THE TRUCE was made after much sound and fury. Shortly after the President established the OPM the business group settled among themselves that Frederick Eaton, a corporation lawyer acting as Knudsen's counsel, should be OPM secretary, and that Roy Jackson, a U. S. Steel official in Stettinius' crowd, should be administrative officer. Both men were anathema to the New Dealers and labor people, and Hillman's subordinates complained that they were being ignored. The complaints, as it happened, were not correct, since Biggers and Knudsen had obtained Hillman's approval of the Eaton and Jackson appointments on their visit to Baltimore. And now Jackson has exhibited a sort of symbolic fair-mindedness, by giving Hillman offices centrally located between Knudsen's and Stettinius' in the OPM new quarters in the Social Security building.

Knudsen is going to Baltimore regularly to see Hillman, and the relation between the two men is as good as ever. The relations between their henchmen are currently improving. A modus vivendi has been found. But the trouble preceding the discovery of the modus vivendi, and the nature of the arrangement itself, both illustrate another major defense problem which has not been solved at all.

EVERY SPECIAL interest, economic, political and bureaucratic, has demanded its share in the defense work. Instead of telling all the special interests to go to the devil, the President has always tried to compromise between them. Thus the businessmen and labor people have to be elaborately reconciled, and machinery for constant and time-wasting consultation has to be set up. Thus the claims of no department are ever passed over and jobs which should be done by one man are split between half a dozen Government agencies.

An Argument Over Funds

THE HOD-CARRIERS' and Common Laborers' Union, a racket which has been extorting vast amounts of money from American day laborers on defense projects and other works, is involved in an interesting civil action filed in Albany, demanding an accounting of funds of a big tunnel workers' local, known as No. 17. The defendants are Samuel Nuzzo, of Newburgh, N. Y., a labor politician and tavern-keeper, and other officers of the local.

PEGLER

The plaintiffs are dissident members who charge that, whereas there should be at least $400,000 in the treasury, Mr. Nuzzo, who rules the organization with dictatorial powers, recently said there was only $2,000, or $20,000 on hand. Total collections during the last four or five years should have been around $600,000, according to the rebellious workmen, who are willing to concede that as much as $200,000 of this money could have been spent for legislative purposes, including per capita taxes to the international, which formerly had headquarters at Quincy, Mass., but moved to Washington last April.

The local was formed in 1936 to embrace workers employed on the construction of the 400-mile Delaware aqueduct in the span of three New York counties—Orange, Ulster and Sullivan.

NEWBURGH, the seat of Orange County and the headquarters of Mr. Nuzzo, is also the official headquarters of Henry Hirschberger, the district attorney, or prosecutor, of Orange County, who bobs up in this case in the strange role of counsel for a defendant who, conceivably, could be accused of felony if the civil action were successful.

Mr. Hirschberger, however, says there is nothing questionable in his conduct as counsel for a man who might be charged with a crime in the same case. He explains that the position of prosecutor is a part-time job in Orange County, and that there have been cases in which he found it necessary to present clients of his private civil practice to the grand jury. Should criminal proceedings develop out of the present case he would merely ask the attorney general of New York to supersede him.

Mr. Hirschberger is an inveterate and versatile politician in a community in which the Nuzzo group is an influential factor. He has been elected repeatedly to his present office, both as a Republican, which is his present faith, and as a Democrat, and is now a member of the Republican State committee.

FREDERICK DUSING, one of the plaintiffs, filed an affidavit charging that Nuzzo and others had threatened to beat up any member who opposed their rule of the local, which has 6,000 members, and that some who have had the courage to protest have lost their jobs.

Moreover, the rebellious men have been summoned for a union trial before the "executive committee" on charges of disloyalty to the union and its officers, including Nuzzo, none of whom ever was elected by the members.

Nuzzo got his job by appointment from Joseph V. Moreschi, the international president, who never was elected himself but rose to the presidency by some obscure and unconventional process in 1926 following the death of Dominick Allesandro. However, the last convention of the international was held in 1911, so it will be seen that the affairs of the present union are not commonly intrusted to the paying members.

IN ALBANY, Justice William H. Murray, of the Supreme Court, issued a temporary injunction forbidding acts of terrorism against the plaintiffs and impounding the books. Further arguments will be held in Kingston, N. Y., on February 7, when Mr. Hirschberger will represent that Nuzzo is merely a subordinate of Moreschi, who appointed him, and that the local is under the direct supervision of the international, which never holds conventions. This international is the same which, in Chicago, handed out a sheaf of local charters to a notorious racketeer named Mike Carozzo, recently deceased, whose union graft had made him one of the richest men, in cash position, in the city of Chicago.

Briefly the plaintiffs want to know what happened to their $600,000 over a period of four or five years, demand an election of officers and, of course, seek any retributive justice that may be indicated by the facts concerning the disposition of their money. They pay initiation fees of from $33 to $76 and dues of $2 or $2.50 a month, plus assessments, of which, the petition says, eight have been levied in the last six months.

There will be more of this.

Italy's Tragedy

By Barnet Nover

Germany's Newest Conquest

IN THE SIX MONTHS that have elapsed since the fall of France, Hitler has partially succeeded in adding two more independent nations to the eight he had previously conquered. One of these latest victims is Rumania. The other is Italy.

Like Poland, Norway, the Netherlands and other countries overrun by the Nazi juggernaut, Rumania and Italy are defeated nations. Rumania was defeated without the firing of a shot. She was defeated nonetheless and is today suffering the evil consequences of such a disaster. She has been forced to give up Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina to Russia and a large slice of Transylvania to Hungary. She is left with only the rump of her once extensive domain and that rump is occupied by German troops and is, to all intents and purposes, ruled from Berlin. For the regime which is nominally in power at Bucharest is only a puppet regime subject at every turn to Hitler's orders.

IN RUMANIA the process of assimilating the country into the Third Reich is now well on its way. It is only just beginning in Italy, but is, however, proceeding with great rapidity.

It is at last being admitted in Berlin that German troops are in Italy. They are described as "air force detachments," as the advance guard of the Nazi forces that conquered Norway and the Low Countries were described as "tourists." Undoubtedly there are German "air force detachments" in Italy. But we can bank on it that there are also others whose purpose is not so much to fight the British as to bring the Italians under subjection.

Great Britain made no effort other than by verbal pleas to keep France in line when the latter decided on capitulation. Germany, we can be sure, will not be so merciful to her ally. Rather than permit Italy to make a separate peace, she will occupy the country, placing her garrisons in every corner of the kingdom from the Brenner Pass to the Straits of Sicily, ruling through puppets if possible, directly if necessary.

FORTUNATELY for Hitler the path of German conquest has already been paved by his Axis partner. Mussolini has now no choice but to be the pliant instrument of the Fuehrer. For it is Italy's tragedy today that her own interests are now obscured by the interests of one man. For personal ends, Mussolini is prepared to sacrifice his nation. Yet Italy's tragedy is the tragedy of all totalitarian dictatorships. It is Germany's tragedy, too. And Russia's.

A cycle of history which began in Italy 18 years ago is thus approaching its completion. The excuse for the march on Rome in 1922 was that the Italian nation could only be saved by Mussolini. Now Mussolini can be saved only by the sacrifice of his nation. And if the Italians are unwilling to perform this act of salvage, Hitler is prepared to compel them to do so regardless of what it may cost them.

The Italians are an earthy, practical people who long ago lost whatever delusions of grandeur they may have possessed in the past. Mussolini tried to make them into first century Romans. In the process he destroyed Italy's freedom, shed the blood of thousands of Italians, wasted the national substance. And now because the Italians suffered his rule, they face the loss of even their independence.

The choice that faces Italy today is not a pleasant one. She is being ground between a powerful enemy and a ruthless and merciless ally. To abandon the struggle against Great Britain and Greece would only mean a further loss of the prestige that Italy can no longer regain anyhow and the possible loss of territory which has been far more of a liability than an asset to the kingdom. Yet to abandon the struggle abroad would only mean to invite a struggle at home. Already the German occupation is under way. And there can be no question that Mussolini would not hesitate to use Germans to shoot down his fellow countrymen if he found it necessary to do so to save the shadow of power he once exercised.

YET FOR GERMANY the occupation of Italy, like the occupation of Rumania, is not a step toward victory, but only a safeguard against defeat. The German legions who have moved into the Balkan kingdom and are moving into the Italian peninsula are there only because Hitler has failed to win that victory over Great Britain which loomed so close last June and July. In occupying Italy he will only intensify the unwillingness of Italians to continue fighting. He will not be able to make them fight any harder or any better than they have done. But at least he may save the country from being used as a base of operation against him. Yet, whatever happens, Italy bids fair to become a battlefield. That is the legacy of 18 years of Fascist rule. That is the price Italians are paying for Mussolini.

Lend-Lease And British Assets

By Ernest Lindley

Some Think Realistic Approach Would Help Aid Bill

THE LEND-LEASE BILL means that part of the cost of the war—an unknown sum—is to be borne by the American taxpayer. There is a suspicion, both on Capitol Hill and in the Administration, that the courage of the British people and our admiration for it are being used as a cloak for a slick financial deal at our expense. This suspicion is being voiced, privately at least, by men who favor giving the British what they cannot pay for.

It may be true that the British have spent or made commitments against most of their gold, securities and valuable direct property holdings in the United States. Before that is proved, the figures submitted by Secretary Morgenthau will have to be more carefully examined than they have been.

But Morgenthau's original figures omitted assets in this country owned by Canada and other parts of the British Empire. They omitted British holdings in Canada and other parts of the Western Hemisphere which could be transferred to American hands. They omitted British and empire holdings in other parts of the world, including Oceania.

THE MORGENTHAU figures also omitted the resources of Great Britain's non-British allies. The Dutch alone have enormous property holdings here and elsewhere outside Europe. Their interest in the outcome of the war, both in Europe and in the Pacific, is more vital than ours.

Possibly the British government cannot compel the Dutch to share the cost of their liberation. But has a real attempt been made? There is feeling in Congress that American taxpayers should not be asked to pay part of the cost of the war while the Dutch, with a far greater stake in its outcome, hoard their wealth.

Those who assert that this is "our war" naturally do not wish to inquire into British capacity to pay. They feel that we should be happy to pay while the British fight. Many of them feel ashamed that we are not over there fighting ourselves. This, I think, is a minority viewpoint, just as is the indifference to the outcome expressed by Lindbergh.

THE PREVAILING view in Congress seems to be that this is not "our war" but that we want the British to win. Some would say it is merely to our advantage to have the British win. It would save money and energy for rearmament over a long period and enable us to look to the future with greater confidence. Others would say that our interest in British victory is greater than that, although we would survive if they lost.

NO OPINION within this range can be reduced to an exact financial appraisal of our interest in British victory. The general disposition is to let the British have what they need. If they were bankrupt, there would be little opposition to giving them outright all the weapons we could supply, with due regard to our security if they failed. But there is reluctance to put an additional load on the American taxpayer while the British and their allies still have plenty of assets which we could use.

Before the President made his lend-lease proposal, policy concerning British capacity to pay was discussed extensively within his Administration. There was no demand that we strip the British of all their overseas assets in return for munitions. But several of the President's aides felt that, before receiving loans or gifts, the British and their allies should use up not only their assets in this country but selected assets in Canada and the Caribbean, and perhaps elsewhere. It was widely felt also that the British should be assured now that when those assets were exhausted we would assume part of the cost of the war.

The lend-lease bill, or something very much like it, is needed to assure the British and their allies, and to notify the world, that the settled policy of the United States is to provide them with weapons and other supplies. It recognizes that our motive in providing munitions is not commercial, but grows out of our interest in the security of Great Britain and British naval power.

But we have no particular interest in preserving the overseas financial empire of Great Britain. While the returns on this accumulated wealth are important to the British, they are not vital. They could not even seem vital to a people who are fighting for their very existence.

Without resort to stiff terms or hard bargaining, the British and their chief allies could be required to transfer to us all their property holdings in the United States, and some selected properties in the Caribbean and perhaps elsewhere. Almost certainly this would ease the passage of the lend-lease bill.

ALL ABOARD FOR THE SCHOOLHOUSE IN THE SKY—Aviation cadets, led by Instructor Charles J. Lunn, board a Pan American transoceanic clipper plane at Miami, Fla., to go aloft and study position finding. Each man carries the navigation equipment he will need during the day's studies

450 Study 'Avigation' in Clipper Classrooms

A new word has appeared in the language of defense. Its meaning embodies a phase of aviation vitally important to America's warbirds.

"Avigation," a corruption of the word navigation, is used to denote position-finding-aloft, and it is being taught 450 young men in a "flying school house" at Miami, Fla.

Pan American Airways has taken the students under its wings for the War Department. Teacher of this new class is Charles J. Lunn, chief navigation instructor of the airline. The schoolhouse is a transoceanic clipper plane fitted with ten classrooms.

Each day, students carrying cases of navigation instruments, follow Instructor Lunn into the giant plane to soar above the Atlantic coastline. Through hatches of the "flying classrooms" they sight their octants, solve problems of position, and mark their findings on charts under the watchful eye of Lunn.

Where Sleeping in School Is Permitted

Youngsters in the John Eaton School, Thirty-fourth and Lowell Streets Northwest, are not commiting a major offense when they sleep in class—in fact, sleeping is part of the curriculum.

As regularly as they eat lunch, pupils in the kindergarden and first and second grades take daily, supervised naps on the 30 cots which have been installed in one of the classrooms.

The kindergarden dreams en masse from 10:45 to 11:15 a. m., the first graders from 1 to 2 p. m. and the second graders from 2 to 2:30 p. m. Each child has two bed sheets which are made into sleeping bags and put between warm blankets on each bed.

When not in use, the bags are hung on the wall in a little sack with a number on it so that they will not get mixed.

Mrs. Lillian S. Goodall, principal of the school, says the reason for adding sleep to the Eaton's classroom projects is that lower class children formerly attended the grade school only half a day, whereas now they go until 3 o'clock.

Children at the Eaton school also have started a plan to help feed the birds in the neighborhood when the ground is covered with ice and snow.

This week they have been collecting their bread crumbs at lunch time and putting them on feeding boards outside the school windows.

Hearing of the youngsters' feeding project, the Washington Animal Rescue League has offered to donate a cup of seed to Eaton and all other schools where pupils start to save at lunch for the birds.

Manual training classes at the school are planning to erect regular feeding tables for the birds, with sheltered boards out of reach of cats and dogs.

She's the Voice of Yehudi . . .

Yehudi was tracked down yesterday and turned out to be an attractive young brunette.

It all started when Washington's younger set discovered you can dial Y-E-H-U-D-I and get the weather forecast. This is true in some cases because of the sensitivity of the intricate dial system, but is not in every instance. Officials of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. advise you to dial or call WEather 1212.

When you do, the report you hear will be a recent one teletyped to the phone company's weather headquarters at the North Potomac office, Fourteenth and R Streets Northwest, from the United States Weather Bureau. Reports are sent at 6 and 10 a. m. and 6 and 10 p. m. with special messages on sudden weather changes.

The voice you hear may be that of Mrs. Rebecca Aylor, of 929 Virginia Avenue Southwest, or one of 34 other operators detailed to equipment allows for any possible breakdown.

MRS. REBECCA AYLOR—It's her voice you hear when you dial Y-E-H-U-D-I

Mrs. Aylor, along with the others, has perfected a diction that makes such a recorded word as "temperature" musical to the ears of a sleepy laborer who may call Weather 1212 at 3 a. m. to find out whether he should go to work at dawn.

Snow means heavy business for Weather 1212. Last Sunday brought more than 22,000 calls. Calls are most numerous on Thursday and Friday when Washingtonians are planning their weekends. An all-time high was reached shortly after the service was started last April when 35,000 calls in one day were recorded.

The average runs to approximately 9,000 persons a day who dial hoping to hear an operator's recorded voice murmur, "Fair and warmer."

Walking Right Is Something To Be Learned

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU have been walking right along for some 20 to 30 years, it probably never occurs to you that you might not know how! But so few women do walk well that the beauty schools take it for granted you need about six easy lessons with pointers on how to enter a room, sit down, get up, and leave. As we said, you can do this salon stuff solo. All you need is a full-length mirror so you can watch your step.

To begin with, let's see you "make an entrance." Walk toward the mirror as if you were just coming into a room. But wait! The first rule is to pause at the threshold and pull yourself apart—your poise depends on a good stretch through the midriff. This stretch lifts the chest and head and makes you look like somebody!

Keep Shoulders Relaxed

Although the chest should be held high, the shoulders should not be raised. They should be relaxed. As you walk, let the arms swing, but only slightly—not as if they were being used to propel you forward! Keep your eyes level. Looking down makes you appear timid and hesitant.

To prevent a sway at the hips, hold the upper legs close together, walk in a fairly straight line, and point the toes straight ahead. You are supposed to move the legs from the hips, so you can forget about the knees—but they should be loose. In taking a step, come down first on the heel, transfer the weight to the ball of the foot, and then push forward to make the next step. Your walk should be a graceful glide.

On reaching the chair, turn around and, before sitting down, locate the edge of the chair seat with the back of one leg. Don't look around to see if the chair is there! Sit well back in the chair, not only for grace, but for the good of your figure. In bending forward, bend only at the hips. Never bend in sections! Maintain a straight line from the top of the head to the base of the spine and you will sit elegantly.

Keep Legs Together

When you are ready to rise, place one foot slightly forward and have the weight on this forward foot so that the back foot is released for the first step away from the chair.

While seated, keep the legs close together. If you cross them, do so at the ankles or above the knees and make sure the toes are always pointing in the same direction.

Just as a matter of checking up, the things to be avoided are these: Entering the room hurriedly, letting the legs drift apart while sitting, slumping down into the chair or trying to get up with the feet parallel and weight equally distributed!

And, finally, when it's all over, the way to leave is to leave!

Shades of the Old Kimono

The kimono sleeve, called in the modern vernacular "dolman sleeve,55 was a new style revival featured at New York's Fashion Futures recently. Peruse the high style fashions previous to World War and you'll find kimono sleeves and peg-top skirts were all the vogue. 1941 brings a revival of these two extreme modes as the dolman sleeve and the draped slit skirt. Rosalind Russell, above, wears a multicolored sheer wool version of the dolman sleeves. They are a trend to watch because they're figure flattering

New Ideas for HomemadeGifts

Such an adorable little footstool with its gaily flowered covering and quaint old-fashioned air! Who'd ever guess that you could make it yourself, using two round breadboards as a base?

For the cover, choose a brightly patterned chintz or cretonne, in colors harmonizing with your other furnishings. Or top off your stool with a gorgeous cover of handmade needlepoint.

To make the stool itself, glue four small wooden blocks or ordinary spools between your breadboards and allow to dry thoroughly. Then, for legs, screw on four doorstops.

For padding the top, cut six circles of cotton batting, the largest the size of the breadboards and the others in graded sizes, each a half inch smaller than the last. Now place the smallest circle on the stool, add the next larger and so on.

Cover all with a piece of batting large enough to reach down to the bottom board and stretch over this a piece of muslin which you tack firmly to the lower breadboard.

And now to tack on your flowered covering, finishing with a crisp frill or perhaps a fluffy fringe. A band of upholsterer's braid give the final touch.

Or how would you like to make a clever, folding sewing stand from a campstool. You can easily—and you can just as easily fix up ordinary tin wastebaskets, tin trays so they'll look like decorator's masterpieces.

You'll find full instructions for making many such decorative objects in our 40-page booklet, "New Ideas for Handmade Gifts." Includes articles for brightening your home, for gifts—among them gay cocktail napkins, fruit or flower baskets, needlepoint bookends, butterfly bedroom slippers, bags and belt set.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "New Ideas for Handmade Gifts," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Mary Haworth's Mail

With 'Perfect Husband and Two Adorable Babies,' Plus 'Everything in the World to Be Happy About,' Woman Is Overcome by Melancholia; She Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is such that I am almost ashamed to confess it; but I shall begin by saying that I am 24 years old and have been married over four years. I have a perfect husband and two adorable babies. Recently, I have begun to have spells of deep melancholia and extreme nervousness. I am unreasonably irritable at times, and try as I will, I cannot prevent such moods.

My husband and babies are the innocent victims of my tirades and I am worried as to the effect of these outbursts on them. I realize my faults and have tried so hard to overcome them. Each time, I promise myself to practise self control when I feel another spell coming on, but it's no use. Either I pour out my rage in a torrent of cross words at my husband, or I chastise one of the babies for some childish prank that amounts to nothing. Almost at once I am overcome with remorse. Tears and apologies inevitably follow.

My husband is very kind and sympathetic. He never gets angry. He knows I don't mean what I say. Usually he says, "Go ahead and get it out of your system. Then you'll be all right." But I know he will reach the limit of his patience one day, and I am afraid by children may grow to fear and hate me. Yet in every other respect, I sincerely believe I am a good wife and mother. We are not rich, but we live comfortably, with all the necessities and some of the luxuries of life. My husband thinks I am the best cook in the world and I take especial pride in the appearance of the children and myself.

I know there is nothing organically wrong with me. It is entirely functional. I suppose you will tell me to see a psychiatrist, but there are no psychiatrists in our small community. My physician is a general country practitioner and I am sure he would chide me, were I to tell him about my behavior. Won't you please think over my problem and try to help me? I don't want to be an unhappy, neurotic woman, when I have everything in the world to be happy about. Sincerely yours, EMILY ANNE.

Intellectual Integrity Guarantees Recovery

DEAR EMILY ANNE: In a general way, you have your problem intellectually so well in hand that one has the highest hopes of your speedy, complete recovery, when once you have availed yourself of competent psychiatric counsel. The surpassing insight, objectivity, honesty and candor which you bring to a consideration of your "functional" distress bespeaks a high order of intelligence as well as basic emotional stability. These qualities of personality, plus your fearless acceptance of the fact that the difficulty is within yourself, give a psychiatrist superb material with which to work, in guiding you to the saving recognition of the precise nature and source of the inner conflict which is proclaiming itself in irrespressible irritability.

In the February issue of Ladies' Home Journal, Margaret Case Harriman—writing on the subject, "Are You Walking Around With a Nervous Breakdown?"—makes this remark: "Nervous illness has one advantage over nervous disease; once you know what ails you, the battle is practically won." This is incontrovertibly true.

The emotionally disturbed person is uncontrollably agitated largely because he doesn't know exactly what ails him. It is human nature to fear the unknown more than the known. Also, it is virtually impossible for the layman without previous experience of psycho-analytical or psychiatric treatment to arrive unaided at a remedial diagnosis of such soul-sickness as yours. The layman cannot, of himself "work through" a problem of this kind, when first overwhelmed by the confusing pain of it. In answer to this need of humankind, the science of psychiatry is being developed, and gaining in effectiveness every day, particularly when practiced by men and women whose intuitive wisdom and humanitarian outlook qualify them for the soul-healing profession in which they engage.

I note by the postmark on your letter that you live in a small town in a neighboring State—where, as you say, you are out of convenient reach of psychiatrists. By writing to Dr. George Preston, Commissioner of Mental Hygiene, Baltimore, Md., you may receive (on request) information about the "traveling clinics" of the Maryland Mental Hygiene Society—which "set up shop" regularly for a few days every month in various small towns throughout the State. These traveling clinics bring a mental-health service, comparable to that dispensed by the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, to individuals and communities that would not otherwise receive it. I have heard the results of the work enthusiastically acclaimed by the best authority.

Supposing such a clinic does not "service" your community or any adjacent communities, Dr. Preston (who is in touch with all types of hygiene activities throughout the length and breadth of the State of Maryland) can refer you to the nearest available competent psychiatrist. And it would be well worth your while to read his new book, "Psychiatry For The Curious," ecstatically acclaimed by all reviewers, as the finest discussion of psychiatry ever written for layman perusal. Delightfully witty in style and copiously illustrated with pen sketches, this volume gives the reader an invaluably self-helpful knowledge of the interrelated subjects of (a) psychiatry and (b) human nature.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Gold Digger

You survey the bill of fare dubiously, reading from right to left. Why on earth did you ever suggest coming to such an expensive place? Here he has been talking so much about hard times . . . and taxes . . . and how nobody can save anything . . . and what the country is coming to. And he really can't make so very much . . . and he has such heavy expenses . . . and probably some obligations . . . and anyway his hat looks sort of battered and—well it IS tough on a man having to pay double when he goes anywhere . . .

You're really not a bit hungry, you remark, since you ate such a late lunch. So if he wants to order a real dinner for himself, he can just go ahead, but you'll take something light.

Oh, come on, he insists, and take a steak or something. Now mybe this Filet Mignon Par Excellence—

No, no, nothing that heavy, you protest, noting that its price is $1.75.

Well, then, here's just the thing for you, he continues. How about the Long Island duckling au naturel with glazed Montana apples a la Bellevue?

Your eagle eye rests on the $1.50 sign on the right hand side of the page . . . No, no, you really couldn't eat that much . . . and besides you don't care much for duck. Your eye jumps down the page, lights happily on an 85-cent price. You follow it back across the page. Fresh Sauteed Sea Trout with Special Tartar Sauce and Monte Carlo fried potatoes! . . . You're really very fond of fish, you interject.

"Fine!" he retorts. "How about this New England Lobster Aristocrat?"

You look at the menu. Good heavens! You hadn't noted the lobster! And it's $1.75

No, no, you really don't care for lobster, you assure him. And besides it's so indigestible . . . You study the menu again, sight another 85-cent figure. Track it down to Prime Saddle of Mutton with Country Giant Peas Distingue. "Now maybe this mutton," you begin.

"I thought you didn't want anything heavy," he says. "But if you like sheep, here's a nice Spring Lamb De Luxe with Mint Sauce Asphodel . . ."

You note that it is $1. "That's not so bad" you venture.

But wait! He has found something you'd probably like better. Spring Milkfed Chicken Deshabille, with Brussels Sprouts and Potatoes Pandora!

You note that it is $1.25 . . . No, you believe you'd rather have the Lamb . . .

"Sure you won't have the chicken?" he asks. "Or a good steak?"

No, no, you want the lamb. Nothing but the lamb!

"All right, then," he says with finality, turning to the waiter, "and bring me a Special Porterhouse Steak, Supreme, medium rare."

You close the menu—but not before you have noted that the Special Porterhouse Steak Supreme is 2.50!

adjustable arch shoes discovered by Eleanor Roosevelt

Mr. James Fikany, the inventor, makes his first and exclusive Washington appearance at Jelleff's . . . this week!

"Remarkable shoes which make standing for hours a pleasure," wrote Eleanor Roosevelt in her column, MY DAY, and made them famous . . .

You've read about Mrs. Roosevelt's shoe discovery in Time, Look, Life. Leading newspapers all over the country have told the romantic history of the inventor, Mr. Fikany, who rose from obscure cobbler in Carbondale, Pennsylvania, to shoemaker for the first Lady of the Land, and became head of a large shoe factory. The March of Time re-enacted the now famous interview of Mrs. Roosevelt and Mr. Fikany! Walter Winchell told the success story in his column. Women almost everywhere have become interested in these shoes. Now you can have them.

This is the arch that may change your life. A little adjustable arch built right in the sole of the shoes. It can be adjusted in the twinkling of an eye in length and height to fit each individual foot. The first time in the history of shoe-making that such a thing has been possible.

Mr. Fikany himself has trained our salesmen to fit his shoes . . . Each needs special adjustment to attain the perfect balance that means complete foot comfort. That takes skill and Mr. Fikany permits only those whom he has trained to fit Fikany Shoes.

This week Mr. Fikany and his two sons are here to supervise personally your fitting.

Capitalites Bid the Gradys Goodby Over Tea and Coffee at Miller Party

By Hope Ridings Miller

THOSE POPULAR GRADYS (the retiring Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F.—about whom you've been reading so much lately) were guests of honor at a gala fete given yesterday by Justice Justin Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals, and Mrs. Miller.

From 5 to 7 o'clock, the Wardman Park apartment that formerly was occupied by Dr. and Mrs. Wesley A. Sturges was filled with official and social notables who had gathered to pay tribute to a beloved couple who will soon be saying good-by to Washington. When you bandy about the adjectives "popular" and "beloved," they also go, full measure, for yesterday's hosts, who number their friends by the dozens and had invited in several hundred to add luster and warmth to the festive occasion.

Hope Ridings Miller

Farewell parties—even when they herald the departure of a couple that leaves a host of friends here—can be merry, if the honor guests promise to return soon, and often. The Gradys have; so, nobody who turned up yesterday felt as if he was really saying good-by for more than a brief period.

Gayly informal from first to last, the party went long past the official hour for closing. I left there 20 minutes past 7 o'clock, and the spacious drawing room was still filled with guests. An hour earlier, it was crowded to the walls—with more celebrities coming in every minute.

In order to avoid a bottle-neck at the doorway, the host and hostess and their honor guests received at the other end of the room. Attired in pale blue crepe was Mrs. Miller, who chose a gardenia corsage to set off her costume. Mrs. Grady wore cornflower blue marquisette, fashioned with full sleeves, a flowing skirt, and wide band of sequins outlining the boat-shaped neckline. A corsage of violets, tucked into the waitline, completed her attractive ensemble.

ALSO IN THE receiving line was Miss Patricia Grady, whose frock of cafe-au-lait jersey was accented with a girdle of gold sequins. Justice Miller and Dr. Grady were in the greeting contingent, too; and I must say both of them, elegantly attired in cutaways and striped trousers, could easily have been put into frames and mailed out as illustrations of what the well-dressed host and his honor guests should wear to any topflight tea party.

Bouquets of spring blossoms decorated the drawing room and the library and centered the tea table, which was lighted with tall white tapers in silver holders. Generally assisting the hostess were Mrs. Harold M. Stephens, Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, Mrs. Henry W. Edgerton, Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, Mrs. Gordon Dean, who with her husband will leave next week for a trip to South America; and the two house guests of Justice and Mrs. Miller—their daughter, Mrs. Edwin Abbott, of Atlanta, Ga., who was smartly turned out in a heliotrope crepe frock, and Miss Maygene Dunbar, Justice Miller's niece who is here from Walnut Creek, Calif.

Taking their turns at pouring tea or coffee were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Daniel Roper, Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, Mrs. Frank H. Buck, Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Mrs. Harry R. Sheppard, and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle.

CALIFORNIANS seemed to be all over the place. That, of course, was to be expected, as both the Millers and the Gradys hail from the Sunshine State and knew each other long before either couple headed Eastward.

Helen Gahagan, of Hollywood fame, was a popular center of attention and had Capitalites gathered around her three-deep during the entire party. Always a glamorous figure, she stood out from the crowd yesterday because nobody else there was dressed as she was, in a striped jacket, a blue tailored skirt and a wine-colored, twisted turban arranged at a becoming angle on her pretty head.

Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo was an early arrival, as were Judge and Mrs. William Denman, of San Francisco; Dean Emery Olson, of the University of California, at Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark, of Sacramento, Calif., the former of whom came here to appear as Gov. Olsen's personal representative at the Inaugural festivities.

OTHERS SEEN THERE: Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, apparently knowing everybody present . . . Mabel Walker Willebrandt, moving from group to group and greeting friends on all sides . . . Mrs. George Maurice Morris, among those arriving early . . . Mr. and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, coming in with Malcolm Muir, editor and publisher of Newsweek magazine . . . Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, especially popular guests . . . Mrs. Stanley Reed, asking Mrs. Stone for a cup of tea . . . Justice and Mrs. Bolitha J. Laws, mingling in the crowd . . . Handsome Reginald Grady, chatting with the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann and then going on to ask the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres if they had seen "the superb view of Washington from the Miller library."

Still others there were Mrs. Claude Pepper, Representative Jerry Voorhis, Representative Hatton Sumners, talking with Senator Joseph O'Mahoney; Justice Fred M. Vinson, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn, Mrs. John McClure, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. David Blair, Col. and Mrs. Louis Montfort, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Deimel, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waring and several hundred others.

Also among those present were Admiral and Mrs. Harold Bowen, who will entertain at a tea this afternoon in honor of the Gradys; Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, the former of whom was host at a stag dinner after the tea, and Mrs. Bruce D. Smith, who gave a luncheon yesterday for Mrs. Grady.

The latter party, which took place at the 1925 F Street Club, drew the following guests: Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Barnet Nover and Mrs. Irene Caldwell.

Belgian Prisoners To Get Parcels

Before leaving for South America, Countess van der Straten, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, started a "parcels for Belgian prisoners committee" that is now humming along at a great rate.

Honorary chairman is Mrs. Joseph Davies and in the absence of Countess van der Straten, Baroness de Gruben, wife of the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy, is head of the committee. Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffman is chairman, Mrs. Arthur Krock, secretary; Mrs. S. Kent Legare, treasurer, and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick is in charge of buying.

In charge of selling the various trinkets—such as glassware with the Belgian seal on it, pins, badges and the like—is Countess Guy Baillet Latour. The committee, which has headquarters at 1718 Massachusetts Avenue, is shooting at a possible 100,000 bundles—these to include food and sweaters. It is under the auspices of the Red Cross.

Hoover Is Guest Of William Castles

Former President Hoover, who addressed the Women's National Press Club yesterday at its weekly luncheon, remained in Washington overnight as the house guest of former Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Castle, who entertained informally at dinner in his honor.

Mr. Hoover will return today to New York to rejoin Mrs. Hoover at the Waldorf-Astoria, where they have taken an apartment for a few weeks.

Senate Ladies Hold Party

That ancient and honorable institution, the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club, got its season under way yesterday with the new president, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, serving as hostess.

Spring flowers centered the long table in the Continental Room of Wardman Park Hotel where Mrs. Wallace for the first time, was taking over her duties as head of the one-time sewing club. Mrs. Roosevelt was among those present.

Guests also included the Senate, and Supreme Court wives that is all who are not laid low in the current flu outbreak.

This pleasant custom had its beginning in the last World War when the ladies met to sew and knit for soldiers. They took picnic lunches to keep members from eating in the Senate restaurant and staying to listen to speeches on the floor—so as not to get behind in the sewing schedule. The modern luncheon club still meets at the Capitol regularly. However, as was instituted by Mrs. John Nance Garner, the first party is given at the hotel where the president of the club resides.

Moshers on Trip After Marirage In Sumter, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Hathaway Mosher are on a honeymoon trip following their marriage Monday evening at the First Baptist Church in Sumter, S. C. The bride, who has lived in Washington for the last 11 years, is the former Miss Geraldine Ballard, daughter of Mrs. Walter Ballard, of Sumter, and the late Mr. Ballard.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mosher, of Geneva, N. Y. He is now a resident of Philadelphia, Pa., where he is a patent attorney for the United Gas Improvement Co.

At an 8 o'clock candlelight service at the First Baptist Church, the couple exchanged their vows. The Rev. William G. Moore officiated. Walking alone to the altar, the bride was gowned in blush satin, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and leg-o'-mutton sleeves. The skirt terminated in a circular train. A veil of Brussels lace draped from a coronet and a bouquet of lilies of the valley, gardenias and roses completed the ensemble.

Sister Serves as Maid of Honor

Miss Harriet Ballard, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her shell pink net and lace frock was made with a fitted bodice and a bouffant skirt, and her headdress was a matching pink Juliet cap trimmed with blue velvet ribbon. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium tied with wide gold ribbon.

Mrs. Frank Richard Heller, of Washington, was matron of honor, wearing a dress of the same color and style as that of the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Lucille Ballard, of Sumter, another sister of the bride; Miss Helen Cushwa, of Washington; Miss Elizabeth Leeds, of Philadelphia, and Miss Esther Witherspoon, of Sumter. Their dresses of blue net were made like those of the other attendants.

Also attired in blue net were the two candle bearers, Miss Frances Plowden and Miss Beulah Marie Morgan. Frank Richard Heller was best man, and ushers included Malcolm Ballard, brother of the bride; James Durant, Capers Wactor and Alphus Wactor, of Sumter.

Bridegroom Also Known Here

Following the ceremony, there was an informal reception at the home of the bride's mother. She received in a gown of black and gold lace, accented with a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Mosher, mother of the bridegroom, wore dubonnet lace and a corsage of gardenias.

The bridegroom, who is also a former resident of Washington, attended the College of Applied Science at the University of Syracuse and George Washington University Law School.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

DINING AT the Brazilian Embassy the other evening with the Ambassador and Senhora de Martins we had cocktails in the downstairs library before an open fire, dinner, of course in the dining-room, coffee in the large drawing-room, music later in the small drawing-room, and again, much later, an exhibition of sculpture in Senhora de Martins' top-floor studio. Some of us even stole a look at the playroom of the two small daughters of the house where a shelf, all the way around the room, holds dolls of many nations. Each child has dolls exactly the duplicate of her sister's and no grown-up can tell them apart. Not so the young owners. The little girls can walk straight to the shelf and pick out their own dolls with never an argument about which twin is whose.

In Senhora de Martins' studio, a workman-like room and neater than than most studios, were some fascinating examples of her versatility. On a table were models for lighting fixtures which Mme. Martins has been commisioned to do for a room in New York, the room to be decorated by Salvator Dali. An especially interesting piece of sculpture-in-the-making was the figure which Senhora de Martins is chiseling out of a solid block of mahogany. "It's very hard work," she explained "and you must never look at the state of my hands."

AMONG THE Martins' dinner guests that evening were the State Department's adviser on international economic affairs, Herbert Feis, and Mrs. Feis; Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land; Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, she wearing becoming pale gray and silver, Mrs. Nordell Lloyd, in aquamarine crepe with a jacket of Persian embroidery, and the Brazilian author, Erico Verissimo.

Others were the Brazilian First Secretary and charming Senhora Alencastro Guimaraes—the latter sang to us most beautifully to her own guitar accompaniment—the Second Secretary and Senhora de Hugo Gouthier, Senhora de Gouthier loking too pretty in black with a wisp of black lace mantilla and a white flower in her dark hair, and Othon Leonerdos, who is studying geology here, and Senhora de Leonerdos. Senhora de Martins wore velvet of a dark grape-color which set off her gorgeous aquamarines to perfection, the aquamarines, necklace, bracelet, clips and ring being worn by special request of one of the guests.

BLONDE ADELAIDE CHATFIELD TAYLOR is in Washington with her parents, the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor. Adelaide is a student at Bennington College and is having her long winter vacation and working on a project assigned by the college. I hear that Adelaide's elder brother, Hobey, is on the dean's list at Yale.

Arthur Krock has just received a copy of the 27th Division News with the compliments of the editor, Sherlock Davis, who was one of the Capital's favorite bachelors before he left for active service with his regiment in Alabama. Half of the front page of the News concerns Sherry's recent promotion—he is now Maj. Sherlock Davis, Aide de Camp to the Commanding General of the 27th Divisvion—and an accompanying letter apologizes for giving himself half a page. Said Sherry, "My principle in regard to any publication in which I am active is to put my own name in as many times as possible. I therefore apologize for not having been able to fill the whole of the front page with news about myself."

Great success in Washington is being predicted for the newly-arrived Chilean Ambassador. His name, Michels, he pronounces "Mitchells" and he talks our language. The Ambassador's father and grandfather were Americans and he himself went to school in the United States.

Women's Press Club Hears Hoover on Relief

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Relief for the civilian populations of Central Europe seemed to members of the Women's National Press Club imperative, feasible and an obligation devolving on the United States as a Christian Nation, when former President Herbert Hoover had concluded his off-the-record talk to the club yesterday. He was guest of honor at its weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel.

Although welcomed as the former Chief Executive, Mr. Hoover loomed as a greater figure yesterday in the capacity of the compassionate friend of stricken peoples, caught in the vortex of a human conflict not of their making. He talked in his usual straight-forward, direct manner, stating facts without embellishment and answering questions frankly and comprehensively.

"He knows what can be done . . . It is not as though he were on unfamiliar ground. . . . He knows from his experience in the first World War." . . . Such were the expressions from club members on all sides after the luncheon. Except for one light bit of humor in the beginning of his talk, it was all in the serious vein to have been expected in dealing with a subject involving the saving of the lives of millions.

Inaugurating a new custom, preceding the luncheon, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, the club president and the honor guest, received members and their guests as they entered the small ballroom, where the luncheon was held. Due to an illness in her family, Mrs. Essary was obliged to leave immediately after introducing Mr. Hoover and turned the luncheon program over to Miss Josephine Hemphill, first vice president, who presided for the rest of the time.

Mrs. Essary wore a costume of wine red and Miss Hemphill also was in red. The color predominated in dresses at the head table yesterday as it did in governors' ties the week before. Representative Jeannette Rankin wore a dress of a vivid hue and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, wife of the Secretary of War during President Hoover's administration, wore a costume of a deep red tone. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who, with Associate Justice Stone, of the Supreme Court, was also among the honor guests, wore a black dress with turquoise accents. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of the late former Vice President Charles Curtis, wore black also, but her hat was trimmed with a red veil. Mrs. William R. Castle, wife of the former Undersecretary of State under President Hoover, was also an honor guest. She was wearing a black dress with blue trimming the blouse.

Among other honor guests at the head table were Mark Sullivan, noted columnist; Felix Morley, former editor of The Post, now president of Haverford College; Gen. Henry Gibbins, retiring Quartermaster General of the Army, and Edward Fox, who headed the Hoover relief work in Russia.

Among guests of club members were Representatives George A. Dondero and William W. Blackney, of Michigan, and Representative Jessie Sumner, of Illinois; Harlean James, Mrs. George C. Thorpe, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mr. and Mrs. Merlo Pusey, Mrs. Mary Youngman, Miss Ruth Baker and Mrs. George Bracher, of Spokane, Wash.

Mrs. Tiller Entertains

Mrs. Theodore H. Tiller, founder of the D. C. Branch, National League of American Pen Women, and for many years thereafter its president, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Philip H. Clancy, author and playwright, entertained a notable literary and artistic group in her home last evening, with a buffet supper followed by the regular meeting of the drama workshop section. Mrs. Tiller, the author of children's plays and a regular contributor to several southern newspapers, has maintained a steady interest in the branch, and has done much to foster its growth.

Guests of honor included Mary McDougall Axelson, daughter of Mrs. D. A. McDougall, one of the early members of the branch. Mrs. Axelson is the author of "A Child Is Born," which was first published as a book, and then made into a motion picture. Among other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fowler, directors of the Roadside Theater in nearby Maryland, who were introduced by J. Jeune Carter, research writer and chairman of the drama group, and spoke informally of the tribulations of the show business, from the managers' point of view.

Among the members present were: Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, commercial writer, and president of the National League; Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, lecturer and for several years instructor in the summer school of drama at Columbia University, now president of the D. C. Branch; Dr. Frances Moon Butts, author, lecturer and genealogist; Miss Marguerite Merigold, journalist; Mrs. W. W. Badgley, artist, Mrs. James T. Watson, author and journalist, and Mrs. Charles Cleveland Tyler, editor and poet, all past presidents of the branch.

Eldridge Urges Lower Night Speed Limit

A reduction in the speed limit for night driving in the Capital was suggested as one remedy for the traffic fatalities, by M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic for the District, in a talk yesterday at a safety meeting of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers. The meeting was held at the N. E. A. building.

Pointing out that 20 of the 25 traffic deaths in the last two months had occurred at night, Eldridge asked how many of the women favor a reduction in the speed limit after dark. All of those present who drove favored it.

The fact that the open weather has permitted as much driving at this season as in warm weather, is partly responsible for the high rate of traffic accidents, said Eldridge. In summer, most people wear light cloths, more easily distinguishable at night than the dark one worn at this season, and therefore a protection.

Mrs. George Clark, chairman of safety for the District Congress, presided. Among the speakers was Grant L. Clarke, who had charge of the A. A. A. summer training camp for Boy Patrol officers. White boys were at Camp Ernest W. Brown and colored boys at the Y. M. C. A. camp near Dumfries, Va. As a result of the two hours a day training received during their summer outing, the boys all had a keener sense of responsibility in their jobs, he said, and were better patrol officers.

F. Stuart McCaw, of Hine Junior High School, also commended the camp and stressed its value to the boys.

Stanley Carlson In Recital At Arts Club

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Stanley Carlson, bass-barytone, gives a song recital Tuesday night in the Arts Club with Margaret C. Tolson as accompanist. Program: "O Isis und Osiris" and "In diesen heil'gen Hallen" from "Die Zauberfloete" (Mozart), Invocazione di Orfeo from "Euridice" (Peri), "Lasciatemi morire" from "Arianna" (Monteverde), "Bois epais" from "Amadis" (Lully), "Confutatis maledirtis" from "Manzoni Requiem" (Verdi), "Quand la flamme de l'amour" from "La Jolie Fille de Perth" (Bizet), "Take My Mother Home" (Hall Johnson), "Land uv Degradashun" (MacGimsey), "Think on Me" (Alicia Ann Scott), "Tankerton Inn" (Howard Fisher).

BROWN

Members and guests of the Arts Club enjoyed last evening a recital by Stanley Carlson, a young bass-barytone from Denver by way of New York, who, unless all signs fail, is on the way to a notable career. He not only possesses a splendidly resonant voice, but he is also gifted with instinctive musicianship, discriminative taste and an engaging manner. He has, moreover, a flair for aesthetic principles which was manifest in the best proportioned and balanced program that has been heard here for many a day. It was not a long program, but so nicely adjusted between familiar and rare music as to satisfy both memory and curiosity.

After richly intoned readings of Mozartian arias from "Die Zauberfloete," he sang the invocation of Orpheus from the earliest extant opera, Jacopo Peri's "L'Euridice," which was produced in the Palazzo Pitti, Florence, October 6, 1600, and published the following year. This was offered in a group which included an aria from Monteverde's "Arianna" (1608) and an aria from Lully's "Amadis de Gaule" (1684). This in a short compass he exemplified the change of style in the first operatic century.

His third group contrasted the severe dignity of "Confutatis maledictis" from Verdi's "Requiem" with the bibulous musings of "Quand la flamme de l'amour" from Bizet's "La Jolie Fille de Perth." His final group contained an impressive Negro spiritual, as yet unpublished, "Take My Mother Home," by Hall Johnson. Robert MacGimsey's "Land uv Degradeshun," Alicia Ann Scott's poetic and tender "Think on Me" and the rollicking "Tankerton Inn" by Howard Fisher. For extra numbers he added Richard Hageman's "The Rich Man" and Frank La Forge's "Hills."

With due respect for an artist's privilege to designate vocal tessitura, one would advise Mr. Carlson not to call himself a bass-barytone, but to be content with basso cantante. His voice has, in truth, an unusual range, but the highest lyric tones retain the basso quality. A distinction exists between the basso and barytone resonances, and the dark glow of this singers voice definitely belongs to the lower register.

Armenian Soprano

Armenian General Benevolent Union presents Zaruhi Elmassian, soprano, in a benefit recital Tuesday night in Barker Hall, with Julia Elbogen as accompanist.

An interesting song recital was given last evening in Barker Hall by Zaruhi Elmassian, a soprano known from Boston to Hollywood, whose services had been enlisted in the cause of Armenian relief. While her program contained operatic arias by Mozart and Delibes and songs by Richard Strauss, Rudolph Ganz and Liza Lehmann, its bulk was constituted of music by Armenian composers.

Miss Elmassian's voice has vibrancy and is well trained in fluent phrasing. The upper tones, naturally clear and accurately placed, were occasionally forced into unsteadiness. In the lower and middle registers, the tone had pleasant warmth and emotional persuasiveness.

Child 'Nerves' Misunderstood, Nurses Told

"Nerves" in a child are too often confused with "badness," Dr. Sanders Lachman, director of the Habit Clinic at Children's Hospital, told a session of the annual meeting of the Graduate Nurses' Association and the League of Nursing Education of the District at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

"Every child's behavior represents his method of adjusting himself to his environment in order to relieve pressure or tension and obtain equilibrium, security and satisfaction of needs," Dr. Lachman declared.

Citing the slogan of a child guidance clinic—"There are no bad children"—Dr. Lachman emphasized that "Abnormal behavior is the result of pressure or tension. When the pressure is continued over a long period the resulting behavior becomes quite complex and can be unraveled and understood only over a long period and by special techniques."

Joining with Dr. Lachman in a symposium on mental hygiene were Dr. James A. Gannon, a member of the District Board of Education, and Dr. Aloysius Church, a Fellow of the Child Center at Catholic University.

Dr. Gannon discussed "Normal Living," while Dr. Church spoke on "The Well-Integrated Child—Some Factors Retarding Satisfactory Adjustment."

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the two organizations closed with a banquet at the Willard last night.

Transit Company Sues for Permit To Use 1-Man Cars

The Capital Transit Company carried its fight for permission to operate more one-man street cars in Washington to the District Court yesterday.

The Public Utilities Commission last October 17 rejected the company's application for leave to convert 15 old style cars to one-man cars. A rehearing was denied last November 29. The company asked the court to set aside the P. U. C. orders as being "unlawful and unreasonable."

Sergt. Quinn, 60, Is Dead; Veteran In Medical Corps

Sergt. James D. Quinn, 60, Army Medical Corps veteran, died of a heart attack last night at his home on the Walter Reed Hospital grounds. A native of Akron, Ohio, Sergt. Quinn had served in the Medical Corps nearly 30 years, and he would have been eligible for retirement in June.

Ten of his Army years were at Walter Reed, the last four and a six-year period after the World War. During his last assignment he was in charge of the gymnasium on the post, until it was torn down to make way for new construction, and recently he had been on duty in the Walter Reed postoffice. His Army career had also led to the Philippines, and to posts in Texas and Kentucky.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ercelle M. Quinn, and a nephew, Damon E. Lindus, of Willard, Ohio. Funeral services are tentatively set for 2 p. m. Friday in the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Oomph's a Poor Substitute For Sense, Educators Say

Put away your makeup, and buy a mop, girls. There's too much "oomph, glamour and charm" in this country.

After a two-year study of the relation of school, family and child, the American Association of School Administrators in a report issued here yesterday went on record for taking the "ooh" out of "oomph."

More education in the responsibilities of a future wife and mother will make the American girl create a happier home for the American boy, the association asserted.

One trouble with American home life is that too many women prefer a vocational career to a vacuum cleaner, said the report. Another trouble is that the movies have given "exaggerated ideas of romance which obstruct good preparation for marriage." Also decried was "the 'modern' tendency to feel we must go outside the home for everything that is worthwhile."

To correct the present trend the association recommended:

Both schools and home should consider the personality of the child they are teaching; school and home should work as partners; grade school children should study the family and its functions; high schools should teach students their responsibilities as members of the family; adult education programs should assist in solving family problems.

X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1941 15

Wide Open Spaces Not Wide Open

Tuscon, Ariz., Jan. 28 (AP).—Bombing practice in the wide open spaces near Tuscon, participated in by six bombers from Fort Douglas, Utah, encountered odd hazards.

A flier, assigned to duty on horseback, was bucked from his horse. Cattle, attracted by the white rings drawn for targets, had to be enticed away with rock salt.

But Missed His Phone Number

Youngstown, Ohio, Jan. 28 (AP).—A clerk at the Internal Revenue Office helpfully filled in the income blank for a taxpayer; then told him how much he owed. It was a large amount, and the visitor protested lustily.

The clerk asked for the slip earning statement the man's employer had given him and found the taxpayer included his Social Security number in his earnings.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutts

House Appropriations Committee today will announce that it has taken no action on the automatic promotion plan proposed by the Budget Bureau which would have given pay increases to 159,000 Federal workers at the beginning of the 1942 fiscal year July 1. Instead, the committee will continue the hit-and-miss promotion plan now in effect which has been damned by employes and officials alike. The news will be a great disappointment to all Federal employes, but chiefly to Navy, War, Maritime and CAA officials who made an urgent appeal that the promotion ban be lifted. These defense agencies say they are having a difficult time keeping some of its employes engaged in defense work because they can't give them administrative promotions.

However, two possibilities remain for putting the budget plan in effect. An influential member of the House committee said the Senate may be persuaded to approve the plan that it probably would be accepted in conference. He also reminded that Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee has introduced the budget plan as an amendment to the Classification Act and Ramspeck has promised to hold hearings on it when the "lend-lease" bill is disposed of.

Under the present promotion plan, employes making under $3,200 are supposed to be given a one-step-in-grade promotion if they have good efficiency ratings and who haven't received a raise within the last three years. Employes earning more than $3,200 have to wait at least five years under the same plan. The joker in this plan is that no funds have been provided to carry it out. All pay raises have to be made from lapses and any money that happens to be unused.

Moreover, some 20 agencies like FHA, HOLC, RFC, USHA, WPA, PWA are expressly forbidden by Congress from using funds appropriated for the 1941 fiscal year to give administrative promotions to its employes. In other words, Congress approved a promotion plan and then prohibited certain agencies from following it.

The budget plan would give employes making less than $3,800 who had good efficiency ratings a one-step increase every 18 months until the top of the grade was reached, which would take nine years. Employes making more than $3,800 would be given raises every 30 months and it would take 10 years to reach the grade maximum. Incidentally, the budget plan would have abolished the "average clause."

E. C. Farr, Weather Bureau employe, would like to spend a week in St. Petersburg with all expense paid. And who wouldn't? He was among yesterday's entrants in the Federal Employe Council recreation contest. The two winners will be sent to the Florida resort as guests of the city aboard the Silver Meteor. The rules are simple enough. Just write the council in care of WJSV and tell how you spend your spare time and what the council can do to promote recreation facilities among Federal employes. The contest is limited to Federal workers.

Civil Service is finding it so hard to recruit male stenographers that nearly 100 who were appointed to the Adjutant General's Office subject to passing an exam will be permitted to stay temporarily even though they failed the test. This ruling will not apply to similar cases elsewhere. Persons failing tests will be separated if the commission can supply eligibles . . . Charles Anderson, chairman of the commission's board of appeals, and the editor of this column will be guests on "Your Government and Mine," which will be heard over WINX tonight at 10:15 o'clock. The program is conducted by Carl Berger, GAO employe.

Charles C. Fichtner, dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of Arkansas, has been appointed chief of the division of regional economy at the Commerce Department . . . New Civil Service registers and the number of eligibles on each: Junior Wage and Hour inspector, 934; physiotherapy aide, 44, and junior psyiotherapy aide, 93.

Internal Revenue Bureau will hire about 300 Census employes who have or will lose their jobs. Like the Census positions, the jobs at Internal Revenue will be temporary, probably lasting not more than three months, or long enough to help Uncle Sam to collect income taxes due March 15 . . . Alvin B. Davidson, Civil Service employe who is chairman of the organization committee of the Federal Employe Council, reports a survey is being conducted of all recreational facilities in the Government and the number of participants.

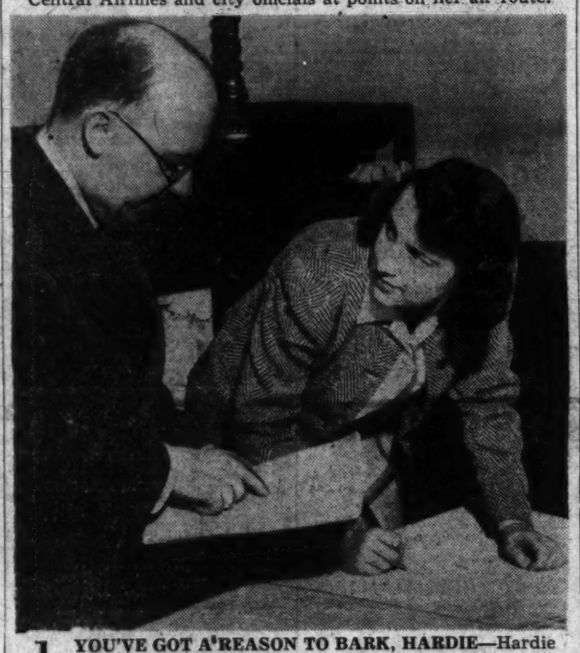
2 "FLIGHT OF DIMES" ENDS AT WHITE HOUSE—Airline Hostess Adeline Cox (left) carried a sack of dimes to the White House yesterday and turned them over to Presidential Secretary Edwin M. Watson. Miss Cox collected the dimes from airline passengers, employes of Pennsylvania Central Airlines and city officials at points on her air route.



1 YOU'VE GOT A REASON TO BARK, HARDIE—Hardie Meakin, chief barker of the Variety Club, whose job it is to schedule the appearance of movie stars at the President's Birthday Ball celebrations tomorrow night, makes out the third route schedule with the aid of his secretary, Helen Moore.

Hollywood's brightest luminaries are due here today to help the Capital celebrate President Roosevelt's fifty-ninth birthday tomorrow.

Beginning at 10:15 a. m. and continuing until midnight, stars of stage, screen and radio will come to town to take part in the many parties planned by the Birthday Ball Committee.

Yesterday the Universal songstress, Deanna Durbin, was met by a jubilant crowd of fans at Union Station. Hardie Meakin, RKO-Keith's executive, welcomed Miss Durbin to the city.

A meeting of the committee yesterday brought assurances that this year's affair will be "better and bigger than ever." The gala cocktail party planned for tomorrow at 5 p. m. at the Willard Hotel, however, was canceled in order to give the visiting stars a "breather."

Latest star added to the list is Maureen O'Hara, R.-K.-O. performer, who will arrive in town today for the activities. Robert Young and Anne Shirley will not come to Washington, it was announced.

Arrivals today follow:

8:40 a. m., Union Station—Kay Aldridge.

10:05 a. m., at the Airport—George Raft, Lana Turner, Wayne Morris, Maureen O'Hara and Al Ritz (of the Ritz Brothers).

3:55 p. m., at Union Station—Wallace Beery and daughter, Carol Ann.

8:05 p. m., Union Station—Charlotte Greenwood.

8:30 p. m., at Airport—Tommy Harmon.

12 midnight, at Union Station—Clifton Fadiman.

A reception is planned today, from 5 to 7 p. m., at the Mayflower Hotel for the stars, to be tendered by Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, Mrs. Jean Hersholt and Mrs. C. C. Pettijohn.

Jay C. Flippen, the man with 25,000 gags, has been added to the performers to shine at the Gold Plate Breakfast at the Carlton early Friday morning, following the dances.

Tomorrow's schedule of events takes off at 11 a. m. in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen in the District Building. All of the stars will descend on the Municipal Building and take part in the traditional party. The party will then move en masse to the White House for lunch. The cocktail party planned for 5 p. m. is out, so the stars will have a little time to themselves and to prepare for the all-star dinner at the Willard Hotel at 7 p. m.

After the dinner the visitors will make the rounds of the five hotels where the dances will be in progress and arrive at the White House at 11 p. m. for the broadcast. The President will address the Nation between 11:24 and 11:29 p. m. Thursday night and the stars are planning to sing "Happy Birthday" to the President and will call on the nation-wide audience to join in the birthday greetings.

Entertainment Chairman Andrew R. Kelley announced yesterday some local performers who will participate in the dances. They are Clare Howard, 301 M Place Southeast, a 16-year-old songstress, who has been anxious to appear for the past five years; Alderson and Ray, dance team; Gertrude S. Jackson, 1434 F Street Northeast, singer; Billy and Yassie Schwartz, jitterbug dancers and Virginia Barry, 1762 Columbia Road Northwest, who will accompany a pupil, Harriett Lane, in a dance.

Biggest disappointment in connection with the celebration is the illness of little 5-year-old Carolyn Lee, who is confined to her bed at Children's Hospital and will not take part.

Kitty Carlisle will be unable to appear due to a prior engagement made up.

Then he gets a bulletin that Charlotte Greenwood is bringing her husband, hence one of the official escorts must be dropped or a bigger car obtained.

Still, Meakin's office yesterday wasn't the madhouse nor its majordomo the distraught arranger which, by all logic, they should have been.

Placating officials who thought they ought to be in Deanna Durbin's or Lana Turner's party, getting out mimeographed communiques by the ream, clearing mountains of minor detail with Chairman Andrew Kelley and Assistant Chairmen Carter Barron and Frank LaFalce—it had Meakin pretty dizzy last night but he could still muster a smile.

In fact, he took the reporter's dare and flashed a broad grin. Then suddenly it disappeared.

"What's the matter?" he was asked.

"I just remembered," he replied, "that Robert Taylor got waylaid by guards in the Mayflower kitchen when he was here for the ball a couple of years ago and all but missed his own introduction. Oh, oh, suppose that should happen to . . . oh, oh."

3 Citizens' Units Favor Bus Route

Military Road Their Choice; 4th Has Other Views On Crosstown Plan

The Military Road route for the proposed crosstown bus won the approval of Conduit Road, Trinidad, and Hampshire Heights Citizens Associations last night.

A fourth organization, the Southeast Citizens, urged the Public Utilities Commission to select the most northern route for the crosstown service, and as a second choice favored Park road.

Other action taken by the four associations follows:

Hampshire Heights

Harry Miller, president, of Hampshire Heights Citizens Association, announced that as a result of action by the association, a fire alarm system is being installed on all three floors of the Barnard school, Fourth and Decatur Streets Northwest. At present there is such an alarm system on only one floor.

It was decided to postpone until the February 25 meeting discussion of a proposal that the city change to natural gas.

F. Joseph Donohue, attorney for the beverages industry committee, was guest speaker. He favored the recommendations of the Eberharter report for amendment of the alcoholic beverages control code.

Trinidad

The Trinidad Citizens Association called last night for two emergency ambulances to be operated by the Police Department exclusively for automobile accidents. The proposal was advanced as a means of eliminating long waits by traffic victims needing hospitalization.

George J. Cleary was reelected president of the association for an eighth term. Other officers named were: Vice presidents, H. E. Shilling and Mrs. J. M. Selby; secretary-treasurer, Martin G. Stecker; delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, Cleary and Stecker, and delegates to the Northeast Conference, Steven B. Jones and Earl Pickel.

The citizens "strongly deplored" the condition of the H Street Viaduct, which runs from First to Second Streets Northeast, and urged that the Commissioners have it repaired either by the city or the Washington Terminal Co.

They asked additional heating facilities for the Webb School at Fourteenth and G Streets Northeast, and installation of electric bells in the Wheatley School, Montello Avenue and Neal Streets Northeast.

Conduit Road

Members of the Conduit Road Citizens last night voted to join a community move for a postoffice substation in the area.

The unit requested extension of the Tenleytown bus from Nebraska and Wisconsin Avenues to Conduit and Loughboro Roads Northwest, so that it would connect with the Conduit Road bus.

The association voted to join the Northwest Council; opposed closing of Virginia Avenue Northwest to permit construction of the Pan American Union annex, and urged improvement of playground equipment at the Francis Scott Key School.

Southeast

The Commissioners' plan to rent the new National Guard Armory as a meeting hall so that it would be a source of revenue to the District last night received the support of the Southeast Citizens Association.

Full support to the Police Department in its efforts to reduce traffic accidents was offered, and the association urged the employment of additional policemen for traffic duty.

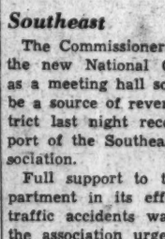
Another resolution adopted last night urged the Public Utilities Commission to have street car stops placed at the west side of the Barney Circle and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

The association also recommended that either Miss Bessie Wood Cramer or Dr. Robert W. Eaves be chosen superintendent of the Seventh Division of District Schools, to replace Miss Elizabeth Hummer, who is resigning.

Lewis Barrett, Recreation Chief, Quits D. C. Post

Lewis R. Barrett, District Director of Recreation, has resigned his post to enter private business, it was learned yesterday.

Presently on leave of absence, Barrett was appointed coordinator of recreational facilities in July, 1939, and was instrumental in bringing about a unified recreational program in the District.



BARRETT

It is understood his resignation has been accepted by the District Recreation Committee, which is composed of representatives of the schools, municipal government and the National Capital Parks.

Ten days ago, when Barrett took leave, the National Parks Service assigned Milo F. Christiansen to act as coordinator until a new permanent director is named.

For many years prior to the consolidation of the playgrounds and recreational grounds in 1939 the District had three separate systems without a coordinating head.

District Relief Budget Scored By Minister

By Robert Tate Allan

The Rev. John L. Mixon, director of the Social Welfare Department of the Washington Federation of Churches, yesterday criticized Congress for failure to meet what he called "its responsibility toward the total District fiscal budget, especially in relief needs."

In his report at a city-wide meeting of church social workers and other social agency representatives, the Rev. Mr. Mixon said that, because Congress fails to appropriate enough for minimum District needs, the Community Chest is forced to meet a larger share, and is criticized for doing do.

"There is no board of public welfare in the country today that is facing such acute problems and has such meager funds to meet them," he declared at the Federation of Churches' building, 1749-51 N Street Northwest.

He pointed out that while the average per capita contribution to public relief throughout the country is $5.59, it is but $1.38 in the District. On the other hand, he said, the statistics for private relief show that the District's per capita contribution is 57 cents, or 9 cents higher than the National per capita contribution. The social welfare department is Chest-supported.

Make Recommendations

Another high spot of the meeting—called for the purpose of reviewing the accomplishments of the young department and mapping plans for expansion—was the drafting of several recommendations.

They included a change in the department name to "The Christian Social Relations Department of the Washington Federation of Churches" for the purpose of giving wider scope to its activities; an enlarged social education program in churches to better acquaint them with the social needs of the community and the available resources for meeting those needs and further coordination of all Federation welfare activities throughout the department.

The recommendations will be submitted to the directors of the Federation in February, said the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, chairman of the Social Welfare Department, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, and brother of the Right Rev. Henry Saint George Tucker, presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church in America.

Social Workers Give Skit

Preceding the afternoon seminars the social workers saw a skit, "It's All in a Day's Work," dramatize the program of the department, which serves as a liaison agency between church-sponsored welfare activities and the various types of services offered by the Community Chest and such groups. The cast included the Rev. Mr. Mixon; Miss Frances Humphrey, his secretary; Miss Alyne Munson, of All Soul's Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Martha Dudley, former supervisor of Temple Recreation Center.

The democratic Rev. Mr. Tucker, whose congregation was among the first in Washington to employ a salaried social worker, helped clear away the dishes after the luncheon and seemed to enjoy the job.

Herbert Willet, director of the Community Chest; Miss Frances Dysinger, executive secretary of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society, and Dr. William Barnhart, new executive secretary of the Federation of Churches, were among those attending.

250 D.C. Members Hear U. S. Leader at Session With Optimist Club

Boys' Clubs throughout the Nation "have been working for national defense for years, through building strong, clean-minded youth," Chairman William Edwin Hall of the Boys Clubs of America last night told more than 250 members of the Boys Club of Washington and their "uncles," members of the Optimist Club.

Speaking at a joint banquet of the two groups commemorating the 55th anniversary of the District boys' group and 15 years of Optimists' boys work, Hall asked: "If defense means emphasis on production, where can the Nation find better agencies for training men than through the Boys' Clubs?"

"I am glad to say we have just completed a survey of a great number of Boys' Clubs throughout the United States and I can report that no matter what nationality these boys are, they are just as patriotic as any American who can trace his ancestry to Plymouth or Jamestown."

Master of Ceremonies Richard C. Dean introduced as guests of honor seven men who have been "outstanding in work with boys' groups in Washington."

The honor guests were Frank R. Jelleff, founder of the Boys Club of Washington and now chairman of its board; A. F. E. Horn, president of the club; Foster M. Reeder, Eugene Meyer, B. H. McKelway, Patrick J. Hurley and Judge Harry P. Kennedy.

Hall, who came down from New York for the occasion, paid tribute to Jelleff as "the man who probably has made more real sacrifices than anyone else in the country so that the Boys' Clubs might prosper."

Former members of the Boys Club of Washington who are now successful in various lines were introduced by Managing Director Charles M. Fyfe. They included: E. Barnwell Smith, Meyer Koonin, Harry S. Wender, Wallace A. Bruder, Charles Barbour, David Shapiro, David Wolf, Edwin Steffe, Oliver Dryzer, Thomas Hier, Peter De Anna and Irving Holbrook.

Featured in the entertainment program put on by the boys were songs by George Kiley and George Hahn, a harmonica trio of Harry Hier, Tom Hier and George Haje, and a brief talk by "Buddy" Marmo, president of the East Washington Junior Optimist Club.

Meanwhile, the newly organized Dads' Club of the Boys' Club of Washington, last night announced as its new officers J. W. Martin, president; E. J. Schaffer, vice president; E. G. Bentley, recording secretary; M. R. Spitzer, financial secretary, and P. Brooks, treasurer.

A special meeting of the club's executive committee is scheduled for tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the clubhouse, Seventeenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Southeast. Plans now involve setting aside four nights a month in which the dads will be permitted to use the facilities of the club.

Circuit Judges Ask New D. C. Courthouse

The "early erection" of a new District Courthouse was urged in a report of the Judicial Conference of Senior Circuit Judges made public yesterday following the conference's recess.

In calling for a new structure, the conference rescinded the action taken at its session last October. The name of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes was affixed to the recommendations of the body.

Abolition of the fee system for payment of referees in bankruptcy cases and the substitution of a system of full-time referees at fixed salaries was recommended. The new system "should be adopted for the country at large in so far as such system may be justified by local conditions," it was stated.

The conference further recommended that the director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts conduct a Nation-wide survey to determine in what sections of the country the system is practical and to what extent it should be supplemented by part-time referees on a salary basis.

At the recommendation of the director, the conference would be authorized to determine the number of referees, the territory over which each should exercise jurisdiction, and the salaries they should receive.

Under the proposal the power of selection and appointment of referees would remain in the district judges, with majority rule in appointments, extending over more than one territorial jurisdiction.

Additional power would be placed in the hands of the district judges by giving them the power of removing referees for incompetency, misconduct, inefficiency or neglect of duty.

The Conference agreed to order the director to cooperate with the Attorney General in obtaining appropriations for the fiscal year 1942 for Department of Justice examiners to carry out the body's suggestions.

Request for Hangar Fund Is Refused

Knox Meets Navy Yard Delegates

Representatives From All Over U. S. Present Demands For Increase in Pay

Demands for pay increases were presented to Secretary of the Navy Knox yesterday by delegates from every Navy Yard in the United States and its possessions.

More than 45 men, many from territorial possessions called at the Secretary's office and conferred with Capt. L. M. Atkins, assistant director of shore establishments, and officers of the Navy Wage Board of Review, which made a study of pay schedules last summer for the Secretary.

The Navy Department said that the meeting "went off satisfactorily," and Capt. Atkins explained that the data presented by the delegates would be studied by the Secretary and compared with the findings of the wage board.

The findings of the wage board led Secretary Knox last fall to give 44,000 employes a total raise of $3,800,000 a year. An average of less than $1 a week, the adjustment led to wide protests.

It was the first wage change in 11 years, made under an act of 1862 ordering the Secretary to revise rates periodically to keep them in line with prevailing wages in private industry in each community.

When 4,000 machinists at the Washington Navy Yard, who received 16-cent-a-week raises, protested last November, Secretary Knox said there was "no likelihood" of readjustments at that time.

Yesterday's conference will be followed by another between Navy officials and international officers of American Federation of Labor unions which have members working in the yards, Joseph J. McDonagh, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. L.'s metal trades department, said last night.

McDonagh, who arranged yesterday's meeting, was elected to his office to replace W. A. Calvin at last fall's A. F. L. convention in New Orleans. Calvin was one of two labor members of the Navy Wage Board of Review that unanimously recommended the wage adjustments made in November.

Vera Steadman Struck by 2 Autos

Beverly Hills, Calif., Jan. 28 (AP). Vera Steadman, 40, comedienne of silent movies, was injured critically tonight by automobiles while she was crossing an intersection in Beverly Hills.

She was taken to a hospital for X-ray examination to ascertain if her back was broken. Police said that one automobile struck her, then another machine hit her after she was thrown clear of the first car.

Eagles Beat Sea Gulls, 8-4; Tie Own Record

2,366 Watch Washington Break Jinx

Eastern Ice Hockey Leaders Extend Undefeated Streak To 11; Burns Out

By Jack Munhall

Tying their own record for goals in a single match this season, the Washington Eagles last night humiliated their nemesis, the Atlantic City Seagulls and at the same time proved that Norm Burns is not indispensable to their attack with an 8-4 victory at Riverside Stadium.

To the whooping delight of 2,336 paying patrons who braved slippery streets to cheer on their favorites, the Eastern Amateur League leaders checked the Gulls' jinx by defeating the visitors for the first time in five meetings.

Even without Burns, the league's leading scorer who missed the match with an eye closed by his injury Sunday, the Eagles extended their streak to 11 undefeated matches against the same team that interrupted that string at eight straight with a 2-2 tie at Atlantic City Saturday night.

Courteau Stars

Washington heroes were numerous as the MacKenzie men started sloppily, inserted some brilliant hockey into the last part of the first period and through the second, and then finished carelessly as they had begun by allowing the Gulls three goals in the final stanza.

Prominent among these stars were pugnacious Paul Courteau, who blazed the way with three goals, reliable old Len Burrage, who weighed in with a pair, and Hal Dewey, who established a local record by assisting in the scoring of four goals. And, lest we forget it, there was the matter of Johnny McTeer's first point of the season. Large John trucked his 220-odd pounds down ice in the second period to help Courteau flash the red light and thereby removed from himself the doubtful honor of being the only player in the league without a single point for the season. Ross Knipfel, Jim McCurry, Burrage and McTeer all sparkled on defense.

Increase Lead

The triumph increased the flying Eagles lead over the second-place Baltimore Orioles to the respectable proportions of seven points. Baltimore plays here Friday night.

Loosening of the match suspension penalty announced yesterday apparently was taken literally by both teams for the match opened with the display of the high sticking, roughing and elbowing which usually precedes mass fighting.

Washington, with the amazing Burrage at the helm, grabbed a 2-1 lead amid the procession to the penalty box where five players were committed for two-minute sentences.

Burrage, throwing his 145 pounds recklessly into the wild fray, scored both Washington goals, the first one unassisted at 10:44, and the second on a following of a shot missed by Dewey at 12:41.

Dick Scores

The Seagulls' goal of the session was tallied by Dick, instigator of most of the incidents. In typical fashion Dick scored en route from the penalty box. Skating out on the ice ahead of a pass made from the Washington defensive zone, he picked up the puck with no one ahead of him and beat Goalie Hemming at 13:06.

Nettled by the Seagulls' tactics, the Eagles in the second period went on one of their most productive scoring sprees to ram across

Out Boots and Bold Irishman Also Rated Chief Contenders in Maryland Fixture.

(Picture On Page 18.)

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 28. — Whirlaway, Our Boots and Bold Irishman, voted 1-2-3 as the 1940 2-year-old champions, topped a field of 54 eligibles nominated today for the $50,000-added Preakness at Pimlico May 10.

A cold wind whistler through Pimlico's empty stables and about six inches of snow covered the historic racing strip as the Maryland Jockey Club, headed by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, warmed up spring turf chatter with announcement of the eligibles.

They make up a who's who of 1940's juvenile stars, plus colt contenders likely to head the 1941 3-year-old parade.

Whirlaway Tops Field

Calumet Farm's Whirlaway tops the 54-horse field in the fifty-first running of the Preakness by reason of his 1940 rating.

But Bold Irishman, Wheatley Stable's ace, and Woodvale Farm's Our Boots left Whirlaway behind when the trio last met in the Pimlico Futurity in November. It was Bold Irishman by a nose, with Our Boots in the place position about three lengths ahead of Whirlaway, who bore out at the head of the stretch.

Whilaway returned a week later, displaying a liking for the Pimlico strip by scoring easily in the Walden Stakes, his last race as a 2-year-old.

Whirlaway Big Winner

New World won the Maryland Futurity at Laurel and the Grand Union Hotel Stakes; Porter's Cap the Washington Park Futurity, and Bushwacker, the New England Futurity.

Besides the Walden, Whirlaway took the Saratoga Special, the Hopeful Stakes, and the Breeders Futurity, and Our Boots won the Belmont Futurity, richest stake for 2-year-olds.

Greentree Stable's Monday Lunch, King Ranch's Dispose, Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Magnificent, and Col. E. R. Bradley's Bryan Station, must also be rated strong contenders.

Bradley's Bimelech returned $33,-230 to his owner by winning the Golden Jubilee Preakness in 1940.

The race is expected to have a gross value of $80,000 this year, jockey club officials said.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Not all of the citizenry is enthralled by the pirouettes and fancy routines of the lads and lassies in grease paint who do their specialty acts in the ice extravaganzas. The tinsel and soft lights are pretty enough, but this country's rugged little group of speed skaters think their original art is being profaned.

Speed skating was a sport of several centuries lineage when the figure skating and the Ice Follies weren't even a gleam in the producers' eyes. The ladies and gentlemen who put on their skates with the idea of going places in a great hurry are proud of the fact that theirs is the fastest mode of human progress without the aid of the machine.

Track coaches talk passionately of the four-minute mile by the runner of the future, but the man who eventually does run the four-minute mile would be licked by nearly a half mile by a speed skater doing the same distance. Thunberg, the great Finnish speed skating artist, completed his fastest mile in 2 minutes, 38 seconds. With a flying start, the mile has been skated in 2:12 3-5.

Folks were skating for speed 760 years ago, according to an old translation of Fitz-Stephen's "Description of London" which in 1180 published the following:

"When the great moore (which watereth the walls of the citie on the North Side) is frozen, many young men play on the yce . . . some tye bones to their feet and under the heeles and shiving themselves with a little picked staffe do slide as swiftlie as a birde flyeth in the aire or an arrow out of a crossbow."

The evidence is that the young men of England appropriated the business of skating from the countries across the Channel because it is known that the earliest form of skate is that of the bone runners worn by the primitive Norsemen. The Norse bound the bone runners to their feet with thongs.

That skating was bound to be a popular sport in Holland with its canals and other waterways was certain, of course. And the Encyclopedia Brittanica makes note that numerous Holland paintings of two centuries ago depict ice racing scenes.

The little town of Newburgh, N. Y. was the capital of American speed skating 100 years ago, probably because it was the birthplace of Charles June, who from 1838 for a period of many years was considered the American champion. It was Newburgh also that gave to American speed skating the Donoghue family, whose most illustrious member was Joseph Donoghue. In 1891, in the international speed skating meet at Amsterdam, Joseph Donoghue won every event.

Speed skating's greatest impetus from a fast-time angle came from the invention and introduction of the Norwegian skate by Axel Paulsen and Harald Hagen in 1887. Up to that point, the racers were using merely their native steel, clamped to comfortable shoes, but the Norwegian pair made their skate of specially hardened steel, set in a hollow, horizontal tube of aluminum with footplates riveted to a close-fitting boot. Their skate had the recommendations of lightness, strength and the diminution of friction. Essentially it is the same skate in use today.

Modern speed skaters use a longer blade than the figure skating folk who would be tripped during their antics by the lengthy blade. And when you see the best of the speed skaters in action, he is taking a stride of approximately six or seven yards each time he sets his skate down. Champion Donoghue's stroke in 1891 was computed at about nine yards, but the trend toward increased speed has been accompanied by the shorter stride.

Rarely is the speed skating champion a devotee of figure skating, for the same reason, perhaps, that the tango has little appeal for the track star. In fact, the speed skaters are quite resentful of the wide popularity of the extravagant ice shows which has shoved their own type of competition into the background. But the more practical of the speed skating group recognize that any sort of show that puts skating before the general public is a boon to the sport which had little chance of thriving except in the Northern States.

Washington is going to get its first glimpse if this more virile phase of ice skating when the national indoor championships are held at the Uline arena next month. You'll see nothing flossy about the men and women who will lace up their skates and start going places in a hurry, but you will see, as we were saying, the fastest method of human progress without the aid of a machine, which is a pretty good sort of boast.

2 D. C. Women Golfers Win In Florida

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 28.—Medalist Elizabeth Hicks of Pasadena, Calif., and Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta led a parade of favorites through the first round of the tenth annual Miami Biltmore women's golf tournament today.

Miss Hicks, whose qualifying 74 amazed the galleries, shot near-par golf in defeating Mrs. George Church of Coconut Grove, Fla., 6 and 5.

The Atlantan's performance was nearly flawless as she scored an outgoing par 38 and went on to rout Mrs. Marion Hochheimer of New York, 9 and 7, without the loss of a hole.

Jane Cothran Battles

Jane Cothran of Greenville, S. C., runnerup in the last national tournament, carded a first-nine 37 but still was hardest pressed of the favorites in defeating Helen White of New York, 3 and 1.

Louise Suggs, the 17-year-old Georgian from Lithia Springs, who won the first two winter tournaments, kept pace with a 6 and 4 victory over Marie L. Smith, of St. Joseph, Mo.

Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., trimmed Mrs. J. G. Spitz, of Miami, 7 and 5. Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., defeated Catherine Fox, of Glenridge, N. J., 6 and 5.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Washington, won the closest match with a 19-hole victory over Mrs. E. B. Miller, of Summit, N. J.

Mrs. Myron Davy, also of Washington, also won her match.

Miss Hicks will play Mrs. Leon Solomon, of Memphis, 5-4 conqueror of Mrs. Miriam Phipps Lyon, of Miami Beach, in the second round tomorrow.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

San Francisco, Jan. 28.—A bunch of the boys, named Prescott Sullivan and Bob Considine, were whooping it up in DiMaggio's saloon yesterday when what does the waiter do but flush a covey of DiMaggios for us.

CONSIDINE

Dominic, Vince and Tom DiMaggio, all of whom bewilderingly bear the middle name of Paul, came into the bar from the restaurant proper to say they were sorry that Joseph Paul DiMaggio, a brother, was in Duluth, visiting the parents of Mrs. Dorothy (Pauline) Arnold DiMaggio.

The black-haired, rather smallish and wiry DiMaggio boys all took glasses of charged water, lighted up cigarets, and swung legs up over the bar seats. They are nice guys. None of that loud backslapping that seems to go with running a saloon. These fellows are so quiet you have to cup an ear to get what they say.

What they said went something like this:

Tom: (He's the oldest, smallest and only mustached brother. He runs the restaurant): "My brothers have to watch what they say, but I'm no ball player and I can say what I please. I think it's ridiculous that my brother Joe isn't the highest paid player in baseball. I don't say this because he's my brother; I say it as a fan. Joe is the best player, works for the biggest team and plays before the most people. But Hank Greenberg, who can't carry Joe's glove as a fielder, gets more money and so does Jimmy Foxx, and so do maybe Bobby Feller and Buck Newsom.

"There's no justice in that. Remember, I'm talking as an outsider, and not for Joe. But it seems to me that the Yanks never forgave him for holding out that one year. Joe makes fine money. There are some teams, like the Browns, which couldn't pay him half of what he made last year. But that's not the point. He's the best, draws the most people, wins the most games with his hitting, saves the most with his fielding, and should get the most money. It's a matter of principle, and good business . . . for if he doesn't make his money now, in his prime, when is he going to make it? Joe's a $50,000 a year ball player, and he'd get it if he worked for Tom Yawkey or Walter Briggs. Don't think he wouldn't.

"You read where Feller wins so many games. No pitcher wins a game. It's the guys who hit and field for a pitcher. Tell me: who does those things as well as Joe? And who draws more people? You say Feller? Yes, on a given game. But how many times does he start? Forty times at the most. Joe's in there every day. And wouldn't you say that out of all those people who go to see the Yanks play each game that he draws at least one thousand, personally? That's conservative. The figure's probably a lot more, so think what that amounts to, over a hundred and fifty-four games. I still say he's underpaid, and that if the Colonel was alive today that Joe would be making the kind of dough he deserves."

Vince: (He's a strong, thin young man with a sober face and a short pompadour. While he talked his 3-year-old daughter, whom he was holding, playfully kneaded his unmindful face into various looks, with her cute fat hands.)

"I think the Pirates oughta win the pennant next season, if we can come up with a pitcher or two. We were coming strong last season, at the end. That Frisch is great to work for . . . great. I think I'll go all right next season. I didn't do too bad last season . . . hit .289 and hit 19 home runs in half a season. I think I've cured that striking out habit, too. I used to take too much swing. I'd bring my arms 'way back. Now I keep my elbows kinda out in front of me. Makes me swing shorter, and I'm harder to fool. No . . . Joe didn't tell me. It was Paul Waner."

Dominic: (He looks quite small in his street clothes, with the roundish, bespectacled young face of an altar boy. He has a quiet new assurance about him. He no longer seems burdened with the fact that he was the unproven kid brother of a great star.)

"No . . . Joe and I didn't have much to say this past season, about baseball . . . I didn't know about the way a fly ball carries in the Yankee Stadium, so I was playing in too close one day and I made a shoestring catch off Joe. After the game he told me that I'd better play deeper, or I'd find them going over my head.

"The next day I played too deep . . . 'way too deep. And caught one of Joe's line drives near the wall, just because I was out of position. When I was trotting in to the bench I passed him and I could hear him saying, 'I should've pulled that one . . .' Those two catches cost him the runs-batted-in title.

"Sure, he told me a few things, before I went up. Stuff like how Newsom pitches, and a few other things. But not much. I dunno . . . we never talk baseball when we're together. I mean inside baseball. We talked about the laughs we've had and tell stories, that's all. Besides, you gotta go up to that plate by yourself . . .

"I'd like to see Joe play 77 games in Fenway Park. He'd never hit under .400, with that left field fence to shoot for. He'd go well over .400, I believe. Shucks, I hit .301 last year. Knocked eight home runs. And if a little punk like me can do that, what do you think Joe would do?"

Cardinal Contract Is Refused by Mize

St. Louis, Jan. 28 (AP).—Johnny Mize, whose 43 home runs topped both Major Leagues last year, declined to accept the 1941 contract offered today by the Cardinals.

As usual, the salary figures were not disclosed.

No future conferences were scheduled.

The big first baseman talked separately with General Manager Branch Rickey and President Sam Breadon.

Hoppe Takes First Match After Illness

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Willie Hoppe, still weak from an attack of pneumonia, but as precise as ever, began defense of his world's three-cushion billiards championship tonight with a brilliant 50-to-15 victory over young Herbert Peterson, of St. Louis.

Chalk-faced, but immaculate in a dinner jacket, Hoppe required only 32 innings to dispose of his inexperienced foe, tying the "best game" so far posted in this tournament.

Hoppe was "cold" at the start and for several innings could not pull away from Peterson. But in the 19th frame he settled down and ran off nine points, only two under the meet high at this point, and went on from there to make the match a run-a-way.

He complained of being a little weak before the match started, indicating he desired to finish it as soon as possible so he could return to his hotel to rest for tomorrow's match. This he did after beating Peterson in only 50 minutes, fastest contest of the meet.

Rallies Brilliantly

Peterson, although ill at ease before the large crowd, ran up a 5-2 edge on the champion and the lead see-sawed until Hoppe clicked off his nine-run, giving him a 22 to 11 advantage.

From this point on Hoppe, despite having only three days of practice, reeled off as brilliant billiards as he ever played, scoring 28 points in 13 innings.

Hoppe collapsed 19 days ago while successfully defending his world title in a 480 point challenge match with Jake Schaefer of Cleveland. An attack of influenza developed into pneumonia.

While he was recuperating his 17 rivals in this tournament began competition. Thus Hoppe now faces the handicap of regaining his strength while he plays and also of meeting each of the tournament entrants between now and February 12, when the title battle ends.

Coach 'Hap' Hardell Shifted to Roosevelt

Teaching Shortage Is Reason for Change Of McKinley Mentor

By Bill Burnett

Thirty years of association with the same school—McKinley High—as student, star athlete, coach and teacher will come to an end for Elmer (Hap) Hardell when he is transferred to Roosevelt High next Monday.

Revelation of the move was made last night by Tech Principal Frank C. Daniel, with the explanation that "shortage of mechanical drawing teachers at Roosevelt made it necessary."

The popular veteran who came to the Second and T Street school in 1910 as a high school freshman thus loses all connection with the institution at which he accounted for the most dazzling coaching record in Washington history. And his transfer completes the "break" with Tech officials that began in 1936 when he was relieved of his coaching duties there.

A quarter-miler of unusual ability during his undergraduate days at McKinley (he set three all-time records), Hardell later attended Michigan University. After graduating from Michigan he moved back to Tech as a teacher, eventually taking over the athletic directorship in 1923. From then until 1936 he turned out some of the best football and track teams ever seen here.

From 1936 until 1939 Hardell confined himself to teaching at Tech, but in the latter year he accepted the varsity track and freshman football mentorship at Georgetown University. He continued helping out with mathematics teaching at Tech, however, despite the fact he held no certificate to do so. His chosen line was mechanical drawing, for which services Tech seemed to have no use.

The chances that Hardell will coach either football or track at Roosevelt are practically nil. Since asking to be relieved at Tech, "Hap" has had no more to do with scholastic athletics than frequent attendance at games. He has, however, carried his coaching brilliance to Georgetown, where both frosh gridders and varsity cindermen have hung up fine records as a result of his tutoring.

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo:

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

Just a few more thousand words from your little calory counter here in the tropics. I did the driving on the way up from Key West and that friend of mine slept in the back seat. He asked a simple question at Key West and hasn't been right since. He saw some big goblets on the back of the bar and asked: "What are they for?" The bartender explained that they were "brandy sniffers." It seems the old sailors put a small drink of brandy in the bottom, roll the glass in their hands to warm it and then sniff at the aroma before taking the drink. My friend got the thing all mixed up. He ordered brandy, filled the glass, drank it down in a couple of gulps and before I could catch him he had sniffed four mahogany trees, eight Australian pines and six night blooming cereus. But, all kidding aside, that ride between Key West and Miami is a honey. Since the railroad was abandoned, many of the bridges have been used for the road. The whole layout is called the Overseas Highway and the most spectacular feature is a seven-mile bridge. This span was only wide enough for a single railroad track and it was turned into a concrete highway, allowing plenty of room for two cars to pass. They tell me that many contractors took a vacation trip when bids were opened. But an engineer named B. M. Duncan stepped up and turned out a 20-foot-wide road on the bridge without injuring a single workman or losing a tool overboard and he did it for $35,000 less than the lowest contract. I've done a little roadbuilding myself in my time. Didn't I build that road into Jimmy's, using nothing but inability with a pair of dice?

HAIGHT

Well, Boss, I hope you like the way I've been getting around. For years the only thing I knew about this part of the country was the way to the race track. It is a change for me—I mean broadening my education instead of my figure.

There's a story that is a favorite with the Miami natives. They say there was a young man here who had an old uncle in Los Angeles. He received a telegram one day saying that his uncle was dying and wanted to talk to him before he passed away. The young man was short on money and he wondered how he could get to California. He remembered that he had his old motorcycle and decided to borrow enough money to have the thing fixed up so he could make the trip. He finally got started. He rode day and night. He arrived at his uncle's Los Angeles home. It was raining hard at the time and his aunt said, "Come in and bring your motorcycle into the hall out of the rain." The young man brought his motorcycle into the house, braced it against the wall and asked his aunt, "How is uncle?" His aunt replied, "He is failing rapidly. You had better hurry upstairs and see him." The young man started up the stairs and just then one of the tires on the motorcycle blew out with a loud report. The young man rushed up to his uncle's bedroom door, opened it and went in. His uncle was doing a jitterbug dance in the middle of the bed and humming "Ferryboat Serenade." "his is what happened. That tire had been blown up in Miami and when it blew out, that good air circulated over that house and as soon

Gonzaga's Last-Period Attack Beats Western High, 32-23

Purple Five Registers Ninth Victory

Hart Downs Paces Winners' Attack And Takes Scoring Honors With Nine

Putting the pressure on a tiring Western five in the last period, Gonzaga High registered its ninth triumph in 12 starts yesterday with a 32-23 victory at the Purple gym.

The winners, preparing for their first meeting of the season with their big rival, St. John's, on Saturday, were held practically even for three quarters before putting on the spluge that won. They tailed, 5-4, after one session, but then boasted slim leads of 10-9 and 16-15 after the second and third.

Pacing the scoring streak that saw the Eagles tally 16 points to their foes' 8, in the last quarter, was little Hart Downs, a spindley youngster with a hot scoring hand. He rang up 9 points to nose out Western's Jimmy Karas and his own mate, Bob Mulvihill, who registered 8 and 7, respectively.

The winners used only 7 players, while Western stuck to its starting lineup throughout.

Little Hoyas Beat Wilson Five, 42 to 34

After three-quarters of up-and-down play, Georgetown Prep basketers pulled away from Woodrow Wilson yesterday to capture their sixth victory against five losses this season, 42-34, on the Garrett Park floor.

Until the sudden spurt, however, the tide of battle might have gone either way. Wilson had the upper hand by an 11-9 count after one period, but at intermission the Little Hoyas were leading, 18-17. Though Prep still was out front, 33-31, at the end of the third quarter, Wilson was in the running until Bob Barrett, Ben Decker and Ray Schneider took matters in their hands.

They accounted for nine points in the last period while Wilson was held to a mere three.

Barrett came out on top in the scoring race, tallying 14 points toward the winning score, but he was tier by the Tigers' Eddie Polhamus for game honors. Decker had 12 points and Schneider 11, while Wilson's Don Hillock managed for ten.

Max Smart, Noted Trainer, Dies at 67

Funeral services for Maxwell (Max) Smart, 67, famous colored trainer of horses, who died yesterday morning at Georgetown University Hospital, will be held at 9 o'clock Friday morning at the Church of the Incarnation, 1012 Browning Place, Deanwood, Father Michael Gumbleton officiating.

A native of Columbia, S. C., he came here at the age of 10, and served on the race track for 52 years, training for the late Samuel H. Ross, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Houghton P. Metcalf and Breckenbridge Long, such famous horses as Saxonby, High Velocity, Glamor Girl and Patissiere.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Katherine B. Smart; a daughter, Mrs. Gladys Breen and a son, Raymond M. Smart. Interment will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Among horsemen, Smart was recognized as an outstanding conditioner of 2-year-olds. It was not uncommon for the late trainer to have in his charge at Benning as many as 60 juveniles turned over to him for conditioning by trainers of large stables.

Army Calls Eddie Johnson, Son Of Big Train, to Colors Feb. 10

Montgomery County Selective Service Board No. 1 Calls Former Maryland U. Star

Edwin Roberts Johnson, better known as "Eddie," son of the Big Train, was among those announced as selectees by the Montgomery County Selective Service Board No. 1 at Rockville, Md., yesterday. Eddie is 23 and registered as living at Germantown, Md., but he is in Miami now with his bangtails.

County Commissioner Walter Johnson, the "Big Train" himself, said yesterday that he expects Eddie to return home in time to report for induction, February 10. Selective Service officials at Rockville said that they did not know whether Eddie would return there or report for induction by the local board in Miami.

Commissioner Johnson said he had been informed that his son will return to Rockville for induction although he had not talked to him as yet.

Eddie was a baseball and basketball player and president of the student council at Maryland University. He had planned the life of a country gentleman farmer at Germantown, but a year ago he succumbed to the lure of the turf and acquired a string of horses. His plans for the horses have not been made as yet but his 6 feet of blond good looks is scheduled for a suit of khaki.

His father hopes he will be at Camp Meade so he can get home once in a while.

Bethesda Turns Back Coolidge Five, 36-19

The roaring cage Barons of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, their eyes on the year's first basketball encounter with Montgomery Blair tomorrow night at Ritchie Coliseum, issued Calvin Coolidge's youthful club its most decisive defeat of the season yesterday, 36-19.

Off to a dazzling start in the game at Coolidge's new gym, the Barons improved their margin almost at will to register their eleventh victory in 14 games this year. The losers have a record of three won and three lost.

The first eight minutes saw Bethesda romp into a 10-2 lead, and that ended the hosts' hopes. They were on the bottom by 19-5 at the half, and 28-14 after three quarters.

Though no less than five of his field goals were voided for one reason or another, Bob Cremins, stocky Baron forward, kicked in with seven good ones to steal the scoring show. Richie Waterman, angular center of Coolidge, led his team with eight points.

Scalzo-Wright Fight Halted By N. Y. Body

Promoter Joe Turner's efforts to stage a Petey Scalzo-Chalky Wright world's featherweight championship fight, National Boxing Association version, here in April hit a snag yesterday.

The stumbling block proved to be the Harry Jeffra-Joey Archibald world's featherweight title fight, New York-California version, which Turner is promoting at Uline's arena February 18.

Wright Gets His Orders

The New York Athletic Commission threw the monkey wrench into the machinery in New York yesterday when they bound Jeffra, Archibald, and Wright to a series of two bouts.

Forfeit checks of $1,000 binding the three to the elimination to determine the New York-California champion were posted with the Commission, the Associated Press reported.

At the same time, the New York body virtually ordered Wright that he must not engage in any other title fight until he meets the Archibald-Jeffra winner.

Sign Papers Friday

Turner only yesterday sent Wright contracts for the Scalzo fight here in April. Scalzo, the N. B. A. champion, already has signed. The New York Commission, however, has ordered Wright, Jeffra, and Archibald to report in New York Friday to sign the necessary papers.

Jeffra now working out at Madame Bey's with Red Burman, who fights Joe Louis Friday night for the heavyweight title, is recognized as featherweight champion in New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania and California.

Columbus Sees Tough Test In Citadel Bouts

Columbus University's boxing team hasn't picked any soft touch for its first match of the season, a bout with The Citadel Saturday night at Turner's Arena.

The Bulldogs haven't fought so far this year. Their first bouts, a January 8 engagement with Clemson, was canceled because of a flu epidemic. The first test of their ability comes today in Winston-Salem, when they take on Virginia Tech's ringmen.

But The Citadel lads always manage to come up with a strong team. For one thing, The Citadel is a military school, and the boxers are always in tiptop shape. For another, Coach Matty Matthews, an old-timer, usually manages to whip his material into better than passable shape.

Champion on Squad

Mathews dropped the boxing team after establishing it at the Charleston, S. C., school, but resumed active coaching in 1937. Since that time he hasn't missed a year in placing at least one man on the Southern Conference boxing team.

In 1937 the all-Conference clouter was Orville Rogers, a heavyweight from Miami. In 1938 Orville's brother Hugh, another heavy, made the conference team. Lynwood Duncan, of Rock Hill, S. C., a 175-pounder, was the delegate in 1939, and in 1940 the Bulldogs placed two men—Lou Lempesis, a Charleston Greek, and Dick Bagnal, of Winston-Salem, N. C. Lempesis, a welter, is still on the team, but Bagnal, a feather, has graduated.

This year's team is rich in experienced battlers, and the hunch is that the Explorers will more than have their hands full Saturday night.

Citadel Lineup Named

Coach Mathews can place an experienced man in every position but two—the featherweight spot in which Jack Foster, a sophomore, has cinched the starting call, and the heavy slot, where Lew Schott rules the roost.

The South Carolina lineup will be as follows for the Saturday match:

Bantamweight—Gil Hoffman, a letterman.

Featherweight—Jack Foster, a soph.

Lightweight—Herb Stackhouse, a letterman.

Welterweight—Lou Lempesis, conference champion.

155 pounds—Capt. Dick Ulrich, a letterman.

165 pounds—Lew Sammusson, a letterman.

Light heavyweight—G. P. Joseph, also experienced.

Unlimited—Lew Schott, a sophomore.

Considering that the Explorers have only two veterans, and that examinations have virtually killed consistent practice this week, Jim McNamara's team will be lucky to break even with the visitors.

His workouts halted by studies, McNamara as yet hasn't named his starting team, and probably won't before Friday.

Scissors Exponent Is Matched Here Tomorrow Night

The last of the truly great scissors experts—Fred Grobmier—yesterday was matched with Eddie Newman, rough Nev Yorker, for a 30-minute tussle on tomorrow night's wrestling card at Turner's Arena.

Grobmier, strapping six-footer who is considered along with Joe Steche as the two outstanding scissors exponents in the history of the mat game, will wrestle in support of the feature battle between The Green Hornet, mysterious masked man, and "Gentleman Lou" Plummer, Baltimore Villain.

Grobmier, sometimes known as Farmer Fred, defeated Tiger Tasker, of Alaska, last week after a 6-month absence from the local mats.

Other bouts will find Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle against Chris Zaharias; Dick Stahl, newcomer from Wisconsin, against Joe DeValteau, French refugee, and Paul Boesch, of California, against Ivan Managoff.

Mickey Owen Balks at Terms

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 28 (AP).—Arnold (Mickey) Owen, 24-year-old catcher, obtained last year by the Brooklyn Dodgers from the St. Louis Cardinals, has returned his third unsigned contract.

Owen, who owns two farms south of here, said he had been offered a slight raise, "but no more than I would have been given if I still was with the Cardinals."

He indicated he thought he deserved "about two-thirds of what Gus Mancuso got last year for sitting on the bench most of the season." Mancuso's salary was $15,000, Owen estimated.

Petworth Victorious

Tide Smashes St. John's Five Again, 31-14

For the second time this season, St. John's High cagemen got themselves swamped by Eastern yesterday, the White Tide limiting the Johnnies to exactly no points in the first period and coasting to a 31-14 decision.

Of the 12 players used indiscriminately by the winning hosts, Neil Craig, forward, proved best in the scoring department. He hit the rim for four field goals and two foul points to edge out Mike Lieb, with eight markers, for honors. Dick Hathaway was high for the Johnnies with 7 points.

While Eastern was running up 11 points in the opening stanza, the Johnnies' were missing everything they threw at the goal. They outscored their tormentors in the second period, but still came out with a 17-8 deficit at intermission. A barren spell hit both clubs in the third quarter and they went into the final period with Eastern leading, 21-10.

It was the ninth triumph of the year for Eastern, which has been beaten only twice.

With 65 boys already entered, the field for the third annual City Wide Swimming championships of the Boys Club of Washington may reach 100 before tonight when entries close, it was estimated last night.

Meanwhile officials for the event, which will be staged in two sections Saturday, were announced. A. Each entry will be limited to participation in three events. A total of four classes will be observed. A special trophy will go to the team scoring the most points.

Landon's Paul Baker Threatens Tech's Walsh for Scoring Lead

Prep School Basketer Now Has 10.66 Average; Conselman, Gonzaga, Is Third

Jackie Walsh, Tech High's torrid forward, had his metropolitan scholastic scoring lead seriously threatened as individual point-making for Washington was computed yesterday.

From an average of 13 points per game in last week's compilation, Walsh dropped to 11 per game as the result of a 1-point performance in a loss to Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

Meanwhile, Paul Baker, of Landon, increased his average to 10.66 with 24 points in two contests last week to take second over Gonzaga's Franny Counselman. The latter dropped to fourth, being limited to 4 points by Roosevelt, and Montgomery Blair's Nick Carter moved into third with a 10-point average.

One of he biggest improvements was shown by Jimmy Karas, Western forward, who jumped from fifteenth to eighth in one week by

Penn Staters To Test Hoyas Here Tonight

Georgetown University's basketball team, in line for the highest national rating ever attained by a Hoya five, will attempt to use strong Penn State as a stepping stone tonight at 8:45 at Riverside Stadium in its most important test to date.

Boasting a winning streak of 10 straight—excluding their defeat by the Brewers in a special 20-minute match—the Hoyas will rule a slight favorite over the Nittany Lions, who two weeks ago were ranked the East's best team and the No. 2 in the nation. Idle since January 18, when they beat Navy, the Lions have slipped to fifth sectionally and ninth nationally.

Hoyas Second in East

Georgetown, idle in college competition, too, since it routed Navy, is now rated second in the East and seventh in the country, and to maintain those lofty spots must preserve its streak against the invaders from Pennsylvania.

Penn State, winner of six of eight games, will be the tallest college team Georgetown has met all year, with every man on the squad towering over 6 feet. The Lions haven't built their fine record at the expense of pushovers, unless N. Y. U., Colgate and Syracuse can be thus classified.

The Lion Georgetown must tame tonight is Captain and Forward Johnny Barr, leading Penn State scorer of 1939 with 231 points and the team's offensive spearhead again this season. Tall and rangy, Barr stands 6-2 and weighs 200 pounds.

Hoyas Bank on Kiernan

Georgetown's answer to Barr's scoring threat will be slender Jim Kiernan, the set shot artist, who has slipped in 104 points in 11 games to pace the Hoya point makers. Closely following Kiernan in the scoring department are Bill Bornheimer, the big sophomore center, Buddy O'Grady and Charley Schmidli, the topportunist whose timely baskets have aided in G. U.'s biggest victories.

An unusually attractive and perhaps significant preliminary at 7:30 o'clock will bring together the freshman fives of Georgetown and Catholic University in the first athletic event between the two local Catholic colleges in some 15 years. To some observers this freshman game seems the prelude to the opening of varsity competition between the hot rivals.

Devitt Prep Loses, 43-22, To Hyattsville

The game it expected to be one of the toughest on its schedule proved a walkaway for Hyattsville High's powerful cage team yesterday, the suburban quint giving Devitt Prep a 43-22 beating at Hyattsville.

In winning their ninth game in 12 to date, Hyattsville's basketers raced into an early lead, took the halftime rest boasting a 19-10 advantage, and won going away. Devitt was never able to really function against the victory-hungry hosts.

Unerring Drives to Neck Victory in Feature at Hialeah

Pretty Pet Beaten Out By 4-5 Shot

Challenges Winner Down Stretch but Fails to Catch Him; Harp Weaver Third

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 28.—The Woolford Farm silks of Herbert M. Woolf, which have not been as conspicuous here this season as in recent winters, were borne to a popular triumph by Unerring in the Winter Haven Purse this ideal afternoon. Favorite at 4 to 5 in the field of five fillies and mares, the 5-year-old daughter of Insco lasted to score by a neck over Pretty Pet, representing Hialeah's president, John C. Clark.

Mrs. H. Barnett's Harp Weaver was third, five lengths behind. Unerring, which had been second in her last three efforts, ran the 7 furlongs in 1:24 flat with a crowd of 10,360 looking on.

Unerring and Pretty Pet are eligible for the $50,000 Widener Cup.

Eddie Arcaro Rides Triple at Hialeah; Crowds Don Meade

Arcaro completed his triple in the fifth race when he brought Red Rock home by a length at a $5.30 price. He got off on the right foot in the opening event when he piloted Spanish Moss home to bring his backers a $7.90 reward. His other winner was Tragic Ending, which paid a $10 ticket in the third race.

His three winners today raised his total for the meeting to 16 and placed him in second place behind Don Meade, who has 18. W. Eads is third with 15.

SPANISH MOSS, going in nearest pursuit of the leader from the start, finished gamely to wear TOWN HALL down in the final drive. TOWN HALL, quickest to begin, opened up what appeared a winning lead the first quarter mile, but then faltered. KEEKEE closed fast on the outside to outlay MERRILY ON. The latter performed greenly and should improve.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:36. Off 2:40. Winner, Mrs. D. Hurn's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY VAL, $17.50, $5.80, $4.80; TENACIOUS, $3.40, $2.90; NEDDIE LASS, $6.60.

LADY VAL, slipping through on the inside after leaving the backstretch, moved up steadily and outraced TENACIOUS in the final drive. TENACIOUS displayed keen speed and opened up a good lead rounding the turn, but came wide turning into the stretch, which cost him the race. NEDDIE LASS, hard ridden, also saved ground and disposed of SHEKNOWS in the last furlong. The latter had no excuses.

Daily Double, SPANISH MOSS and LADY VAL, Paid $74.80

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,300; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:09. Off 3:12. Winner, M. Hirsch's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRAGIC ENDING, $10.00, $5.00, $3.30; BOSTON MAN, $21.10, $10.00; CHOPPY SEA (entry), $3.40.

TRAGIC ENDING, responding to strong pressure, gradually bettered his position and wearing BOSTON MAN down, won going away. BOSTON MAN outbroke the field and shook off VALPONE rounding the turn, but was unable to keep stride with the winner when challenged. CHOPPY SEA broke in a tangle, saved ground in the final 3 furlongs and gained steadily to easily dispose of BITTER ENDER. The latter faltered in the stretch run. BLENWEED showed dull effort.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:37. Off 3:37½. Winner, A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELLRINGER, $9.70, $4.30, $3.90; CONSUL, $6.60, $4.60; EBONY BOY, $5.40.

BELLRINGER, showing the most speed, was rated in front while saving ground, but had to be shaken up smartly through the stretch and had nothing in reserve at the end. CONSUL, rated off the pace, slipped through on the inside rounding the lower turn and finished stoutly. EBONY BOY, well up all the way, continued gamely to outlast WEDDING MORN. The latter suffered no mishaps. WOODEN INDIAN was never formidable.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Sunset Isles. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:07½. Winner, Greentree Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED DOCK, $5.30, $3.50, $2.50; POTRANCO, $4.00, $3.90; SUNDODGER, $2.60.

RED DOCK worked his way up gradually while circling the field after leaving the backstretch, finished gamely while bearing in the final drive and disposed of POTRANCO. The latter forced a fast pace and raced RIFTED CLOUDS into defeat, but hung in the final drive. SUNDODGER moved up with determination in the final furlong, but was pinched back by the winner. ONE WITCH, prominent throughout, also suffered from the crowding by the victor.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,500; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Winter Haven. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:37. Winner, Woolford Farm's br. m. UNERRING, away fast, held the field safe for speed while being rated in front and saving ground, continued courageously when challenged and outlasted PRETTY PET. The latter, under a hustling ride and intermittent punishment from the start, made a game effort, but could not overhaul the winner. HARP WEAVER closed stoutly to dispose of WOODVALE LASS in the stretch run. The latter tired on even terms.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:05. Off at once. BOW LOW, first away, set steady pace, responded gamely when placed to drive in stretch, bore out when headed by BAR FLY inside sixteenth pole and came again to be up in final stride. BAR FLY raced forwardly on inside from start, came with rush to take brief lead and fought it out willingly. SIRASIA improved position gradually and hung in final test. DEVIL'S CRAG was unable to keep up early and closed full of run.

Selections at Hialeah

Dear Al:

Friends of Matt Smart, and he had many around the nation's tracks, were shocked to learn of the death of the trainer yesterday. Smart lived up to his name as a conditioner of horses and rose from the ranks to become trainer for Samuel Ross, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, H. P. Metcalf and others. The last time I saw him, he sat with his son bidding on horses at the Vanderbilt sale. He had big plans for 1941, he told me. Smart was a credit to racing and to his race. Two of the finest wrist watches ever awarded in Hialeah's annual jockey race have arrived from Switzerland, and are on display in the jockey room. Each is valued at $900 and will be given to the leading jockey and leading apprentice at the end of the meeting. They are not only of the split second type but contain the stop watch feature such as used in talking time out at football games. Don Meade and Wendell Eads are leading the veterans and apprentices, respectively, for the valuable prizes. Among the distinguished visitors is Mrs. Herbert O'Conor, wife of the Governor of Maryland. Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fallon, parents of Jockey Leo (Skinny) Fallon, arrived from Baltimore, Md., to spend a three week vacation in Miami and renew old acquaintances at Hialeah. Jockey Conn McCreary, who has rdiden nine winners at Hialeah and is the second leading pilot in the apprentice division, was forced to cancel all mounts yesterday. McCreary injured his knee slightly last Monday astride Chance King in the eighth race. He expects to return to the saddle tomorrow. Fourteen different sires have sent out juvenile winners in the first 17 days of racing at Hialeah. Hal Price Headley's Pharamond II is the only sire to have two different winners of the 3 furlong dash over the Nursery Course. The 16-year-old stallion sired Irish Ivy and On Parole. Treemontier, winner of two races thus far, is by Hecla. Starweista, the only other double winner, is by Zacaweista. BILL.

First race—Belleoda will be making the first start of her career and is said to be a good one. True Heart turned in a good second last out and is ready for a good effort. Belute was third in that last.

Second race—Hand and Glove seems to have a lock and key on this purse. Drops back to maiden company and needs only the right handling. Juanita was tipped last out and may be better than generally rated. Ethel Blume was second in good company.

Third race—Silent Witness gave Bow Low a nice battle recently and with that one not in action today I look for Silent Witness to take it all. Mary Schulz gets a good figure. Al Au Feu to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Town Boy won and then came back with a fair race. Seems well placed in this field and Anderson will do the riding. Corydon comes back after a rest and could be prominent off good works. Ringle may cause an upset.

Fifth race—Royal Man carries top top weight of 120 pounds in this, but I'm inclined to string along with him. The distance is right. Equistone won last out and is a threat. No Sir is improving.

Sixth race—Joe Schenck will appreciate the small field in this and may take the major share of the purse. Both Clyde Tolson and The Chief are fit ones, but I'm leaning toward the top fellow.

Seventh race—Dark Phaona is dropping down and may be the

U. S. Steel Net In Year Soars To 102 Million

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 28.—United States Steel Corporation today reported net income in the December quarter of $32,763,251, equal to $3.04 a common share, compared with $28,729,177, or $2.58 a share, in the final quarter of 1939, and $33,103,067, or $3.07 a share, in the September quarter of 1940. A dividend of $1 a share was declared on the common, the same amount paid on December 26, September 20 and April 26 last year.

For 1940, the corporation's net profit was $102,181,321, or $8.84 a common share, the largest since 1930, compared with $41,119,934, or $1.83 a common share, in 1939.

Pension Charge Cited

The corporation announced that in the final 1940 quarter a charge of $6,969,318 was made against earnings for pension payments for the full year. This sum was equal to approximately 80 cents a common share.

The dividend is payable March 20 to stock of record February 20.

The corporation operated at 93.3 per cent of capacity during the fourth quarter compared with 84.3 in the final 1939 quarter. For the year 1940, operations averaged 77.3 per cent compared with 59.3 in 1939.

The corporation reported its total tax bill in the final 1940 quarter was $22,548,130 compared with $21,716,485 in the comparable period a year ago. The total tax bill for 1940 was $85,294,204 compared with $67,017,086 in 1939.

The net income for 1940 of $102,181,321 was the best since 1930 when it totaled $104,421,571, equal to $9.12 a common share.

The corporation reported its pay roll now was running at the annual rate of $492,000,000 compared with the previous high of $432,000,000 in 1937. The pay roll in 1929 totaled $420,000,000. Last year it amounted to $438,621,292.

Priorities Need Unseen

Irving S. Olds, chairman, expressed the opinion that present steel capacity was adequate for normal civilian needs, the requirements of defense and exports to the British Empire. He said he believed an increase in working hours beyond the 40 hours weekly now in effect would not produce a greater amount of steel.

Olds said the corporation has on its order books approximately 4,500,000 tons of ingots or about three months' normal shipments.

"Our direct Government business is about 5 per cent of the total," he said.

"Exports form about 15 per cent of our output on a dollar basis, although they were less in the fourth quarter than the average for the year."

In regard to the capacity of the industry Olds commented:

"The rated capacity of the steel industry is 84,000,000 tons of ingots annually, and approximately 2,500,000 tons of new capacity now is under construction.

"As far as we know, 20,000,000 tons ought to be sufficient to take care of national defense and export needs. That leaves 64,000,000 tons for ordinary domestic uses."

Olds said he did not believe a system of priorities for national defense needs was necessary at present.

"I don't know of any bottlenecks that require priorities now," he asserted.

Regarding steel prices for the second quarter Olds said: "We hope that increased costs will not make it necessary to increase prices. If we have wage increases, it might mean a boost in prices. Wages are a very important part of steel costs."

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and subsidiaries today reported a net profit of $10,277,029 for the year ended December 31, 1940, the largest profit since the company earned $20,848,748 in 1929.

The 1940 total compared to a net profit of $3,188,944 for 1939 and $9,093,287 in 1930, previously the best year since 1929.

Net profit in the fourth quarter of 1940 was $4,044,126 against $2,907,755 in the corresponding period of 1939.

Commonwealth & Southern

After annual dividend requirements on the preferred stock the balance was equal to 12 cents a share on 33,673,327 shares of common stock.

For 1939 the company reported net income of $13,413,636, or $8.94 a share on the preferred and 13 cents a share on the common.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Wheat sagged again today when it became apparent that weather conditions were ideal throughout most of the soft winter wheat belt.

Selling pressure was not heavy, but there always was enough wheat for sale to offset any enthusiasm for the buying side. Prices had a downward trend most of the day, except for a transient rally around noon which saw prices slightly above Monday's close.

At the close, wheat was ⅛@¾ lower than yesterday's finish: May, 84@84⅛; July, 78⅛@78⅛; Corn, ⅛@½ down; May 62⅞; July, 63; oats, unchanged to ⅛ off.

Discouraging to the market also was the continued absence of purchases by milling interests. "There's too much free wheat floating around for the millers to take any chances," said a trader. "They are buying on a hand-to-mouth basis because they feel certain that there will be little change in the immediate situation."

Stocks React, Work Irregularly Lower; Big Over-Counter Deals Dampen Spirits

New York, Jan. 28.—Early rising momentum faded from the stock market today and closing prices were irregularly lower by fractions to a point or so.

In the forenoon buying of steels, rails and industdial specialties propped the list. There was no follow-through, however, and in the final hour the trend turned downward.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off 0.2 of a point at 43.6. The relapse came after yesterday's advance of 0.1 the second upturn in the composite since January 10. Volume expanded at times and transfers totaled 487,730 shares against Monday's turnover of 357,920, smallest since September 16.

While business remained encouraging, brokers said, lack of inspiration from the war news or Congressional activities served to keep many potential buyers in the waiting van.

Attention centered mainly on the U. S. Steel meeting after the conclusion of the session. Directors declared a dividend of $1 a share on the common, the same as paid in April, September and December last year, and reported net earnings for the final quarter of $3.04 a share. Net would have been around $3.84, it was revealed, had not the company deducted the full year's pension payments of nearly $7,000,000 from the last quarter's profits. With this deduction, the full year's net was placed at $8.84 a share, best since 1930, compared with $1.83 in 1939. The common shares, up most of the day, ended unchanged at 67⅛.

Over-the-counter sales of stocks continued to take much of the wind out of the "big board," blocks of 92,700 shares of Standard Oil of Kentucky and 6,000 shares of General American Transportation being offered for private purchase off the exchange after the close.

Not so cheering also was the announcement two stock exchange seats had changed hands at $30,000 each, equaling the recent 41-year low for memberships.

3,018,639 Shares Of Libby Stock Put on Market

Public offering will be made today by a nationwide group of investment underwriters, headed by Glore, Forgan & Co., of 3,018,639 shares of the common stock of Libby, McNeill & Libby at 6⅞ a share.

Other principal members of the underwriting group, which totals 96 firms, include E. H. Rollins & Sons, Inc., Hornblower & Weeks, and Hemphill, Noyes & Co.

The 3,018,639 common shares of Libby formerly owned by Swift & Company represent slightly more than 83 per cent of the outstanding stock.

Pa. Bell Telephone Ordered to Cut Rates

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 28 (AP).—The Public Utility Commission today ordered the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania to revise its tariff in order to resduce rates amounting to $1,400,000 a year, effective March 1.

The commission said this action would conclude its inquiry into the telephone rates, started on May 31, 1938. Commissioner Thomas C. Buchanan dissented, saying that while he favors the reduction he thinks "the amount is too small, and I object to closing the case."

The company has agreed to make the reduction, the P. U. C. said.

'Business as Usual.' For Willard, Now 80

Baltimore, Jan. 28 (AP).—For Daniel Willard, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad president, it was "business as usual" today on his eightieth birthday anniversary.

At Willard's request, no ceremonies were held when "Uncle Dan" came to his desk, a company official said. Willard has been president since 1910.

Clothing and short French combing length, fine territory wools in original bags, received bids in the range 94 to 95 cents, scoured basis. Most of the sales in this market were of fine and half-blood wools of foreign origin. Both spot foreign wools and wools offered for import were receiving an active demand at firm to strong prices.

London Stocks

London, Jan. 28 (AP).—The securities market overcame early irregularity today and closed on a rising note.

British government bonds led the shift in trend and closed with gains ranging to ¼ point. Heavy tax payments and prospects of additional taxes in the next budget, have weighed on this group in the last week or two.

In the foreign bond market Belgian 4s rose smartly and several other European issues attracted attention.

Building-Loan Resources Set New Top Here

Resources of members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League reached a new record peak of $157,550,230 on December 31, 1940, according to the monthly report of Secretary F. Willson Camp. The new level is $2,000,000 higher than the previous record on November 30, 1940, and $16,053,919 more than on December 31, 1939.

Addresing the luncheon meeting yesterday in the Raleigh Hotel, Mr. Camp stated that more than $4,000,000 was put into mortgage loans during December, or about $1,110,000 more than in the same 1939 month. Of this total, nearly $2,800,000 was for construction of new homes. Real estate loans now outstanding aggregate $148,737,039.

Surplus and reserve of members also reached an all-time high of $11,000,000 as of the yearend.

Martin A. Cook, chairman of the annual banquet committee told the members that the 1941 edition will be held at the Mayflower Hotel on March 8 with an estimated attendance of 550. Assisting Cook as vice chairman will be Rudolph W. Santelmann. Chairman for the various sub-committees will be named later, according to Cook.

Sales of Safeway Stores, Inc., which operates many grocery stores in Washington, for the four weeks ended January 18, 1941, were $30,468,439.83, compared with $27,106,893.45 for the four weeks ended January 20, 1940.

The total sales for the four-week period to January 18, 1941, contain the 1940 Christmas week business this year, whereas a year ago these sales were reported in the previous four-week period.

Stores in operation this year total 2,521 against 2,844 a year ago at this time.

Speaking Classes to Start

Leading the Washington delegation will be President Kline and the secretary of the local group, Miss Mary E. Cavess.

U. S. Gold Imports Still Subnormal

By the Associated Press

Gold imports rose to $21,577,682 in the weew ended January 22.

The Commerce Department said the figure, although about five times the size of the preceding week, was still far below the average in recent months. The preceding week figure of $4,152,581 was the lowest in two and a half years.

Last week's rise was due to somewhat larger British Empire shipments including $10,332,827 from Australia, $7,625,466 from Canada, and small amounts from other empire countries.

The only other large shipment was $1,992,511 from the Philippine Islands.

McKesson Net Estimated at $2.71 a Share

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 28.—William J. Wardall, trustee of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., drug concern, testified in Federal Court today that estimated earnings for 1941 would yield substantial dividends on proposed new common stock.

Wardall, appearing in support of a proposed reorganization plan, told Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe that if the estimated earnings were realized, a dividend of between $2.71 and $2.77 a share would accrue, depending upon the amount of taxes that would be assessed.

He said assets were valued under the plan at $76,900,000 and that of this, present preference stockholders would have an equity in $34,327,000 and common stockholders about $9,000,000. The rest would represent the equity of present bondholders and creditors.

Deere & Co.

Deere & Co. reported net income for the fiscal year ending October 31 totaled $12,171,778 compared with $7,627,355 in 1939. Net sales totaled $84,014,688, an increase of almost 20 per cent compared with 1939. Earnings in 1940 were equal to aproximately $3.33 per common share after preferred dividends, compared with $1.89 the previous year.

SEC Concludes Arguments for Multiple Trade

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission concluded the evidence yesterday in a hearing on multiple trading with statistics showing that the volume of trading in securities handled by the New York Stock Exchange was 76.7 per cent of the total volume of 11 principal exchanges in the country.

The hearing is to determine whether the SEC should order the New York Stock Exchange to rescind its rule which prohibits its members who also are members of regional exchanges from trading on the latter exchanges in securities which are listed also in New York.

The statistical data was submitted by Raymond Vernon, financial analyst for the SEC. They showed that in 1929 the New York Exchange volume was only 62.1 per cent of the total.

Timothy Pfeiffer, New York Exchange counsel, objected to submission of the statistical data unless it was shown precisely why they were being entered as evidence.

Gerhard A. Gesell, SEC counsel, then said that he felt that the subdivisions relating to the manner, method and place of soliciting business and to odd lot purchases and sales, clearly were related to the proceedings, but that it might later be shown that some other subdivisions had a bearing on the hearing.

Pfeiffer objected to one line in a table which combined the trading value of the New York Stock Exchange with that of the New York Curb Exchange, on the ground that the combination was misleading and "wholly unnecessary." He said that the purpose "would seem to be to have the New York volume larger than it should be in a proceeding involving only the New York Stock Exchange."

Pretty Pet Beaten Out By 4-5 Shot

Challenges Winner Down Stretch but Fails to Catch Him; Harp Weaver Third

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 28.—The Woolford Farm silks of Herbert M. Woolf, which have not been as conspicuous here this season as in recent winters, were borne to a popular triumph by Unerring in the Winter Haven Purse this ideal afternoon. Favorite at 4 to 5 in the field of five fillies and mares, the 5-year-old daughter of Insco lasted to score by a neck over Pretty Pet, representing Hialeah's president, John C. Clark.

Mrs. H. Barnett's Harp Weaver was third, five lengths behind. Unerring, which had been second in her last three efforts, ran the 7 furlongs in 1:24 flat with a crowd of 10,360 looking on.

Unerring and Pretty Pet are eligible for the $50,000 Widener Cup.

Bobby Vedder hustled Unerring out of the stalls and let her open up a daylight lead. Woodvale Lass tried to run with the favorite. She gave up in the first half mile, while Harp Weaver also found the pace too swift. Pretty Pet, a recent winner, moved up in menacing fashion around the bend. The Clark colorbearer cut down Unerring's advantage through the final furlong, but, despite Porter Roberts' whiplashing, she could not make the grade as Unerring gamely stuck to her task.

Eddie Arcaro Rides Triple at Hialeah; Crowds Don Meade

Arcaro completed his triple in the fifth race when he brought Red Rock home by a length at a $5.30 price. He got off on the right foot in the opening event when he piloted Spanish Moss home to bring his backers a $7.90 reward. His other winner was Tragic Ending, which paid a $10 ticket in the third race.

Arcaro was beaten out in the fourth race by Bellringer. He took the place with Consul, a $6.60 shot.

His three winners today raised his total for the meeting to 16 and placed him in second place behind Don Meade, who has 18. W. Eads is third with 15.

SPANISH MOSS, going in nearest pursuit of the leader from the start, finished gamely to wear TOWN HALL down in the final drive. TOWN HALL, quickest to begin, opened up what appeared a winning lead the first quarter mile, but then faltered. KEEKEE closed fast on the outside to outstay MERRILY ON. The latter performed greenly and should improve.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:36. Off 2:40. Winner, Mrs. D. Hurn's ch. m. NEDDIE LASS, hard ridden, also saved ground and disposed of SHEKNOWS in the last furlong. The latter had no excuses.

TRAGIC ENDING, responding to strong pressure, gradually bettered his position and wearing BOSTON MAN down, won going away. BOSTON MAN outbroke the field and shook off VALPONE rounding the turn, but was unable to keep strfie with the winner when challenged. CHOPPY SEA broke in a tangle, saved ground in the final 3 furlongs and gained steadily to easily dispose of BITTER ENDER. The latter faltered in the stretch run. BLENWEED showed dull effort.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELLRINGER, $9.70, $4.30, $3.90; CONSUL, $6.60, $4.60; EBONY BOY, $5.40.

BELLRINGER, showing the most speed, was rated in front while saving ground, but had to be shaken up smartly through the stretch and had nothing in reserve at the end. CONSUL, rated off the pace, slipped through on the inside rounding the lower turn and finished stoutly. EBONY BOY, well up all the way, continued gamely to outlast WEDDING MORN. The latter suffered no mishaps. WOODEN INDIAN was never formidable.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Sunset Isles. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:07½. Winner, Greentree Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED DOCK, $5.20, $3.50, $2.50; POTRANCO, $4.00, $2.90; SUNDODGER, $2.60.

RED DOCK worked his way up gradually while circling the field after leaving the backstretch, finished gamely while bearing in the final drive and disposed of POTRANCO. The latter forced a fast pace and raced RIFTED CLOUDS into defeat, but hung in the final drive. SUNDODGER moved up with determination in the final furlong, but was pinched back by the winner. ONE WITCH, prominent throughout, also suffered from the crowding by the victor.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,500; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Winter Haven. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:37. Winner, Woolford Farm's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNERRING, $3.60, $2.20, $2.20; PRETTY PET, $2.40, $2.30; HARP WEAVER, $2.60.

UNERRING, away fast, held the field safe for speed while being rated in front and saving ground, continued courageously when challenged and outlasted PRETTY PET. The latter, under a hustling ride and intermittent punishment from the start, made a game effort but could not overhaul the winner. HARP WEAVER closed stoutly to dispose of WOODVALE LASS in the stretch run. WOODVALE LASS ran an even race.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:05. Off at once. Winner, Belair Stud's dk. b. c. (3), by Bosworth—Bay Agnes. Trained by G. Tappen. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48⅘.

BOLIVAR, a forward contender from the start, saved much ground entering the stretch and drew out under mild pressure. LADY LYONORS forced the pace and shook off OLD FRIEND on the stretch turn, but was no match for the winner. BONIFIED closed a big gap in the last 3 furlongs. OLD FRIEND weakened in the final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:35. Off 5:35½. Winner, W. W. Adams' b. f. BOW LOW, first away, set steady pace, responded gamely when placed to drive in stretch, bore out when headed by BAR FLY inside sixteenth pole and came again to be up in final stride. BAR FLY raced forwardly on inside from start, came with rush to take brief lead and fought it out willingly. SIRASIA improved position gradually and hung in final test. DEVIL'S CRAG was unable to keep up early and closed full of run.

Dear Al:

Friends of Matt Smart, and he had many around the nation's tracks, were shocked to learn of the death of the trainer yesterday. Smart lived up to his name as a conditioner of horses and rose from the ranks to become trainer for Samuel Ross, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, H. P. Metcalf and others. The last time I saw him, he sat with his son bidding on horses at the Vanderbilt sale. He had big plans for 1941, he told me. Smart was a credit to racing and to his race. Two of the finest wrist watches ever awarded in Hialeah's annual jockey race have arrived from Switzerland, and are on display in the jockey room. Each is valued at $900 and will be given to the leading jockey and leading apprentice at the end of the meeting. They are not only of the split second type but contain the stop watch feature such as used in talking time out at football games. Don Meade and Wendell Eads are leading the veterans and apprentices, respectively, for the valuable prizes. Among the distinguished visitors is Mrs. Herbert O'Conor, wife of the Governor of Maryland. Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fallon, parents of Jockey Leo (Skinny) Fallon, arrived from Baltimore, Md., to spend a three week vacation in Miami and renew old acquaintances at Hialeah. Jockey Conn McCreary, who has rdiden nine winners at Hialeah and is the second leading pilot in the apprentice division, was forced to cancel all mounts yesterday. McCreary injured his knee slightly last Monday astride Chance King in the eighth race. He expects to return to the saddle tomorrow. Fourteen different sires have sent out juvenile winners in the first 17 days of racing at Hialeah. Hal Price Headley's Pharamond II is the only sire to have two different winners of the 3 furlong dash over the Nursery Course. The 16-year-old stallion sired Irish Ivy and On Parole. Treemontier, winner of two races thus far, is by Hecla. Starweista, the only other double winner, is by Zacaweista. BILL.

First race—Bellcoda will be making the first start of her career and is said to be a good one. True Heart turned in a good second last out and is ready for a good effort. Bolute was third in that last.

Second race—Hand and Glove seems to have a lock and key on this purse. Drops back to maiden company and needs only the right handling. Juanita was tipped last out and may be better than generally rated. Ethel Blume was second in good company.

Third race—Silent Witness gave Bow Low a nice battle recently and with that one not in action today I look for Silent Witness to take it all. Mary Schulz gets a good figure. Al Au Feu to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Town Boy won and then came back with a fair race. Seems well placed in this field and Anderson will do the riding. Corydon comes back after a rest and could be prominent off good works. Ringle may cause an upset.

Fifth race—Royal Man carries top top weight of 120 pounds in this, but I'm inclined to string along with him. The distance is right. Equistone won last out and is a threat. No Sir is improving.

Sixth race—Joe Schenck will appreciate the small field in this and may take the major share of the purse. Both Clyde Tolson and The Chief are fit ones, but I'm leaning toward the top fellow.

Seventh race—Dark Phaona is dropping down and may be the right one in this rather open affair. Breaks off the rail and should make the most of the position. Fore Isus and Cordate for the place and show.

Eighth race—Wise Will has turned in a couple of good races and promises to do a lot of running in this field. Pelsun was fourth last, but is ready to show speed. Gourmet won over the track.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Hallie, High Blame and Chicharra.

Best bet—Town Boy.

U. S. Steel Net In Year Soars To 102 Million

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 28.—United States Steel Corporation today reported net income in the December quarter of $32,763,251, equal to $3.04 a common share, compared with $28,729,177, or $2.38 a share, in the final quarter of 1939, and $33,103,067, or $3.07 a share, in the September quarter of 1940. A dividend of $1 a share was declared on the common, the same amount paid on December 20, September 20 and April 26 last year.

For 1940, the corporation's net profit was $102,181,321, or $8.84 a common share, the largest since 1930, compared with $41,119,934, or $1.83 a common share, in 1939.

Pension Charge Cited

The corporation announced that in the final 1940 quarter a charge of $6,969,318 was made against earnings for pension payments for the full year. This sum was equal to approximately 80 cents a common share.

The dividend is payable March 20 to stock of record February 20.

The corporation operated at 93.3 per cent of capacity during the fourth quarter compared with 84.3 in the final 1939 quarter. For the year 1940, operations averaged 77.3 per cent compared with 59.3 in 1939.

The corporation reported its total tax bill in the final 1940 quarter was $22,548,130 compared with $21,716,485 in the comparable period a year ago. The total tax bill for 1940 was $85,294,204 compared with $67,017,086 in 1939.

The net income for 1940 of $102,181,321 was the best since 1930 when it totaled $104,421,571, equal to $9.12 a common share.

The corporation reported its pay roll now was running at the annual rate of $492,000,000 compared with the previous high of $432,000,000 in 1937. The pay roll in 1929 totaled $420,000,000. Last year it amounted to $438,621,292.

Priorities Need Unseen

Irving S. Olds, chairman, expressed the opinion that present steel capacity was adequate for normal civilian needs, the requirements of defense and exports to the British Empire. He said he believed an increase in working hours beyond the 40 hours weekly now in effect would not produce a greater amount of steel.

Olds said the corporation has on its order books approximately 4,500,000 tons of ingots or about three months' normal shipments.

"Our direct Government business is about 5 per cent of the total," he said.

"Exports form about 15 per cent of our output on a dollar basis, although they were less in the fourth quarter than the average for the year."

Olds would not estimate what portion of total business was for Great Britain.

In regard to the capacity of the industry Olds commented:

"The rated capacity of the steel industry is 84,000,000 tons of ingots annually, and approximately 2,500,000 tons of new capacity now is under construction.

"As far as we know, 20,000,000 tons ought to be sufficient to take care of national defense and export needs. That leaves 64,000,000 tons for ordinary domestic uses."

Olds said he did not believe a system of priorities for national defense needs was necessary at present.

"I don't know of any bottlenecks that require priorities now," he asserted.

Regarding steel prices for the second quarter Olds said: "We hope that increased costs will not make it necessary to increase prices. If we have wage increases, it might mean a boost in prices. Wages are a very important part of steel costs."

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and subsidiaries today reported a net profit of $10,277,029 for the year ended December 31, 1940, the largest profit since the company earned $20,848,748 in 1929.

The 1940 total compared to a net profit of $3,188,944 for 1939 and $9,093,287 in 1930, previously the best year since 1929.

Net profit in the fourth quarter of 1940 was $4,044,126 against $2,907,755 in the corresponding period of 1939.

Commonwealth & Southern

Commonwealth & Southern Corporation in a preliminary report for the year ended December 31 showed net income of $15,048,510, equal to $8.70 a share on the $6 cumulative preferred stock, on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends of approximately $18 a share. After annual dividend requirements on the preferred stock the balance was equal to 12 cents a share on 33,673,327 shares of common stock.

For 1939 the company reported net income of $13,413,636, or $8.94 a share on the preferred and 13 cents a share on the common.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Wheat sagged again today when it became apparent that weather conditions were ideal throughout most of the soft winter wheat belt.

Selling pressure was not heavy, but there always was enough wheat for sale to offset any enthusiasm for the buying side. Prices had a downward trend most of the day, except for a transient rally around noon which saw prices slightly above Monday's close.

At the close, wheat was ⅛@¾ lower than yesterday's finish: May, 84@84⅛; July, 78¼@78⅛; Corn, ⅛@½ down; May 62⅞; July, 63; oats, unchanged to ⅛ off.

Discouraging to the market also was the continued absence of purchases by milling interests. "There's too much free wheat floating around for the millers to take any chances," said a trader. "They are buying on a hand-to-mouth basis because they feel certain that there will be little change in the immediate situation."

Stocks React, Work Irregularly Lower; Big Over-Counter Deals Dampen Spirits

New York, Jan. 28.—Early rising momentum faded from the stock market today and closing prices were irregularly lower by fractions to a point or so.

In the forenoon buying of steels, rails and industdial specialties propped the list. There was no follow-through, however, and in the final hour the trend turned downward.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off 0.2 of a point at 43.6. The relapse came after yesterday's advance of 0.1 the second upturn in the composite since January 10. Volume expanded at times and transfers totaled 487,730 shares against Monday's turnover of 357,920, smallest since September 16.

While business remained encouraging, brokers said, lack of inspiration from the war news or Congressional activities served to keep many potential buyers in the waiting van.

Attention centered mainly on the U. S. Steel meeting after the conclusion of the session. Directors declared a dividend of $1 a share on the common, the same as paid in April, September and December last year, and reported net earnings for the final quarter of $3.04 a share. Net would have been around $3.84, it was revealed, had not the company deducted the full year's pension payments of nearly $7,000,000 from the last quarter's profits. With this deduction, the full year's net was placed at $8.84 a share, best since 1930, compared with $1.83 in 1939. The common shares, up most of the day, ended unchanged at 67⅛.

Over-the-counter sales of stocks continued to take much of the wind out of the "big board," blocks of 92,700 shares of Standard Oil of Kentucky and 6,000 shares of General American Transportation being offered for private purchase off the exchange after the close.

Not so cheering also was the announcement two stock exchange seats had changed hands at $30,000 each, equaling the recent 41-year low for memberships.

Pa. Bell Telephone Ordered to Cut Rates

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 28 (AP).—The Public Utility Commission today ordered the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania to revise its tariff in order to resduce rates amounting to $1,400,000 a year, effective March 1.

The commission said this action would conclude its inquiry into the telephone rates, started on May 31, 1938. Commissioner Thomas C. Buchanan dissented, saying that while he favors the reduction he thinks "the amount is too small, and I object to closing the case."

The company has agreed to make the reduction, the P. U. C. said.

Boston Wool

Boston, Jan. 28 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Fine territory wools were receiving a few inquiries, but very little business was being transacted on the Boston Wool Market today. Clothing and short French combing length, fine territory wools in original bags, received bids in the range 94 to 95 cents, scoured basis. Most of the sales in this market were of fine and half-blood wools of foreign origin. Both spot foreign wools and wools offered for import were receiving an active demand at firm to strong prices.

London Stocks

London, Jan. 28 (AP).—The securities market overcame early irregularity today and closed on a rising note.

British government bonds led the shift in trend and closed with gains ranging to ¼ point. Heavy tax payments and prospects of additional taxes in the next budget, have weighed on this group in the last week or two.

In the foreign bond market Belgian 4s rose smartly and several other European issues attracted attention.

Resources of members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League reached a new record peak of $157,550,230 on December 31, 1940, according to the monthly report of Secretary F. Willson Camp. The new level is $2,000,000 higher than the previous record on November 30, 1940, and $16,053,919 more than on December 31, 1939.

Addresing the luncheon meeting yesterday in the Raleigh Hotel, Mr. Camp stated that more than $4,000,000 was put into mortgage loans during December, or about $1,110,000 more than in the same 1939 month. Of this total, nearly $2,800,000 was for construction of new homes. Real estate loans now outstanding aggregate $148,737,039.

Surplus and reserve of members also reached an all-time high of $11,000,000 as of the yearend.

Martin A. Cook, chairman of the annual banquet committee told the members that the 1941 edition will be held at the Mayflower Hotel on March 8 with an estimated attendance of 550. Assisting Cook as vice chairman will be Rudolph W. Santelmann. Chairman for the various sub-committees will be named later, according to Cook.

U. S. Gold Imports Still Subnormal

By the Associated Press

Gold imports rose to $21,577,682 in the weew ended January 22.

The Commerce Department said the figure, although about five times the size of the preceding week, was still far below the average in recent months. The preceding week figure of $4,152,581 was the lowest in two and a half years.

Last week's rise was due to somewhat larger British Empire shipments including $10,332,827 from Australia, $7,625,466 from Canada, and small amounts from other empire countries.

The only other large shipment was $1,992,511 from the Philippine Islands.

McKesson Net Estimated at $2.71 a Share

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 28.—William J. Wardall, trustee of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., drug concern, testified in Federal Court today that estimated earnings for 1941 would yield substantial dividends on proposed new common stock.

Wardall, appearing in support of a proposed reorganization plan, told Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe that if the estimated earnings were realized, a dividend of between $2.71 and $2.77 a share would accrue, depending upon the amount of taxes that would be assessed.

He said assets were valued under the plan at $76,900,000 and that of this, present preference stockholders would have an equity in $34,327,000 and common stockholders about $9,000,000. The rest would represent the equity of present bondholders and creditors.

Deere & Co.

Deere & Co. reported net income for the fiscal year ending October 31 totaled $12,171,778 compared with $7,627,355 in 1939. Net sales totaled $84,014,688, an increase of almost 20 per cent compared with 1939. Earnings in 1940 were equal to aproximately $3.33 per common share after preferred dividends, compared with $1.89 the previous year.

SEC Concludes Arguments for Multiple Trade

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission concluded the evidence yesterday in a hearing on multiple trading with statistics showing that the volume of trading in securities handled by the New York Stock Exchange was 76.7 per cent of the total volume of 11 principal exchanges in the country.

The hearing is to determine whether the SEC should order the New York Stock Exchange to rescind its rule which prohibits its members who also are members of regional exchanges from trading on the latter exchanges in securities which are listed also in New York.

The statistical data was submitted by Raymond Vernon, financial analyst for the SEC. They showed that in 1929 the New York Exchange volume was only 62.1 per cent of the total.

Timothy Pfeiffer, New York Exchange counsel, objected to submission of the statistical data unless it was shown precisely why they were being entered as evidence.

Gerhard A. Gesell, SEC counsel, then said that he felt that the subdivisions relating to the manner, method and place of soliciting business and to odd lot purchases and sales, clearly were related to the proceedings, but that it might later be shown that some other subdivisions had a bearing on the hearing.

Pfeiffer objected to one line in a table which combined the trading value of the New York Stock Exchange with that of the New York Curb Exchange, on the ground that the combination was misleading and "wholly unnecessary." He said that the purpose "would seem to be to have the New York volume larger than it should be in a proceeding involving only the New York Stock Exchange."

Embassy to Receive Net Star

Woman Ace Will Meet Lady Halifax

Alice Marble, U. S. No. 1 Woman Player, Also Invited; Two Meet Friday Night

Mary Hardwick, Great Britain's No. 1 tennis player, who will meet glamorous Alice Marble, world's champion, in a profession match at Ritchie Coliseum of the University of Maryland Friday night, will be feted by Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, at the British Embassy tomorrow afternoon.

Arrangements were completed yesterday to have Miss Hardwick, and also Miss Marble, be the guests of Lady Halifax at tea—the first to be received by the wife of the new British Ambassador since coming to this country a few days ago.

Lady Halifax and Lord Halifax are said to be tennis enthusiasts, and it was said at the Embassy yesterday that Lord Halifax may be able to see the distinguished players for a few minutes. A number of members of the embassy plan to attend the matches in a special party.

Both Lord and Lady Halifax saw both Miss Marble and the British girl play numerous times at Wimbledon in international competition. Miss Hardwick was the first girl to defeat Helen Wills Moody in 11 years.

Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick also are to be the guests of Mrs. Roosevelt at a White House luncheon tomorrow.

The professional troupe, which includes Big Bill Tilden and Don Budge, will move on to Philadelphia tonight for the thirteenth match of the Coast-to-Coast series. The feminine stars will arrive here Thursday morning, while Tilden and Budge will not reach town until late in the afternoon.

Promoter Eddie Bean has set 8:15 as the starting time and Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick will play their match first. Then will follow the Budge-Tilden set-to and after that the mixed doubles in which Tilden and Miss Marble will face Budge and Miss Hardwick.

Tickets are on sale at The Hecht Co., American Automobile Association, Lowe and Campbell, The Sport Center and University of Maryland.

Other seeded players also moved into th ethird round.

Winners Listed

Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., defeated Malcolm McAllister, of Miami, 6—1, 6—1. Elwood Cooke, of New York, whipped George Pero, of the University of Miami, by the same scores. Found: Champion Optimist, Md. RingCommissioner

By the Associated Press

Scherr telegraphed Promoter Mike Jacobs yesterday, saying:

"Allow me to offer the Baltimore Municipal Stadium for the return bout between Red Burman and Joe Louis, as per agreement in contract that Burman will give Louis a return crack at the title after the Friday night fight in Madison Square Garden. You may be assured of our complete cooperation in this matter."

The local attitude is reflected in the betting—even money that Burman won't be around for the fifth round and no wagers at all on the outcome of the fight.

Cleary Paces Electric Loop With a 391

The Electrical League at Hap Newman's Takoma Recreation drives was paced by H. Cleary, Atlantic Electric, whose 150 game and 391 set were tops for the play, helping his team win high set after a 1,746 pinfall. The Redmon & Brown quintet was best for high game with a 613 count. Atlantic Electric, Cameo Appliance and Fluorescent Planned Lighting won all three from Southern Supply, Graybar and May Hardware, respectively.

SILVER SPRING

Barbara Livingston, Howard Hairdressers, and Dot Workman, Beebee's, were the standouts in the Maryland-D. C. Ladies League at Silver Spring with the former rolling top game of 143 as the latter won the set after a 365 count. National Ale was best for team game with 578 while 1,620 pins won the high set for Sandford's, Inc. The two leaders, Bergmann's Laundry and Shaffer Flowers, tied up together, with the former gaining the odd game to remain in first.

ARCADIA

The Lutheran Church Men's League at Arcadia was led by Dan Eberly, Atonement No. 1, whose 143 top game helped his team to take all the highs with a 586 game and 1,632 set. Rod Roudabush, St. Matthew's, was the high individual set bowler with a 360 count.

The Lutheran Church Ladies at Arcadia were led by Rhoda Hennig, Trinity No. 1, who had 119 for game and 310 for set. The Keller Memorial girls took the team highs with a 493 game and a 1,404 set.

ICE PALACE

The Office Appliance boys at the Ice Palace were led by Hawkes and Johnson, both of the Monroe quintet, who had 140 game and 371 for set, respectively, which helped their mates win high team games with a 592 count. I. B. M. No. 2 knocked over 1,644 pins to win the high set, but lost the odd contest and now are in front by only one game. Royal No. 1 took Royal No. 2 into camp in three straight and the former is tied with A. B. Dick for the second spot.

BROOKLAND RECREATION

LeRoy Henry, Parcel Post, was the big scorer in the Letter Carriers' play at Brookland Recreation with top game and set of 142-385, respectively, which was the reason his team garnered all the highs with counts of 575 for game and 1,677 for the set. The Parcel Post lads also took three games from Friendship with the Woodridge Tigers cheating Ben Franklin in the same manner. You Street still leads the loop.

After Courteau had tallied the first of his two counters in the stanza the Seagulls flung caution to the winds and sent all five men on attack. The result was a scoring opportunity for Washington anytime the puck was intercepted.

McCurry and Courteau both were credited with unassisted goals after grabbing loose pucks and outdistancing pursuing Seagulls in a race for the Atlantic City nets. Courteau's first marker came on a sensational shot from 20 feet out and at a difficult angle after he had barely reached a long pass ahead of Atlantic City's "Whitey" Prokop.

Burrage, Knipfel and McCurry continued their tight defensive work, lightening the burden on Goalie Hemming who was called upon to make comparatively few extraordinary stops.

Becoming sloppy, as was almost inevitable because of its lopsidedness, the match lost its luster in the third period and resembled alley shinny as the Eagles missed numerous shots at an Atlantic City goal left unprotected by the gambling Gulls and were careless in defending their own nets. Still Washington put in a pair of goals as against three by the Gulls and walked off the ice with a victory most humiliating to the cocky re-sorters.

Hemming	Goal	Porter
Burrage	R.D.	Dick
Knipfel	L.D.	Dixon

Wood, Blair Break Par at Phoenix

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 28 (AP).—Craig Wood, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Eduardo Blasi, Buenos Aires, fired sizzling subpar rounds today on the eve of an 18-hole pro-amateur match arranged as a tune-up for the Western Open golf tournament opening here Friday.

Wood played the Phoenix Country Club course with a card of 67, four under par, taking a 33 on the first nine and a 34 after the turn, and Blasi, one of two Argentine golfers touring the winter links trail, turned in a 68.

Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex.; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., and Bud Ward, Spokane, Wash., carded 72's, one over par. Byron Nelson, Toledo, Ohio, shot a 73.

Godoy May Seek Delay in Louis Bout

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 28 (AP).—Arturo Godoy, Chilean heavyweight who is scheduled to fight World Champion Joe Louis for the third time at Los Angeles, Calif., April 15, said today that he might ask for a postponement of the title bout.

Godoy, who has just returned from a long tour in the southern part of Chile, said he had received information from New York that the bout had been set for April. He said, however, that he believed he needed a longer rest from the ring, partly because of the death of his mother and a recent operation which his wife underwent.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 28. (AP)—Fred Snite, Jr., self-styled "Boiler Kid," attended his wife's 26th birthday party at the Surf Club tonight and participated in all of the festivity except the dancing.

Mrs. Snite, the former Teressa Larkin, bore the "Boiler Kid" a son last May.

Mrs. Bankhead To Get Truett's Job, Capital Hears

A Federal official is due to be "kicked upstairs" so that his job may be taken by the widow of Speaker William B. Bankhead, it was learned yesterday.

Randle B. Truett, supervisor of national monuments and historic sites in the District, is expected to yield that post to Mrs. Bankhead and be transferred to a better one. The actual appointments have not yet been made nor Truett's new job divulged.

The House Speaker's widow, who is a painter and sculptor, will supervise the Lincoln House and Museum, Lee Mansion, Lincoln Memorial and other Capital shrines in her new position.

5:15 p. m., WINX—The Howard Theater's new sepia revue, "Tan Manhattan" boasts a score of promise by Embie Blake and Andy Razaf. The tunes are ASCAP-owned and six of them will be aired this afternoon by members of the cast.

7:30, WINX—Rebroadcast of last Saturday's ASCAP on Parade!

8, WJSV—Contrary to previous announcements over the air, Edward G. Robinson will not be present at the Birthday Ball celebrations here tomorrow evening and consequently will not "bother" to come down to Washington for his "Big Town" broadcast.

9, WRC—Two noted theatrical folk put in an appearance, one with trade-mark, the other without. Eddie Cantor's banjoe-eyes are something he's never without, but no one guarantees that Dorothy Lamour will show up in her sarong when she drops in on Eddie's program.

9, WJSV—Betcha don't know what Pogonotomy is? We had to look it up, but, with Fred Allen, we think you ought to do the same yourself. Or else hear all about it on Fred's program. Whee!

10:15, WJSV—Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the America First Committee, speaks out in opposition to further aid to Britain.

10:45, WOL—"Resolved: that a permanent union of the United States and the British Commonwealth should be immediately established." Such is the debate scheduled between National and Marquette Universities.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"Oh—just the usual kind of day—an appendix, a rheumatism, a gallstone, a flu, a bronchitis and a dollar!"

Listen! with Glynn

Edward G. Robinson drops his tough guy roles tonight to join in the nation's drive to raise funds for the war on infantile paralysis.

His "Big Town" radio show which you'll hear over WJSV and the Columbia network at 8 p. m. is a specially written "March of Dimes" story to aid the 1941 Infantile Paralysis campaign.

Just a couple of weeks ago, the California American Legion awarded Robinson a Citation of Honor for his contribution to Americansm through the nationwide broadcasts of "Big Town," in which he portrays the part of a hard-boiled newspaper editor. It was only a few months ago that Robinson was honored by the National Safety Council for his contributions to the cause of safe driving through his radio programs.

How things have changed since the days when Mr. Robinson was known as Public Enemy No. 1, at least in the films!

Tomorrow night, starting at 11:15 and continuing for an indefinite time, WJSV and CBS are bringing you the highlights of Nationwide celebration of the President's birthday at gala festivals, the proceeds from which will be used for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

The President is to make a brief address and there'll be music and entertainment from New York, Chicago, New Orleans, Hollywood and Seattle as well as from the many Washington celebrations.

"I now bid four spades; partner went to six spades and we went down two tricks. What should I have done?"

Since S. E. B.'s partner could not take any better action than three spades over the positive response of three diamonds, S. E. B. should have realized a slam was very improbable and passed.

Big Nondefense Cuts Doubted By Woodrum

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Leaders of the House economy bloc see little hope of effecting any substantial savings in nondefense appropriations this year, it was learned yesterday as the House Appropriations Committee prepared to report today a billion dollar independent offices supply bill.

While cuts have been made in the budgetary estimates wherever possible, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, one of the foremost proponents of economy in the past, indicated there will be no horizontal slashes this year.

Chairman Taylor, who called on President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon, said he expected no general economy moves.

Defense Pressure Felt

Woodrum, who is chairman of the independent offices subcommittee, explained that the pressure of the national defense armament program is being felt in all executive departments.

"We won't be able to make much headway this year in cutting below budget estimates," he said. "The Budget Bureau has done a pretty thorough job already, however."

Many independent agencies, like the Civil Service Commission, are requesting more funds than last year because of the extra work they have been put to serving the national defense agencies.

Veterans' Fund a Factor

The 1942 independent offices bill is understood to have been cut from 12 to 15 million dollars under budget estimates. It is approximately $118,000,000 under last year's appropriation due to absence of several substantial emergency funds allowed in 1940.

A factor which makes any large slash in the independent offices appropriation difficult is that it carries approximately $600,000,000 in veterans' benefits. These actually have increased by about $27,000,000 since last year.

Independent Movie Men Disappointed

The nation's independent movie house operators are anything but pleased because the Government is permitting film producers and distributors to continue as large-scale exhibitors as well.

Ending a two-day conference last night, directors of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors said the "weakest and most disappointing feature" of the industry's recent consent decree is the fact that it does not crack down on movie makers who double as movie dispensers.

The decree was signed several weeks ago, shelving—for the time being, at least—a Department of Justice suit against the major producing companies on charges of monopolistic practices.

A resolution adopted by the policy-making directors of an organization representing more than 3,500 independent and small-chain theater operators praised the consent decree for ending blind selling and providing for compulsory arbitration of differences between distributors and exhibitors under certain conditions.

Before adjourning their Carlton Hotel conference, the association's board of directors reelected Col. H. A. Cole president and Abram Myers, of Washington, chairman and general counsel. Charles Olive, of Washington, was reelected secretary and Herman Blum, of Baltimore, financial secretary.

Col. Fleming Denies Overtime Is Inflationary, But Agrees He Misunderstood Sloan

Col. Philip B. Fleming, Wage-Hour Administrator, yesterday apologized "publicly and ungrudgingly" for having misinterpreted the views of General Motors Chairman Alfred P. Sloan on overtime wages, but at the same time he attacked the position on overtime pay of Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the trustees of Brookings Institution.

Speaking before the Catholic Conference on industrial problems in Camden, N. J., Fleming stated that his information did not check with Dr. Moulton's deduction that overtime pay rates contributed to increasing wage costs, which, in turn, were a factor in producing price advances. Dr. Moulton's statements had been made in a recent Brookings Institution publication, "Fundamental Economic Issues in National Defense."

In apologizing to Sloan, Fleming said he had been disturbed by a statement of the industrialist that "the penalty for overtime should be cancelled during the emergency to encouraged a longer work-week." Thinking that Sloan favored expansion of the work-week above the Wage-Hour Act 40-hour statutory maximum, Fleming criticized him in a radio address on January 8.

Further correspondence with Sloan, Fleming explained, revealed that Sloan advocated first "taking up the slack in employment by employing and increasing the hours of work per week to 40." Only when that point has been reached, Sloan wrote, should hours be lengthened without the time and one-half premium wage.

Fleming said he was glad Sloan did not favor repeal of the Wage-Hour Act at this point "where the 40-hour week is doing so much to make employment follow the upward curve of production. Naturally I am gratified to find that he and I are in substantial agreement after all."

Fleming added that there is little complaint against the law from manufacturers, and that most of the "grumbling" comes from "kibitzers on the sidelines."

Among these, he said, was Dr. Moulton's pamphlet which, according to Fleming, "stated that time and a half for overtime would have to be waived if we were going to be prepared for possible war without inflation."

Fleming said his office called Moulton to find the source for the latter's statement that overtime during the World War I had increased wage costs. Dr. Moulton's secretary, Fleming said, volunteered to ask the source, but returned to the telephone to say, "Dr. Moulton says there isn't any source, but it's a fact."

Fleming said his information did not bear out that finding, but in any event, the suggestion is not applicable to the present situation.

Guard to Do Its Bit, Gen. Williams Says

The National Guard of the United States, despite lack of equipment of all sorts, "is eager to do its utmost toward . . . accomplishing its prideful allotted part in the defense of the United States," Maj. Gen. John F. Williams, chief of the National Guard Bureau, told the Secretary of War in his annual report for 1940 released yesterday.

Covering, as it does, the 12 months ended June 30, 1940, the report is outmoded in large measure by recent developments, which have included induction of most of the National Guard into Federal service. In the period covered, Gen. Williams saw the Guard make "substantial gains in training, personnel and equipment."

Cooperation Praised

"This has been accomplished," he said, despite "the discouragements with which units of the Guard have sometimes been faced—inadequacy of equipment and armories, and lack of interest in its specific problems by those in authority." Nevertheless, he said, "the esprit of the Guard has not faltered in the past; and a year of such activity and close consideration as that just ended could hardly pass without a notable rise in the whole morale of the Guard."

In no other peacetime year, Gen. Williams reported, has the National Guard made such progress and this he credited largely to "the cooperation of Congress, the War Department, the States and the many activities of the National Guard itself."

Greater Interest

"The year," Gen. Williams said, "has also been marked by a far deeper general interest in the National Guard than in any previous peacetime year. This interest has been especially evidenced in the press, though many articles that have appeared in the newspapers and magazines of the country have been erroneous or altogether lacking in factual basis. This lack of accuracy has largely been due to haste of preparation combined with a neglect to seek accurate data from the War Department. In some cases, also, criticism and even attack on the National Guard has appeared to be deliberate and biased, and made without the slightest effort to present the facts.

"Destructive criticism has not, it may be added, been entirely confined to nonmilitary sources. Often, however, the increased publicity given to the National Guard has shown a genuine appreciation of its past limitations in equipment and in training time, and of the efforts of the National Guard personnel, and its Regular Army instructors, to attain high standards in spite of such handicaps."

On March 18, the building will be opened to the public and the collections of painting and sculpture donated by Mr. Mellon, Mr. Samuel H. Kress and others will be on exhibition.

Wall Street was in Washington yesterday.

A smoke-blue hearing room at the Securities Exchange Commission held more investment bankers than have ever before assembled in this city for business reasons at one time.

More than 200 well-tailored men, all connected with the gold-tinted investment banking business, sat in wooden armchairs, puffing at expensive cigars.

Reminiscent of NRA Days

Men of great wealth were crossing verbal swords with salaried Government officials in a manner unfamiliar here since J. P. Morgan dandled a midget on his knee, since the wings of the NRA blue eagle could be heard flapping through Government halls where Gen. "Iron-pants" Johnson was fending off "dead cats."

The eleventh-floor SEC room was the scene of an argument between investment houses and the Government over how the handling of new issues of public utility bonds should be regulated.

SEC lawyers were contending that six Wall Street houses monopolized 62 per cent of the bond issues over a 5½-year period, that the privilege of handling the bonds was meted out on a basis of favor and friendship, that those with an "inside track" got the lions' share of profits and the rest only the scraps, that this was "bad" and that it should be corrected by requiring competitive bidding.

In other words, the Government was charging that the investment banking business was a gentlemen's monopoly which should be broken up by forcing the bankers to vie for business like shoe salesmen.

Loud and Suave

To drive home the point, an attorney of the Antitrust Division of the Justice Department watched the proceedings—an ominous sign, to some.

On the other hand, the bankers, sometimes loudly, sometimes suavely, admitted the "monopoly condition," said it was "good," defended the meteing out of issues on a friendship basis, and said that competitive bidding not only would not work but would result in evasion, would injure small investors and would concentrate the underwriting business even more in the hands of a few large firms.

On a raised platform sat four SEC Commissioners: Chairman Jerome Frank and Commissioners Robert E. Healy, Edward C. Eicher and Sumner T. Pike.

A procession of bankers had risen to their feet in two days to defend their opposition to the competitive bidding rule.

But late yesterday came the climax, a high point in the long history of relations between government and business.

Harold Stanley Testifies

Harold Stanley, of the firm of Morgan, Stanley & Co., a former J. P. Morgan partner, took the stand.

Looking every inch like a Scotch Presbyterian minister rather than a Wall Street banker, he calmly told the SEC that "banker domination simply does not exist" in the public securities industry; that anyone who says it does rests his statement "on ignorance or willful misrepresentation;" that people who try to create such an impression are "intent on abolition of private enterprise."

More than 400 of the bankers leaned forward in sympathy in the wooden armchairs as Stanley said that no one house dominates that utility field, that no one dominates his firm and his firm dominates no one.

That during a 5½-year period (January, 1934, to June, 1939) six leading New York bankers managed 62% of all registered, managed bond issues.

That Stanley's own firm has managed 81% of all first-grade, managed, registered bond issues.

That during the 5½-year period no first grade, registered bond issue was managed by a firm located outside of New York City.

Two firms supported competitive bidding—Halsey, Stuart, of Chicago, and Otis & Co., of Cleveland, contending that firms outside New York should have a crack at the first-grade issues.

Their minority arguments brought from Harold Stanley the statement that competitive bidding is favored by two types of people—blind advocates of "decentralization" and by "a small but vocal minority of security dealers who, in their own desire to obtain more business (which is a perfectly understandable motive) are claiming that they should have a right to do business with people who apparently do not want to do business with them, provided they make the highest bid at the auction block."

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

We're living in a land where military secrets leak like a sawdust doll with busted seams.

I pick up most of my imformation in the smoking room of a Pullman car. Every man you meet has a military secret he just heard over the radio, read in a Broadway column or thought up himself.

Just lask week I was coming in from Washington and there was a fellow with his face covered with lather. While we were shaving I told him what Willkie was going to do in London and he seemed much surprised. When he washed all the lather off his face it was Willkie.

Monday I see that Cordell Hull testified in secret with the Foreign Relations Committee. It was behind locked doors with the transoms open, because 50 people have told me exactly what Hull said.

A foreign spy can learn about most anything in a Pullman smoker with lather on his face, provided that he doesn't get it in the ears.

On the way east from Sante Fe last summer I heard a fellow say England had our bomb sight. A couple of months later that was verified. I don't know who the fellow was or what he looked like because he kept lathering his face for 2,000 miles, but never shaved an inch.

That's a new style of espionage. Although the results might be dirty, it is clean work.

Workman Falls In Cinder Hopper And Is Killed

Enoch Clegg, colored, 52, of 406 L Street Northwest, was killed yesterday under tons of cinders at the Hudson Supply & Equipment Co., Seventh and T Streets Northeast, where he was employed as a laborer.

At 10 a. m. Clegg was sent to the top of a 75-foot building to shovel cinders into a hopper, where they were placed by a power shovel.

At 10:30 his foot was discovered protruding from a chute at the bottom of the hopper by Judge Littlejohn, of 1327 Corcoran Street Northwest, his foreman. The power shovel had continued dumping cinders into the hopper.
